BERLIN, July 24.—(By United Press) The Russian soviet government has telegraphed the German government promising that Russian troops will not invade German territory, it was learned tonight.

The Moscow wireless message came after the German government had protested to Victor Kopp, the Russian Bolshevik representative regarding the approach of red troops toward the North German border. Some Russian forces operating against the Poles were reported to have advanced within ten miles of Germany's frontier.

NEW YORK, July 24—Russia's grant of an armistice to Poland brings to an end the possibility of a attempt by the Bolsheviks to carry the war into Germany and inflame Europe.

It is improbable that Bolshevik troops will enter Warsaw, except appointed to adjust the Teschen boundary dispute between Poland and Czechoslovakia, the French foreign minister said in the Paris Press tonight.

The President's note was submitted to the ambassadors yesterday, the foreign office said.

The Allied reply pointed out the question was being settled by methods already approved by both Poland and Czechoslovakia, and explained the difficulty of shifting the negotiations for a plan which would necessitate a completely new start.

FRANCE IS SURPRISED AT WILSON'S MOVE

News of the President's communication, delivered to the council by Hugh Wallace, the American ambassador, first became known today. It caused surprise throughout France. The people here considered that at such a time, they considered their face

WILSON TO MAKE NO COMMENT ON POLISH DEBACLE

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Poles and the Bolsheviks were to cease firing at sundown tonight, according to an official cable to the Polish legation today confirming reports that arrangements had been completed for an armistice.

The place of meeting for the armistice envoys had not been determined until this morning, at the nearest point of the Bolshevik front to Warsaw. Advice to the legation stated that whatever terms are arrived at the Bolsheviks have stipulated that Poland alone is to be concerned and that no interference by any of the former Allied governments will be tolerated.

The Polish minister, Prince Casimir Lubomirski, expressed fear that the Polish and Soviet envoys might be unable to agree upon terms for an armistice, in which case fighting would be resumed. In a formal statement issued tonight, Prince Lubomirski declared that Poland was innocent of aggressive intent in the war, and was merely trying to save herself from destruction.

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, indicated today that the President would make no comment or offer in the present situation.

The plight of Poland which has been obvious about the armistice she was forced to seek as a result of Russian victories, is irremediable, so far as any physical action by the United States is concerned.

This was plainly shown today when the attitude of this government was summed up authoritatively in these words: "If the United States could assist physically, well and good, but pious words and sympathetic platitudes are of no avail."

The expression of this view, following the statement of Secretary Tumulty indicating President Wilson will not comment on the situation, was taken to mean that the request of the Polish minister for a declaration of "moral support" for his government will not be complied with.

It is expected here that the armistice between Poland and Russia will be made permanent on the Russian terms, and that, to some extent, is a victory for the diplomacy of Lloyd George. It is believed that the British premier played the game by exerting all possible pressure on Poland, which was beaten, and Russia, which was advancing to the German boundary lines.

The White House, so far as can be learned, has not expressed itself on the prospective result of the armistice. It is morally certain, however, that the United States will, by diplomacy, seek to protect Poland from any proposed treaty which would make Russia her suzerain.

The White House stands for an absolute independence of Poland, and will take a hand diplomatically—which means word protests—if Great Britain and France and the other Allies should decide not to interfere with the terms of the armistice looking to a treaty of peace that would affect Polish independence.

Russia will naturally impose terms of indemnity on Poland and the ally will insist that these be a priority against loans by the Allies and the United States to Poland. It is also likely that in imposing her terms of peace, Russia will be guided by the plans of the Allies towards Germany when she was forced to agree to indemnities.

As it looks today, the United States interest in the armistice is: What kind of peace will Russia seek to exert from Poland, how can the United States money invested in Poland be secured and will Russia endeavor to dictate such terms as will subordinate Poland into the position of a subordinate state?

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24.—John I. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, tonight predicted an immediate shutdown of all mines in the central competitive field if a settlement is made in Illinois which modifies the basic interstate agreement.

The present situation in the Illinois coal fields is directly chargeable to the lamentable murder of the United States Bituminous Coal Commission, which, in its majority report, failed to provide adequate compensation for certain classifications of mine workers, Lewis said. This award was affirmed by President Wilson over the protest of the national officers of the United Mine and render void the peace treaty so laboriously drawn up at Versailles. The world has now freed itself from the shackles of war and now faces an infinitely greater problem, one official at the foreign office declared. Germany must get to work and fulfill the treaty after Russia must work out numerous industrial and financial problems and other nations have internal troubles which can now be turned to with spirit of freedom from military obligations heretofore impossible.

FINES ACTION NEAR ON ARMISTICE TERMS. It was believed the armistice would become effective in a short time, as the Bolsheviks are in conflict with the Poles almost all along the front. These preliminary negotiations would be handled by the military command which a general peace conference will be held to fix the boundaries of the two countries. Moscow informed the British government that Poland has asked the Bolsheviks direct for peace the Poles would obtain better results than otherwise obtainable. It was promised the Polish frontier will be more favorable to Poland than that fixed by the allies in the peace treaty.

Grodno, eighty miles from Vilna, on the railway from Petrograd to Warsaw, has been mentioned as the probable location for the Polish-Bolshevik peace conference. The Soviets have already refused the British offer that they hold the conference in London.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A Communist plot for the overthrow of the government of Latvia is reported to have been uncovered at Riga, according to advices to the state department today. The alleged conspirators are reported to have been taken into custody.

Special Cable Despatch. PARIS, July 24.—Peace in Europe will be retarded at least one year by the Russo-Polish conflict even if the allied statesmen should succeed in keeping the great powers from being involved in military operations on a large scale.

Such is the consensus of opinion in diplomatic circles in Paris. It can be further stated that America has been urged to exert its influence here and in London as possibly the only chance to prevent the complications likely to ensue from wholesale bloodshed.

Should America officially declare a ban on trade with Russia until after the Soviets have concluded peace with Poland, it is believed here that Moscow government would desist from its apparent present policy and for all time by dictating armistice and peace terms in Warsaw.

WOULD MAKE U. S. PARTNER IN BLOCKADE. Americans here, however, who realize that such a measure on the part of the Washington government would automatically make America a partner in the blockade of Russia, and thus hopelessly entangle her probably forever in whatever conflict Europe's diplomacy is hatching or will hatch in the future.

Any measures the allies may take, such as sending war material and financial assistance to General Wrangel and other anti-Bolshevik leaders, suspension of the Anglo-Russian negotiations for the negotiation of trade, or other moves of that sort, would not only be altogether inadequate but would only be apt to add fuel to the smoldering fire and the sure to intensify the danger to world peace, observers here agree.

The suggestion of intervention by the League of Nations is ridiculed on all sides by statesmen who realize that it is utterly futile to invoke the help of a purely red-tape machine which failed to prevent Poland's aggression against Soviet Russia, which has conjured up the present crisis.

REPORT TO INFLUENCE AMERICA IS SEEN. The choice of Ambassador J. P. Morgan as a member of the French mission to Poland is interpreted as emphasizing the desire of the allied statesmen to influence America's course in the present international situation.

In this connection it is rumored that M. J. Morgan will not return to his embassy in Washington, at least not so long as President Wilson is in office.

It was confirmed that General Weidner, Marshal Foch's chief of staff, will take control of the Polish army's reorganization immediately on his arrival in Warsaw. He will completely overhaul the Polish general staff in accordance with Marshal Foch's plan.

For his part, despite Premier Lloyd George's speech in the House of Commons, considerable doubt is entertained by diplomats here concerning the possibility of a settlement.

Murder business of commission men. Lower food costs. Elimination of trade, and establishment of a system of co-operative marketing. The body of the "skelton plot" was to be filled in by a committee of seven, to draft a proposition for submission to a meeting of the group to be held next January. Representatives of the Federal Trade Commission and the United States Department of Agriculture were expected to become members of the proposition building committee.

Workers and in violation of the pledges of the United States Government that justice would be rendered the miners.

ing the pretended "agreement" between the foreign offices of France and Britain on the policy toward the Soviets.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE NOT IN AGREEMENT. Britain, it is asserted in well-informed quarters, still insists upon the necessity of recognizing the Mon-cow regime as quickly as possible while Premier Millerand continues to blockade British efforts in this direction by the reiterated declaration that France will not negotiate with the Soviets until they have acknowledged the czar's debts to France.

The fact that the last British note to Moscow was addressed "to the Soviet government of Russia"—the first time this official title was used in a British document—is interpreted here as virtual recognition.

With the whole social fabric of Europe collapsing, veteran observers here declare that the biggest moment of the century is at hand, bigger by far in its bearing on the peace of the world than was the fatal moment nearly six years ago when the world war broke out.

LONDON, July 24.—A despatch from Paris tonight said the Russian forces were falling back along the entire Polish front.

The Red troops, according to this despatch, were ordered to take up a line running through Grodno, Pinsk and Lutsk.

At Tschicherin, the Bolshevik foreign minister, in his message to Prince Sapieha, the Polish foreign minister, proposing the armistice, said:

"The Russian Soviet government has ordered the supreme commander of the Red armies to commence immediately negotiations with the Polish army for concluding an armistice and appearing for future peace."

"The Russian commander will advise the Polish commander of the place and date for beginning the negotiations."

MILITARISTS OF CHINA TOTTER; MONEY BIG NEED

By CHARLES E. HOGUE
United Press Staff Correspondent
PEKING, July 24.—Five million dollars, mislaid and forgot several years ago, has turned up and been placed in the treasury of the republic of China at the very time it was experiencing the worst financial pinch of its experience.

The money had been deposited in the Russo-Asiatic Bank here by the Imperial Board of Education, long since out of existence, in the days of the Manchurian dynasty. Officials of the republic did not know they had the money at hand until the bank inquired about its disposal.

Not that $5,000,000 is a drop in the bucket in China's tottering government. It is a sum that is a mere trifle to a nation that is running behind in its economy at a rate of $7,000,000 a month. But its discovery gives an indication of the financial methods in vogue in Peking today.

HU PARTY IN DANGER
The regime of President Hu and the militarist party, governed by a clique known as the Anfu Club, is in serious danger of being overthrown. Unless the Government comes to the rescue of the treasury with an enormous loan, this seems now to be almost certain to happen. The report of Thomas W. Lamont, who recently conducted a personal investigation of Chinese financial affairs, is awaited anxiously.

What will be the consequences if the militarists are ousted is probably not far from the truth. The First Vice-President of China and a leader of the anti-militarists, declares the salvation of not only the Far East but other countries as well depends upon the elimination of militarism. In a recent interview he urged "organize China for peace, not war," and pointed out the menace of making a military nation of the people who are greatest numerically in the world.

NOT SAFE WITH LOAN
In the meantime, even if the Government loan is granted, it is probable that the downfall of the militarists is not impending. The conditions of such a loan, as outlined by Lamont, include not only non-militarism but foreign supervision of the expenditure of the money. This means that the Fuchuan, military governors of the provinces, will be robbed of their power, based on their control of their individual armies which are now being paid from money collected by "squeeze" from the people.

That the financial stringency of the government is intense can be seen from the fact that teachers in government schools went on strike recently because they had not received their pay. In some government departments the underlings have not been paid for nine months and their last salary was in the form of new government notes which none of the banks or traders would accept.

Give Up Elk Teeth?

No Siree, John Says
HARRISBURG, Pa., July 24.—Rather than give up the teeth which he admits having extracted for a bad elk, John Larn, of Mt. Pocono, is going to fight his case in court. Officials of the state game commission claim the teeth, which bring good prices when sold for watch chains.

According to the story told before the magistrate where Larn was tried, the elk was struck by a passenger train after it had escaped from a state preserve. The carcass was so badly mangled as to be unfit for food. Larn found it and helped himself to the teeth. He was fined $200. He asked for a continuance of the case and says he will fight it in court. Meanwhile he refuses to settle by giving up the teeth.

"Coal" Is Inspected; Found Mostly Stone

PARIS, July 24.—As a result of complaints by Versalles manufacturers, the coal office has examined two barges of English coal from Havre. Its report states that the coal, which sold at a maximum import price, is composed of 80 per cent stone, 10 per cent earth, and 10 per cent dust. The exporters declare that it is composed of 80 per cent coal, 10 per cent earth, and 10 per cent dust.

Cinema 'Doomed'—For a Day Stars Will Shine Here Tomorrow

MARY THURMAN, noted screen player, former Sennett bathing beauty and now leading woman in film drama, who will be here tomorrow in the movie revue.

Final arrangements were completed yesterday for the parade Monday on the occasion of First National Day which will serve as a greeting to the visiting motion picture stars and entertainment for visitors from surrounding cities. It will be divided into three divisions, military, civic and theatrical. Captain H. C. Stone, who managed the parade in Philadelphia in 1914 when 183,000 took part, will be chief marshal. The units will form in the vicinity of Thirtieth and Telegraph.

Representatives of the navy, army and marines will compose the military division and will have more than 1000 men in line. The police section also will march in military formation. The division will form on Orchard street under the direction of Captain G. E. Price.

The civic division, under C. H. Chase, will form on Telegraph, north of Thirtieth street. The Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' Exchange, Art Club, Rotary Club, Lions Club, Elks and other organizations with the fire department also will be in this division.

STARS COME IN HERE
The third division will be under T. W. Reese and will form on Telegraph, west of Thirtieth. It will contain Mayor Davis, presidents of the various clubs, Cal Ewing and President W. E. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast League, the visiting movie stars and the Oaks.

The concluding unit will be the general public.

An escort of honor will be a feature of the star section of the parade with Community Service girls in white accompanying the visitors. Boy Scouts, in uniform, will carry banners identifying the stars.

WILL STOP INDUSTRY
The Oakland Chamber of Commerce sent the following wire to the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce: "Los Angeles started something big when it launched the motion picture industry, but Oakland is going to stop it. For thirty-six hours we are going to see that not a camera crank turns in your city. The occasion will be First National Day in Oakland next Monday, July 26, when the entire city will take a holiday to pay its respects to the stars of your film firmament. We congratulate Los Angeles on providing us with this opportunity through its leading industry and assure you that the world-wide fame you have won thereby is a source of gratification to us as Californians."

TRUNK MYSTERY IDENTIFICATION HOPE IS DASHED

DETROIT, July 24.—Hope of establishing a definite link between the death trunk, in which the nude body of a woman was discovered in New York yesterday, and the mysterious couple who lived here at 105 Harper avenue, was dashed tonight.

Mrs. Lottie Brooks, wife of the building janitor, failed to make positive identification of either the trunk or clothing it contained.

Mrs. Brooks told detectives who questioned her that the trunk "appeared like" the one shipped by "L. L. LeRoy" from the building about June 17, but that she could not be positive about it. She said a hat found in the trunk looked like one worn by "Mrs. LeRoy," and that a blanket also found in the trunk was similar in size and quality to those used in the apartment building. That was as far as she could go.

Doubt was cast on the theory that the victim was an Italian girl named Katherine Dan of Canonsburg, Pa., although authorities at Washington, Pa., have wired that they are of the opinion that it was the Dan girl who was murdered.

ANALYSIS FAILS
NEW YORK, July 24.—Medical examination today failed to find any trace of poison or anesthetic in the brain of the girl found dead in a trunk here. As there were no other organs left in the body, hope of an chemical analysis elixir has been given up.

Efforts were under way tonight to find a South American. An expressman named Branick gave the police a letter he had received from Detroit asking that the expressman get and hold a trunk to be shipped June 10. At the same time Branick told of the South American, for whom, he says, he did some work and who, after trouble at Coney Island, went to Detroit using a name which, according to Detroit reports, was given by the man suspected of having shipped from Detroit.

Several months ago, Branick said, he received a letter from the South American asking that he send a trunk then held in care of the Y. M. C. A. at Detroit, saying that he was living there. Payment of storage and express charges was contained in the letter. The trunk was forwarded.

The next word Branick received from Detroit was on June 11, when he received a letter from the South American asking that he send a trunk then held in care of the Y. M. C. A. at Detroit, saying that he was living there. Payment of storage and express charges was contained in the letter. The trunk was forwarded.

Enclosed with the letter was a receipt for the trunk which bore the name of "A. A. Tatum."

CLEW IN PENNSYLVANIA
WASHINGTON, Pa., July 24.—Authorities here were convinced tonight that the body of the young woman found in a trunk in New York was that of Katherine Dan, an Italian girl, who formerly kept a rooming house in Canonsburg, near here.

Aldred Palafronti was held by officials here on a white slave charge, in connection with the disappearance of the Dan girl.

ing with the party managers, who are said generally to be in sympathy with his gubernatorial aspirations, and it is shrewdly figured that it will strengthen him with the rank and file of voters among whom there was a good deal of Hoover sentiment in New York State.

Connecticut Democrats were greatly disappointed, according to a despatch from Hartford, because Governor Cummings was not retained as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and it is indicated that he probably will be nominated for the Senate, in opposition to Senator Frank B. Brandegee, who will be on the Republican ticket as a candidate for re-election. The Democrats contend that Connecticut is at least a doubtful State, but there are no surface indications of Republican disaffection, and in normal years Connecticut goes Republican. The same situation apparently exists in other New England States, where despatches indicate the hard-core Coolidge ticket, at month after the convention, generally is regarded as acceptable, even if it has not yet aroused any intense enthusiasm.

DEMOCRATS TROUBLE
In Massachusetts it seems to be the Democrats who are having troubles; there are four or five candidates for the nomination for governor and a factional feeling is running high.

A somewhat peculiar situation in Washington State is indicated in a despatch from Tacoma. Republicans out there want to make prohibition the leading issue because Washington sentiment is very "dry" and they believe they have the better of that argument. Democrats, on the other hand, desire to ignore the liquor question and conduct the campaign with the League of Nations as the paramount issue. They believe sentiment in the State is overwhelmingly for the Wilson league.

From Montgomery comes the report that in Alabama, and "several other Southern States, the Republicans are preparing to conduct a sure enough campaign, just as though they thought they had a chance to capture some Southern electoral votes. Headquarters are being opened in the principal cities and complete State organizations effected. Every effort is to be made to prevail on Candidates Harding and Coolidge to tour the South.

Western Steel Rate Plea Is Turned Down

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The Federal Trade Commission this afternoon dismissed the application of the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers for the issuance of a subpoena to compel the United States Steel corporation and others. The application charged that the use of Pittsburgh as a basic point in fixing steel prices acted as a discrimination against the fabricators of steel in Chicago, Duluth, Birmingham and other points.

Clean-up of Bootlegging in Capital Planned by Officials.

By Universal Service.
WASHINGTON, July 24.—The national capital is going to be introduced to the Eighteenth Amendment.

Prohibition Commissioner Kramer let it be known today that his force, augmented by 1000 "friends of prohibition," would conduct simultaneous raids here some day next week in an effort to stamp out bootlegging. He has asked the Metropolitan police force to cooperate.

Whisky has never been more plentiful in Washington than it is now, the prevailing price being from twelve to fifteen dollars a quart.

Wife Slayer Insane, Says Coroner Jury

Man Who Shot Mate in Park Was Former Asylum Inmate.

By United Press.

LEARNED WIFE TO KIDNAP.
VANCOUVER, B. C., July 24.—A coroner's jury today agreed that George M. Robbins was probably insane when he killed his wife, aged 25, last Monday night on a lonely road in Stanley Park.

Mrs. Robbins was a niece of Rev. Father York of San Francisco. Robbins, who is about 30 years of age, had been in an insane asylum, but escaped on June 9 and blamed his wife for having placed him in confinement. Mrs. Robbins and her two children recently attempted to leave here for San Francisco, but United States immigration officials declined to allow them across the boundary.

NEW SERUM IS CLAIMED TO BE PARALYSIS CURE

PARIS, July 24.—A serum obtained from the patient's own blood, is claimed by Professor Odin of the Pasteur Institute, to be a positive cure for all cases of paralysis, locomotor-ataxia and tabes. Dr. Odin has been experimenting on this research for more than seven years, in the course of which he has made more than a thousand experiments. Two hundred and fifty centimetres of blood are taken from the patient's arm, separated into serum and red corpuscles, and a portion of each is treated several times in various temperatures. No drugs nor anaesthetics are used and there is said to be no danger whatever to the patient.

A Hard-Riding, Quick Shooting Avenger, Tom Mix Evens Score With Outlaw Band in Hair-raising Thriller

Daredevil Tom Mix races through gripping drama of the untamed Southwest like cyclone performing hair-raising stunts to wipe out wolfpack that killed his father and devastated border village. All this week at the Kinema.

Intrepid Tom Mix, the most fearless of screen stars, will raise you out of your seat with his death-defying escapades to revenge the death of his father and to save his sweetheart from an unspeakable fate, in his latest thriller, "Desert Love." Wonderful in their atmosphere are the unfenced ranges that form the locale, and the raging battle between the bloodthirsty outlaws and the citizens of the little border town in the dead of the night is an unforgettable sight. The Kinema program also contains an unusual Judge Brown story, "The Discoverers," a new Larry Semon Comedy, Mutt and Jeff and News Weekly, and the Kinema Metropolitan Trio presents a pleasing atmospheric, prologue to the thrilling feature.

King laughter reigns supreme at the Franklin this week in the hilarious society comedy, "Let's Be Fashionable." Douglas MacLean and Doris May, that breezy comedy pair of "28 1/2 Hours' Leave" fame, is featured as a pair of newlyweds with a penchant for smart and speedy society. To ultra-modern, each of them acquires a "harmless" quality, with the result that their matrimonial craft plows through some amusing and squally seas. The situations into which their want-to-be-in-the-swim propensities lead them are ludicrous, and their way out of them is screamingly funny.

The VALUE OF A BOOK

THE sale value of a book depends on the cost of writing, printing, binding and selling it.

The value of its contents may be much or little, according to what it contributes to the public amusement, welfare, or progress.

There are many books; the contents of which are invaluable to the human race, but which are of no value unless their contents are applied in assisting human progress.

It is not what the book contains, it is not what you know—it is what you know and apply that sets an actual market value on your services.

Heald's Business College not only gives you a thorough book knowledge of business—but it also gives you that practical application and experience which enables you to translate your book-learning into doing, into work of value in the business world.

Moslems and Reds Now in League, Says Enver Pasha

By KARL H. VON WEIGAND, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
(Special Cable Dispatch, Copyright 1920, by Universal Service.)
I have just received a remarkable letter from Enver Pasha, the former Turkish war minister, who has not hitherto been directly heard from since he left Germany in an airplane early last April for Moscow, whence, after important conferences with the Soviet leaders, he returned to Turkey to take a directing hand in the nationalist campaign against the Entente.
The letter from the famous Ottoman chieftain who is today one of the most powerful and romantic figures in the Orient, is dated merely "July." The text follows:
"Dear Mr. Von Weigand:
"I have only just learned that you sent a wireless message to me at Moscow. It did not reach me, for reasons which I cannot tell you in a letter.
"Least you should have any regrets that you did not accept my invitation to accompany me on my flight across the border states to Russia. I will say that you were fortunate that circumstances prevented your coming along.
"BENZINE SUPPLY GONE
"Twice our benzine supply was exhausted and forced us to land where we did not want to land. The first time we landed in the outskirts of Danzig. It afforded me considerable pleasure to visit that 'free city' policed by the English.
"My second adventure was that an Englishman, not knowing who I was, probably saved me from death. Kiss me!
"My mission to Moscow was a success.
"I understand that in your radio message to me you asked my views as to the developments of the situation in the Orient. The ball is rolling, nothing can stop it.
"Concern the dream of the British colonial empire in Asia and Egypt. The Mohammedan world is rising to throw off the British yoke. It may take fifteen years, but what matters that in history?
"In some parts there are as yet, only glowing sparks, but in many others the flames are already leaping high. Not all are seen by the rest of the world because the British control communications, and they keep these things concealed from the eyes of the public or let through only a deceptive glimmer.
"It was in March, I believe, that I wrote you the Turks were at the Orient aflame. That was no bluff, no vain boast.
"England's aim in the Orient is the annihilation of Turkey. She wants to make the Turks serfs as she made serfs of the Egyptians. We have accepted her challenge. Word of our acceptance has gone out to every mosque and corner of the Islam world.
"It is no longer Turkey's fight against England, but the Turks' battle is rapidly becoming the war of the Mohammedan world, of which Turkey is the heart, against Britain's yoke.
"Open war, guerrilla warfare, raids by bands and individual attacks—in short, with every means at our command, we will prosecute this war against Britain and her helpers.
"Since the promised justice did not prevail at Versailles, nor at St. Germain, nor at Neuilly, since the British control communications, and they keep these things concealed from the eyes of the public or let through only a deceptive glimmer.

for Robbing House Woman Jails Man

PARIS, July 24.—The attention of pedestrians in a street adjacent to the boulevards was arrested by an altercation between an elderly woman and a young man who continually protested: "But I did not hurt the horse."
A crowd assembled, to whom the woman explained that she had caught the young man pulling out hairs from her horse's tail.
"I wanted the hairs for fishing tomorrow," said the man.
A policeman tried to make peace, but the woman would not accept his mediation and both parties and the horse were taken to the police station.

He Defends Right to Snore; Uses Gun

NEW YORK, July 24.—Promising to return when he was put out for snoring in the back room of John Corrigan's cafe, an unidentified man came back an hour or so after with a pistol and cried, "Hands up!"
The stranger fired once in the general direction of the bartender, the bullet smashing the mirror behind the bar. About a dozen customers ran for the exits and escaped. The stranger grabbed a $10 bill from the bartender's upraised hand and fired a parting shot as he backed toward the door and vanished.

A Statement of Appreciation to the Public by the Retail Meat Dealers' Association of Alameda County

Keenly aware of the inconveniences caused by the difficulties which have existed between the members of this association and the members of Butchers' Union Local 120 for the past few days, we wish to extend our thanks to the general public for their patience during the interrupted service.

With the necessary competent help now secured, an assurance of prompt and efficient service may now be given by the members of this association. Business is now being conducted as usual.

Service as usual

Retail Meat Dealers' Association of Alameda Co.

STATEMENT OF BUTCHERS' UNION LOCAL 120 OF ALAMEDA COUNTY

On July 6th, 1920, a Master Butcher, a member of the Retail Butchers' Exchange of Alameda County, requested a conference between the Master Butchers of Alameda County and Butchers' Union Local 120, on matters at issue in order that some compromise of the difficulties between the two organizations might be arranged.

The committee from the Master Butchers' Association refused to respond to this called conference. Why did the Association refuse such a conference?

On Friday, July 23rd, J. O. Walsh, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, of San Francisco, requested a conference of the Master Butchers' Association. Their reply was that they would be pleased to have a meeting. A committee representing the Building Trades Council, the Central Labor Council and Representative Walsh of San Francisco, waited until 11 p. m. Friday night for the conference to be arranged. The Master Butchers' Association absolutely more regardless of the public's welfare, than their employees have ever been, neglected to keep this appointment with the general committee.

Their attitude at this time and refusal to attend such conference, plainly shows that every statement made to the press of a willingness to compromise, was utterly false.

The Retail Butchers' Association of Alameda County for thirty-five days prior to the strike refused to offer the butcher workmen any reasonable increase in wages.

Why are statements made to the public in the name of the Master Butchers, blaming the union for refusing to have conferences with the Master Butchers' Association?

The Butchers' Union of Alameda County is on record publicly as being willing at all times to have a conference that might lead to an amicable settlement of their controversies.

The butcher workmen of Alameda County have a perfect right to refuse $2.00 a week increase, as they know that that is not sufficient for the average workman to maintain an American standard of living, buy white frocks, aprons, furnish tools and pay for laundry.

It costs the butcher as much to live, buy food, pay rent, buy clothes, doctor bills, dentists' bills and other incidentals as it does any other class of workingmen who are enjoying a much larger wage than he.

During this controversy DO NOT PATRONIZE THE ORIENTAL BUTCHER—He still further lowers the white man's standard of living than what seems to be the desire of the Master Butchers' Association of Alameda county.

KIDDIES WRITE AND GIVE PLAY FOR BLUEBIRD

Oakland tots are charging real money for tickets of admission to their "shows," instead of buttons and pins, and are turning the proceeds over to the Blue Bird Bureau of the Oakland TRIBUNE for those in need. A few days ago a group of little folk inaugurated the custom.

They designed their own costumes, they wrote their own parts, they gave a wonderful show—and presented the entire gate receipts of $2 to the Blue Bird.

The program consisted of songs and dances, a Mother Goose pageant, a dance-play, the Prince's Romance and recitations. The Prince's Romance was written by Janice Edger, 10 years, who was the princess in the play, Dorothy Mathewson, 12, the prince, and Patricia Galup, an extra good fairy.

Others who took part in the entertainment were Herbert Edger, Benjamin Edger, Milton Hagenson, Dwight Logan and Carlton Eggers. The show was staged in the home of Janice Edger, 360 Van Buren street, and the proceeds brought to the Blue Bird yesterday afternoon.

JANICE EDGER, age 10, and DOROTHY MATHEWSON, 12, leaders in the kiddie show for the benefit of Blue Bird relief fund.

Cost Of Living Takes Sudden Drop In South

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 24.—Food prices took a sudden and severe tumble here today—the result of an increasing supply, wholesalers said. Potatoes which yesterday sold for $7 a hundred pounds today sold for $2.75. Onions dropped from $4 to $2.50; lemons from $5.50 to $3.75; oranges, $7.50 to $5.50.

CHICAGO, July 24.—A sifting committee to consider schemes and suggestions for co-operative marketing by producers was appointed today by President J. R. Howard of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Howard said when the committee reports the federation will establish a bureau of co-operation in Chicago to start the plans working. The organization will be able to lower costs to consumers and still insure the producer a good profit, he said.

U. S. CONSUL AT BERLIN REFUSED

BERLIN, July 24.—Though the United States maintains an American Commissioner with a staff of more than a score, unofficially, in Berlin to look after American interests, Washington has turned down Germany's intimation that she would like to send a lone consul as unofficial representative to America to study the situation there preparatory to a resumption of diplomatic relations when America should once declare peace with Germany.

The German government's wish was conveyed as an "intimation" through the "unofficial" official American channels from here to Washington. The American government is alleged to have replied "officially" and very courteously that in view of public sentiment in the United States and the coming political campaign, the government would not like to take the responsibility of granting the German government the privilege of sending an unofficial representative, as long as the "state of war" continues.

The Germans are puzzled and say they cannot understand the attitude taken by Washington in view of the fact that an American commissioner with a staff so large that it has outgrown the embassy building, is in Berlin.

Jack Johnson's Greeting To Be Man With Star

CHICAGO, July 24.—Welcome home plans for Jack Johnson's return to Chicago were completed tonight. They consisted of the appointment of the United States marshal to meet the former heavyweight champion on his arrival tomorrow noon.

Johnson was to be taken to the county jail at Waukegan, Ill., immediately. He will remain there until brought before Federal Judge Carpenter for re-sentencing Monday.

Attempts to obtain Johnson's freedom on bond, pending disposition of the charge of white slavery pending against him for the last seven years, were defeated today. Thomas Carey, former alderman, appeared late today before Lewis Mason, United States commissioner, and proposed to post any bond necessary for the negro's freedom. Mason declared he was without jurisdiction.

District Attorney Clyne reiterated tonight he would fight any move to obtain clemency for Johnson. He declared he had received reports that efforts were to be made to obtain a pardon for the former pugilist, but the government would not countenance such a move.

CAMPAIGN SHIP SET FOR 'HOP OFF'

CHICAGO, July 24.—The Republican presidential campaign was ready tonight for its real 1920 "hop off." Chairman Hays, arriving from a conference with Senator Harding in Marion, Ohio, completed tuning up the machine and said he would be ready to start the "flight" Monday.

"Senator Harding's speech of acceptance pronounced clearly the issues," Hays said. "The response from the country has been gratifying."

Hays met John Vivian of Colorado, national committeeman; Holm Bursom, national committeeman of New Mexico, and other district leaders.

Woman Gives Alarm; Bandits Flee Bank

TACOMA, Wash., July 24.—Bandits entered the state bank at Orting near here, just as the bank was opened for business today, pulled down the window shades and ordered the cashier, W. T. Van Sooy, to "stick 'em up."

A woman bookkeeper made her escape from the bank and gave the alarm. The would-be bandits fled through a rear door, where an automobile was waiting.

Both Parties Favor Private U. S. Marine

DATON, O., July 24.—Republicans and Democrats virtually are "in the same boat" as to America's future merchant marine policy, Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board, said here today just before conferring with Governor Cox.

Both favor a privately owned marine with strict registry regulations so that all vessels may be kept under the American flag, he said.

Michigan Town May Be Summer Capital

BREVORT LAKE, Mich., July 24.—Should Governor Cox, of Ohio, Democratic presidential candidate, be returned a victor in the November elections, Brevort Lake might gain national prominence as the summer capital. Governor Cox has for years owned a summer cottage here, and it is a favorite vacation retreat for the Ohio executive.

BURGLARY CASES HOLD BOARDS IN POLICE COURTS

"Robbers and burglars have been the rule rather than the exception on the police court calendars during the past two or three weeks," said Police Judge Samuel yesterday. "There was never a period in police court during my experience when so many holdup men and burglars have been up for hearing."

Frank Cookley, arrested in San Francisco several days ago by Inspector Harry Orbell, was arraigned on a burglary charge and his detention set for August 3.

Four youths who were arrested by Sergeant James Pullman and Patrolman P. A. Pierce near the Auditorium Wednesday night while they were trying to steal a street car were arraigned on a technical charge of trying to steal an automobile. The police are continuing their efforts to connect the four with several holdups.

Ronald Meyer, Ernest Loeffler and Fred Williams plead guilty to a charge of attempting to steal an automobile, while Roy Ahey pleaded not guilty.

RECRUITERS BUSY FOR BATTERY B

Half the membership necessary for mustering into service Battery B of the 148th Field Artillery has been secured. Following its organization to a minimum strength of 50 men, Battery "B" will be recruited, followed by headquarters company, platoon and regimental headquarters, making Oakland the headquarters for the artillery section of the National Guard of the state.

Captain J. H. Fahy will be the commanding officer of Battery "B," the veteran organization.

Recruiting offices have been established in the club room in the Odd Fellows building at Eleventh and Franklin streets, open from 9 a. m. until midnight.

Next Thursday evening a meeting will be held at the club room to complete enlistments in Battery "B." Former members of the regiment are urged to use their endeavors to bring the battery up to the required strength.

Judge Is "Soured" By Kisses of Gypsies

LINCOLN, Ill., July 24.—If you enter Judge Rudolph's court, here you will find a sign reading: "Kisses forbidden in these precincts." In other words, osculation is taboo in Judge Rudolph's court. The judge, 78 years old, is an exception to the rule "the older they get the gayer they are." He objects to being kissed. It all came about this way. Two gypsy women arrested on a vagrancy charge, acquitted in court, were so overcome with gratitude they insisted on showering him with kisses for his fairness. But thinking it over the next day and evidently displeased with the sensation, Judge Rudolph posted the sign that conclusively indicated where he stands on the issue.

Austrian Boycott of Hungary Tight

PARIS, July 24.—The economic boycott against Hungary is now one hundred per cent effective. All rail-road communications are severed. The last train to pass the boycott frontiers was an American Red Cross relief special loaded with condensed milk, fats and children's clothing for Hungarian hospitals.

The boycott was recently called by the labor extremists of Austria. It is aimed against the reactionary elements in Hungary, who succeeded to power following the downfall of the communist regime under Bela Kun.

Farmer Told How to Combat Alkali

BERKELEY, July 24.—A popular presentation of the alkali problem as it affects the state of California is contained in a new University of California circular issued by the college of agriculture for free distribution to farmers.

"Alkali always tends to menace irrigated agriculture in regions of limited rainfall," the bulletin says. "The present situation is of great importance than its reclamation."

"Alkali finds its way into good and and accumulates in injurious amounts through the use of the ground water level. The application of saline irrigant water."

Advertises for Wife, But Balks at Choice

PEORIA, Ill., July 24.—Alleging Walter Wilson, prominent business man, refused to marry her as agreed, Mrs. Lera L. Steve filed a breach of promise suit asking $10,000 damages. She charged Wilson with advertising for a wife and she answered that her acquaintance ripened into love and she alleges Wilson proposed marriage on June 1 last when the date arrived he declined to wed.

Ye Olden Days

(Data Supplied by Oakland Pioneers)

John S. Gilmore of 362 William street has many interesting recollections of early days in Oakland. It was in the spring of 1863, when at the age of 7 years, he first set foot in Oakland, and the impression made on his young mind was of a fairy land covered with beautiful wild flowers and grand old oak trees, their wide-spreading branches inviting the stranger to stop and rest, and the longer he rested the more loath he was to leave.

Brayton school and the old College of California, which later became the University of California, occupied several buildings scattered along the north side of Twelfth street east of Franklin. Even at this early date Oakland was known as an educational center and many of the students were able to hold its own with the best of them. Teams came from San Francisco and generally went home with the short end of the score to their credit. The Oakland team was known as the Wide Awakes. The spitball, curve pitching and other devices had not been discovered at that date and the poor pitcher was at the mercy of the batter, and unless his teammates were spry the score would run up to 40 or 50 in a game of nine innings.

YIDDISH ACTOR IS HIT OF PLAY

The Louis Nusbaum Yiddish Star company presented "The Jewish King Lear" at the Oakland Auditorium last evening, with David Levenson, Jewish character actor of New York, in the principal role. While the tragedy is adapted to modern Yiddish life and presented entirely in Yiddish, it was played before an appreciative audience composed of many Gentiles as well as Jews, and was marked by exceptionally good acting and music.

Last night's offering was the fifth of a series of Yiddish plays being presented at the Oakland Auditorium every Thursday evening by M. Farber of the Garrick theater, San Francisco. Next week's offering will be "Bought Souls."

One stunt that was worked to advantage by the team captain was to place a keg of beer near the third base and when a runner reached that station he was given a big dipper, or the contents. If he returned the home plate he was entitled to another while a home run was good for three.

Unique Dress Marks Little Theater Party

BERKELEY, July 24.—Society and Bohemia will be drawn upon to furnish costume ideas in the Little theater benefit production of Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale," to open next Friday night for four nights and two matinees in the Berkeley High School Auditorium.

In doing this, Maxwell Armfield, local artist who is designing costumes and stage settings, is departing from the traditional Grecian and Tudor style which has been the customary motif of Shakespearean costuming.

Fall Fashion Notes

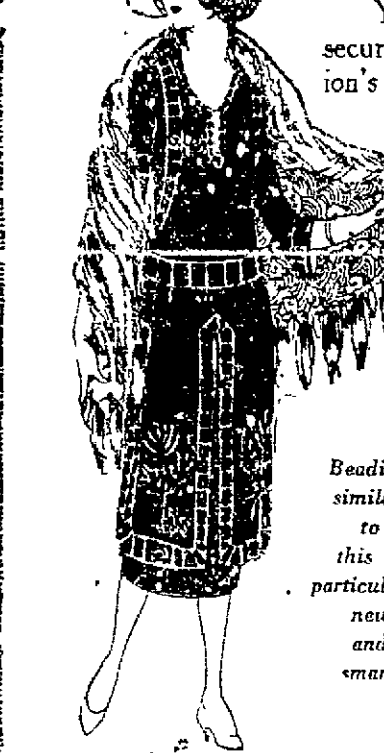

With the new season come new modes. Those of Fall 1920 derive their style from two predominant silhouettes. The Second Empire type and the Oriental influence.

Second Empire Silhouette

This new silhouette retains all the charm but none of the stiffness of the styles of 1860. There is a close-fitting bodice following the natural lines of the body and generally extending to the hips. The flaring skirt is very graceful, and the tendency is to place the fullness at the hem rather than at the hips as in the past season.

Oriental Silhouette

This is also known as the Egyptian type. The charming long line silhouette has gained new favor for Fall, and appears in many delightful variations. Modes may hang gracefully from the shoulder, often unbelted, and nearly always profusely trimmed about the lower part. Again shoe-string belts, or lovely sashes, over-skirts, tunics, panels and long pleats may give this straight-line silhouette.

You can secure fullest enjoyment from a modish wool frock by securing it early in the season and leading, not following, in Fashion's parade.

Among the newcomers is a smart Poirer twill dress with blouse back, very full side tunic, narrow belt, and embroidered in gold thread. Very chic are velveteen dresses in navy and brown shades combined most effectively with plaid and striped velour overskirts.

Long line frocks, profusely embroidered and beaded are very much the vogue. The use of high collars in trimming, and three-quarter bell sleeves are new. Tricotines and serges are the favored woollens. Priced from $35 to $125. —Second Floor.

The Fall Silk Dresses

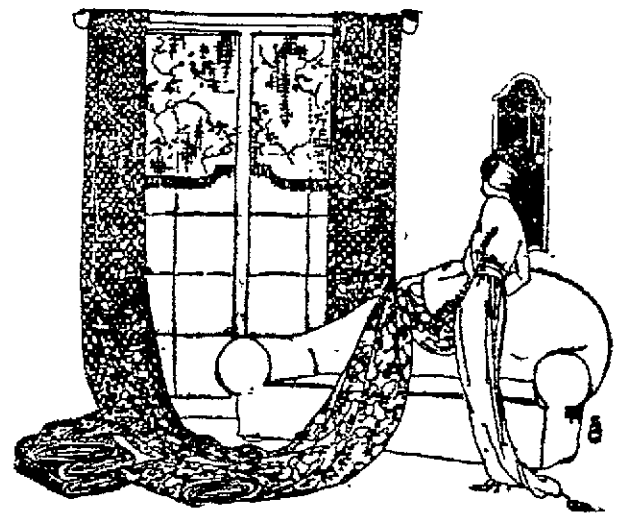

New modes for afternoon, street and general wear. The predominating silk fabric for Fall is satin, and this is especially chic when combined with embroidered georgette, or with exquisite beading and embroidery. The colors are navy, brown, taupe and black and the price is $45. —Second Floor.

Charming Forerunners of Fall— Georgette and Crepe de Chine Blouses

The well-groomed woman who keeps pace with Fashion will find these new blouses of unusual charm. Short sleeves continue in popularity, though there are long ones if preferred. Tuxedo style with the graceful long collars are very effective. Of good quality fresh and white crepe de chine and georgette trimmed with lace and pleatings—$8.95 to $14.95. —Second Floor

STATE CONTROL
IS DISCUSSED

A dinner dance at the Hotel Oakland last night marked the close of the third annual convention of the California Association of Mercantile Agencies which opened here yesterday morning. While many of the delegates departed last evening, others are remaining over today as the guests of the local agencies.

The session yesterday afternoon was occupied by addresses by invited guests and by delegates and officers of the organization. The chief business during the afternoon was the expression of a desire to co-operate with Oregon in the formation of a coast-wide organization and the adoption of a law in California putting collection agencies under the control and supervision of the state.

The bill and its intent and aims were explained by L. A. Mills, chairman of the legislative committee, and its author. Under its terms the collection agencies would be required to bond themselves for faithful execution of their duties. The cost of state supervision would be met by a license fee of $50 per year, a sum declared sufficient to make the bureau self-sustaining.

CONTROL NOT SETTLED
It has not been fully decided under which state commission it is desired to place this bureau. The state insurance commission, the bank commission and the real estate commission have been suggested.

Judge James G. Quinn, District Attorney Ezra Decoto, William J. Hayes, referee in bankruptcy, were among the speakers who endorsed the plan and promised support in its enactment.

The first speaker during the afternoon was Mayor John L. Davis who spoke upon "Oakland, the Destiny City."

"We are destined to be the largest city on the coast," said the Mayor, who then went on to say that within 150 miles on the north, east and south of this city is raised 65 per cent of all the products of the state. "Sixty per cent of the asparagus, eighty-five per cent of the deciduous fruits, ninety per cent of the raisins and ninety-five per cent of the apples are grown within this area. Last year 4,000,000 sacks of rice were barged in the Sacramento valley."

Continuing, he said Oakland has the largest number of factories of any city in this state and that the rail and water transportation facilities are unsurpassed.

Judge James G. Quinn referred to the part played by collectors in the mercantile world, and said that during his long experience on the bench he had never had a collector before him on a felony charge.

JUDGE WASTE SPEAKS
Judge William H. Waste, presiding justice of the District Court of appeals, stated that the collection agencies of today are performing a valuable service that formerly used to be asked of the law firms. These agencies, he declared, are conducted by a substantial part of business men rather than the debtors. The present bankruptcy law was enacted in 1890.

Other speakers of the afternoon were Assemblyman Clarence Morris of San Francisco, F. C. Beall of Berkeley, and Rev. A. P. Beall of Berkeley.

Following the addresses the newly elected officers were installed.

All of these detours, according to Grant, are in excellent condition.

"Vestal Virgins" Is Work Of Faculty Woman
Summer School Girls Will Present Pageant

MISS BONNIE LEE HIMES, University of California summer session instructor, as "Camillas" in the pageant, "The Vestal Virgins," to be presented tomorrow night at the Greek Theater

Leading Parts Will Be Taken By Members of Class, and Story Is of Old Roman Days

BERKELEY, July 24.—The Vestal Virgins, a spectacular pageant, written and directed by Miss Mary Shafter of the University of California, summer session, department of physical education, will be presented tomorrow night in the Greek Theater by Miss Shafter's class in pageantry.

The three leading characters are Miss Bonnie Lee Himes, classic dancer, who is also an instructor at the summer session, who plays the part of Camillas, a Roman youth; Anna Church, one of the vestal virgins, with whom Camillas is infatuated; and Stella Davis Hughes, supervisor of physical education of the Fresno schools, who is the high priestess in the temple of the vestal virgins. The rest of the cast includes a number of students.

The story is of the vain love of Camillas, a Roman youth, for one of the vestal virgins, who, according to the ancient Roman tradition, must guard a lamp in their temple. He entreats her to fly with him and leave the temple and her vows, but she remains true to her religion. He finally gives up in despair and tries to blow out the light which is watched over by the virgins. For this he is thrown from the temple and is held in disgrace by the city.

The public will be welcome to the production.

The failure of A. J. Wallace to enter his petition for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate with the Alameda county clerk was not an oversight, it does not bar citizens from voting for him, his name will appear on the ballot and everything is serene among his friends, and all despite the report that the lack of a petition would keep him out of the race.

Wallace's opponents for the Republican nomination, William Kent and Sam Shortridge, filed petitions here but the former lieutenant governor did not. The omission occasioned immediate inquiry at the office of the district attorney.

"The primary law of 1913," amended by the statutes of 1917," said Earl Warren, deputy district attorney, "provide that a candidate must file his petition with the county clerk forty days before the date of election. This date was July 21. Wallace having failed to comply with the law, cannot run for office in Alameda county."

Then those interested in Wallace's candidacy got exceedingly busy.

Crown Jewels of
With German Rides

(By Universal Service)
CHICAGO, July 24.—According to a report brought to Chicago today by Miss Katherine Doboschick, a Russian refugee from Samara, the crown jewels of Russia, famous as one of the finest collections of jewels in the world, are now in Germany being held by Bolshevik agents. The Bolsheviks, according to Miss Doboschick, are endeavoring to negotiate the sale of the Russian jewels to The Netherlands government, but Holland so far has refused to treat with them.

The information came to Miss Doboschick from her brother in Holland.

Bandit Is Killed
in Battling Police
KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 24.—One bandit was killed in a gun battle early today when police surprised a gang robbing the Midland Transfer company. The robbers had obtained $500 worth of loot, loaded on a truck, when discovered.

They appealed, as a court of immediate resort, to Secretary of State Jordan. And from Jordan, over long distance telephone, came this reassuring reply:

"It does not make any difference with his running in Alameda county and his name will go on the ballot just the same. The law provides that he must file in 'one county or any counties' so that the county clerks thereof may make certification of his name to this office. If he filed in Los Angeles county alone, it is enough to assure the inclusion of his name on the ballot in every other county."

So Wallace will be among those present at the August Primaries. The county clerk is allowed five days following the close of the filing period within which to certify the petitions to the secretary of state. It is expected such certification will be made Monday.

27-CENT GAS IS
BAY MOTORISTS

It will seem to thousands of East-bay motorists today that the bugaboo of "thirty-cent gas," which has long been a pessimistic prediction, is in a fair way to become realized when they are confronted with "27-cent" gasoline signs at service stations of the Shell Oil company.

The new rate announced by the Shell Oil company is effective today, and is an advance of 3 1/2 cents on the gallon. The other companies, including the Standard Oil and associated concerns, say they contemplate no advance.

The only explanation vouchsafed by the Shell company was that market concessions warranted the raise.

The Shell is the only company in the state that has continued to sell gasoline in "tanks" during the shortage, but the Standard Oil company predicts that within a short time gasoline will be more plentiful.

Lieutenant In Navy Alcohol
Case Is Freed
VALLEJO, July 24.—Lieutenant J. F. Colvin, assistant chief of shops at Mare Island, was released from arrest aboard the receiving ship In-terprete last afternoon.

Until the findings of the board of inquiry into recent alcohol thefts at Mare Island are acted on he must remain confined to Mare Island and his home is in Vallejo.

He also was ordered not to speak with any person concerning the case. Friends of Colvin here regarded his release as favorable to him. Whether courtmartial will be ordered will depend upon the action of the navy department at Washington.

The alcohol thieves are known to have used a pass issued by Colvin. The Russian ship Bogdal arrived at Mare Island late this afternoon after the dispute in San Francisco, and the two sailors aboard appealed to Commandant E. L. Beach to assume control of the ship. Beach refused to have anything to do with the dispute. He said the navy department has no jurisdiction, and that the matter was one to be settled either by the state department or the department of justice.

The Bogdal was seized by Soviet detectives in Los Angeles after a skirmish this morning and towed across the bay, passed by a Golden Gate, and was over taken at Carquinez straits.

Cop Escapes Death,
But Must Pay for It
WASHINGTON, July 24.—Mounted Police Officer Everett Grimes of the Chevy Chase district, will not have to make up for his own part in the killing of a horse which was struck by lightning and killed while he was riding it on his regular beat. The authorities ruled that notwithstanding the horse was killed in the performance of duty, Grimes would have to make good the loss, but citizens of Chevy Chase who know Grimes and like him, made up a purse to defray the cost of another horse.

Grimes is riding a thoroughbred mount donated for the occasion by a well-known horse fancier of the neighborhood.

PACIFIC COAST
BATTLE GROUND

By HERBERT W. WALKER,
United Press Staff Correspondent.
DAYTON, Ohio, July 24.—Governor James M. Cox is rushing the completion of a tentative itinerary for his national stump campaign.

Next week will be devoted almost entirely to the writing of his speech of acceptance and the carrying forward of his speaking program. Today Cox discussed industrial relations and the American merchant marine with Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the shipping board.

Monday, after meeting Senator Pomerene, to talk over the senatorial investigation of campaign expenditures, and former Ambassador James W. Gerard for a conference on the European situation, the nominee will call a halt on political conferences until the acceptance speech is completed.

As a result of several conferences with state leaders recently, the tentative agreements on the stump campaign may be summarized as follows:

DETAILS OF CAMPAIGN.
Cox will spend the first month of the stump campaign in the east and middle west, probably starting his tour through the far west about September 15.

The tour will be wound up in the big doubtful states of the middle and central states. Cox expects to attend the notification ceremonies of Franklin D. Roosevelt at Hyde Park August 9, after which he probably will make a few speeches in upper New York State and New England.

Connecticut is certain to be included. Several speeches will be in Kentucky, which showed a Republican gain in the last election, it was decided today at a conference of Cox with Senator Beckham of Kentucky.

Cox will address at least three big meetings in Utah, the Senator Smoot stronghold.

Assurances have been given Pacific Coast committees that he will campaign in Oregon, Utah and California.

Cox said today that he is not planning to deliver many speeches in Ohio or the "solid south."

Optimistic reports on Democratic prospects in Illinois and Kentucky were given Cox by Hurley and Beckham.

"I found that Democrats in Kentucky are most enthusiastic over Cox's nomination," Beckham said.

"The situation has changed in Illinois since the San Francisco convention, and there will be many surprised Republicans," Hurley said.

The Cox notification ceremonies may not be held on his front lawn because of the small space, but at the county fair grounds with a grandstand seating about 2500 and a large open race track.

Dayton citizens are planning to give Cox a big home coming demonstration next Friday, with a day and night display of fireworks and a parade. Tomorrow the governor expects to attend the Christ Episcopal Church and spend the day quietly at his home.

Jail's a Good Home
Dave Harris Says So
Problem for Judge

When Dave Harris, on trial yesterday for disturbing the peace, was brought into Judge Samuel's court yesterday he entered a plea of not guilty. "Very well, we'll set the date for your trial," said the Judge.

"Oh, well, if it's going to make a lot of fuss and red tape, I'll change my plea to guilty, judge. It doesn't make any difference to me either way."

"But suppose you get a sentence of about six months in jail?" asked the judge.

"Let's see, that would put me in the cooler until about Christmas, wouldn't it?" ruminated Dave. "Why, that would be fine, judge. Fact is, I rather like jail life; nothing to worry about and enough to eat and a good place to sleep. I don't see what more one wants."

Judge Samuel ordered Dave to be taken back to the city prison for the night, and that morning, when sentence will be passed.

BY UNITED PRESS.
LEASING TO TRIBUNE.
MARION, O., July 24.—Replying to expressions of approval from Senator Hiram Johnson and other Progressives following his acceptance speech, Senator Warren G. Harding today said there was never any doubt in his mind but Progressive Republicans would be committed to the Republican cause this year.

"I am gratified over the many expressions of approval which have been spoken," he said. "It was very pleasing to be assured that I have spoken the right interpretation of the platform."

"Of course it is good to be assured of Senator Johnson's cordial approval. There was never any doubt in my mind about the ultimate commitment of Progressive Republicans to the Republican cause this year. Under the re-commitment to party government, it is our especial business to make the Republican party preserve of the best American citizens who compose it."

William S. Benner of Oregon predicts in a letter to Senator Harding that "the Republican ticket will carry Oregon in November by 25,000 votes."

POLICE WARN OF PICKPOCKETS ON OAKLAND STREETS

Keep your hand on your purse when you are in a crowd and keep a careful guard on your diamond watch while riding in streetcars for the next few days.

This is the warning of a warning issued by the Oakland police department yesterday.

The warning followed several reports to the Oakland police of the operations of pickpockets in the downtown streets and the police are convinced that another organized "mob" of trained thieves has invaded the city.

A purse containing three $100 Liberty Bonds and $370 in cash was stolen from D. J. Quinlan, 2915 Chestnut avenue, while he was riding in a streetcar.

Quinlan immediately reported his loss to the police after he had missed his wallet soon after alighting from a Broadway car.

Mrs. J. A. Rench, a tourist, who recently arrived in Oakland from Lafayette, Colo., reported that purse snatchers had grabbed her purse while she was shopping in a downtown department store.

The purse contained $110 in currency and a gold watch valued at $100, besides jewelry and other articles.

The police have instituted a dragnet campaign against the street thieves, and all persons who are deemed suspicious and cannot give a good account of themselves will be investigated.

Shipping Board to Extend Rate Law
WASHINGTON, July 24.—Admiral Benson, chairman of the shipping board, announced today that the board would further certify to the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the desirability of extending up to January 1, 1921, the period of suspension of the provision of Section 28 of the merchant marine act, which prevents American railroads from making preferential rail rates for commodities moving in import and export, except when moved in American ships.

ROOSEVELT OFF TO ISLAND, WILL WRITE SPEECH

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for Vice-President, formally tendered his resignation as assistant secretary of the navy to President Wilson today. He then left for Eastport, Me., where he will write his speech of acceptance.

The resignation is effective August 7, the day on which he will be notified officially of his nomination. He left without comment on the speech of acceptance by the Republican nominee, Senator Harding.

"I plan to spend a few days on Campobello Island, off the Maine coast, for the purpose of writing my speech," was the only statement he had to make.

Political interest now turns to the coming visit of the new Democratic national chairman, George H. White, to the Washington headquarters. The retiring national chairman, Homer S. Cummings, is to serve with the nominees in the front line oratorical trenches.

While White is here it is expected that details of the campaign with reference to the part to be played by the Wilson men, will be mapped out. The new chairman may be given an audience with the President, who, incidentally, was White's professor of political economy at Princeton.

One thing to be determined is whether the notification commissioners to Governor Cox at his home in Dayton, O., on August 9, are to bear a message from the President.

TRIBUNE FILM SHOWS COMING OF HERO DEAD

From temporary resting places on the battlefields of France to their eternal home in the soil of California from which they sprang, six heroes, members of the Legion of the Dead, arrived in Oakland this week. Their solemn reception here by their comrades of other days is featured in The TRIBUNE-T. & D. News Weekly which opens today at the T. & D. theater here.

"Ecuador," the largest passenger vessel ever entering the estuary, is another feature of this week's program. Other local items of interest portrayed include "Lost" of Miss Naomi Allen and many other beautiful co-eds who will participate in the cast of "Quest," the annual U. C. pageant; the newest gasoline engine which operates without a crank shaft; invented by Oakland Mechanics, and 1500 Oakland V. M. C. A. boys picking the apricot crop C. Charges Made Of Restriction Of Oil Unproved

By Universal Service
WASHINGTON, July 24.—Charges of attempts by oil and gasoline producers to restrict their output have been investigated but have not been substantiated thus far, the Department of Justice announced today.

Agents who have made investigations in Western and Pacific Coast oil fields have failed to find wells which have not been "tapped," the department announced. A few wells have been closed, but for legitimate reasons, such as lack of equipment.

An investigation is still in progress in the gasoline industry, attention being paid to charges that there is restriction in output and distribution to maintain high prices.

FARGO, N. D., July 24.—Heavy property damage was caused by the cyclone which hit North Dakota in the vicinity of Minot yesterday. Mrs. Samuel J. Kandt, of Anamoose, and Mrs. Andrew Botze, of Minot, were killed. There was a loss of thousands of dollars in crops and livestock.

'Reds,' Ousted by U. S., Would Barter Their Souls For Trip to America

Written for Universal Service by Ambrose Lambert, former Correspondent in Russia for London Daily Express.

LONDON, July 24.—I have just returned from Soviet Russia after a prolonged visit, and am not a Bolshevik. I remained too long to become one. Russia is the place effectually to cure any tendency to Bolshevism, providing you stay long enough. There is not one, I venture to say, of those Russians whom the United States deported back to their native land who would not give his or her heart and soul to be back again in the United States. I met several of them, and managed to learn their real views. I will not indicate their identities, because of what I know of the conditions in Russia today save for the elect and those who want to eat and live, and therefore join or pretend to sympathize or be of the elect. General Brusiloff is no more a Bolshevik today than he ever was. He joined them for two reasons, the first a Russian against outside interference. The second and dominating reason was that he is an old man who has lost practically everything he possessed in the world and needed a job to eat and live.

In Soviet Russia one's life is regulated by tyrannical rules. The word home has practically been eliminated. You must where you are told to live, and with whom the authorities tell you to live; you move only and when they tell you to move.

There is no free press, nothing but a handful of newspapers and publications. Private property and the right of individual domicile have been abolished. Everything in theory and very nearly in practice, belongs to the state, even the children. Your physical care is, however, the one oasis in a huge desert of misery. If there is anything to eat they get it. That must be said to the credit of the Bolsheviks.

Personally I was treated with every consideration. I like the Bolsheviks I met. I like their constructive program as it is outlined on paper and by word of mouth.

It would make any sincere wisher for the future welfare of a great country enthusiastic, but the trouble is that it is only on paper. That is Russia today. They have not the capacity for self-government. They are children in sympathy, suspicion and cruelty.

FARMER DRAWS OIL FROM PUMP

ELMIRA, N. Y., July 24.—Drawing water from the kitchen pump with which to prepare the family supper, Mrs. Jacob Miller Jr., wife of an Elmira farmer, discovered the crystal liquid turn to pure oil as her pail was filled. Overjoyed at the discovery, which bears out the assertion frequently made by the residents of the neighborhood that there is oil in the vicinity about the Miller farm, the bucket was taken immediately to the Standard Oil pumping station at West Junction, where an analysis showed it to be the pure product.

Oil company officials were first of the opinion that one of their pipes had burst in the vicinity of the Miller farm, thus allowing the oil to flow into the well. Employees began digging at once to locate the supposed leak, but none could be found.

No leak registers at the pumping station and Miller continues to draw oil into the kitchen sink. There is no prospect of the supply giving out, and with every bucket produced the hearts of the farmer's family are beating higher, while a neighbor's well is supplying the where-withal for the family supper.

"Schooner" Picture Is Proof of Age

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A postcard mailed in Wildwood, N. J., on August 7, 1907, was thirteen years reaching its destination in Philadelphia, and the police of the Eighteenth district there have asked the Postoffice Department to explain. The card, sent by an anonymous person, is addressed to Thomas Smith, an Eighteenth district policeman who died about five years ago. It bears the picture of a girl sitting on a huge schooner of beans.

Peanuts May Play Big Part In Campaign

By B. J. BART CAMPBELL,
Universal News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The peanut but popular peanut was held largely responsible by both Republican and Democratic leaders here today for the threatened political invasion of the "solid south."

Southern planters engaged in peanut growing are demanding a protective tariff to save them from the menace of rapidly increased importations of cheap peanut products from China and India rendered possible by the "free trade" the Democratic "solid south" has always stood for, it was pointed out.

At the recent convention of the Peanut Growers' Association at Norfolk, Va., resolutions were adopted unanimously calling upon Congress to lose no time in enacting such a protective tariff law as soon as it reconvenes in December.

Notice was also served that the association with which many southern planters are identified, would oppose for election to Congress anyone who did not offer definite assurances of support for a tariff wall to shut out peanut importations from the Oriental markets.

The Republicans contend that if southern planters who are Democrats place themselves on record as favoring a protective tariff for American industry, they and southern members of Congress cannot consistently oppose protection for other American industries in which their northern and western neighbors are interested.

Because of the devastation wrought by the boll weevil an immense acreage of the south once devoted to cotton has been turned over to peanut growing. Southern planters expected to reap large profits from their peanut crops this year. The total farm value of the peanut crop in the United States for last year was estimated at $80,000,000.

Lineman Receives Jolt of 6600 Volts

KANSAS CITY, Kan., July 24.—Seventeen hundred volts of electricity are easily sufficient to cause instant death, but John Stapleton, a lineman, had 6600 volts pass through his body here the other day and still lives to tell about his experience. Furthermore, he expects to keep on living.

Stapleton received the "shock" at the top of the pole, where he was working on a damaged cable. Knocked from his perch by the force of the "jolt," he sent a guy wire and slid to the ground.

Aside from a few bruises Stapleton was uninjured.

BANCROFT SAYS HE MAY RESIGN

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—Dr. J. R. Bancroft, secretary of the State Board of Health and a recent appointee of Governor W. D. Stephens, is considering resigning, he admitted today. But he has not definitely decided.

Concerning rumors that a split had occurred between him and other members of the board, he said: "There has been neither row nor controversy between myself and other board members. As to my resignation that has not been determined upon and probably will not be until the August meeting of the board."

Bancroft's home is in Los Angeles. He succeeded Dr. William H. Nichols, and is a close personal friend of the governor.

TOKYO (by mail).—Kivajiro Maroka, the banker, and member of Parliament, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a short sword. The failure of his bank ap-

On The Road to Ruin

WEATHER DID IT

FULLER'S Paint would have saved it. Weather beaten surfaces are forerunners of ruin. "Save the Surface and You Save All." In every section there are many dilapidated and unpainted houses that tell a sad story of neglect. Time and weather have been actually allowed to impair property that a few gallons of W. P. Fuller & Co.'s Paint would have preserved and beautified. One of the best reasons for painting right now is that the present high cost of material has increased the value of your property holdings and it is wise to protect the investment. Remember that there is a Fuller Paint for every paintable surface.

SLAANE OUT FOR SUPREME BENCH

Judge W. A. Sloan, associate justice of the California Supreme Court, who was appointed by Governor Stephens to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Henry A. Melvin, has announced his candidacy for election to the Supreme bench. Judge Sloan, who is 54 years of age, has served eight years as judge of the Superior Court, and was appointed to the Supreme Court by appointment of the governor he is now associate justice of the Court of Appeals for the Second Appellate District at Los Angeles.

Judge Sloan is now residing in San Francisco, where the State Court has headquarters. In announcing his candidacy he says, "I make no claim to the support of the voters as a matter of right or privilege. It is my standing as a lawyer and citizen and my judicial record do not command me to the men and women of the state there can be no good reason for my election."

NEW SHORTHAND SPEEDY WITH BRIEF PRACTICE

PARIS, July 24.—A new method of shorthand which, it is claimed, can be learned in a few hours, and which is faster than any existing method, has been invented by Raoul Duval, ex-president of the Union of French Stenographers.

The method, which is called "bréviographie," consists in using the usual long-hand commencement of a word, with a symbol to complete it. The symbols are those ordinarily found on a typewriter, so that a typist can learn the shorthand machine dictation up to a speed of 150 words a minute with but little practice.

Demonstrated by pupils of the Jules-Ferry Lyceum, one of the largest girls' schools in France, the new shorthand was a complete success. Three of the girls wrote at the rate of 100 words a minute with only three hours' practice.

Broker of Oakland Sues Inyo Rancher

Charging George F. Brown, wealthy mining man and rancher of Inyo county, with willful breach of contract, John H. Franklin, Oakland broker with offices in San Francisco, has filed suit for $25,000.

According to the complaint filed by Attorney Joseph Lacy Brown on June 15, an agreement was made between Franklin and Brown to purchase 2000 shares of common stock and 5 per cent commission for the sale in the Inyo county of 2000 shares of stock in the Star Gold and Silver Mining company of Mina, Nevada. The stock was to be sold at the par value of $100 a share.

After signing the agreement, Brown refused to carry out the terms in any particular, the complaint charges, and Franklin alleges he has lost the sum of $25,000 thereby.

NEGLECT RESULTS IN LOSS OF HAIR

Chicago Specialist Says Proper Care Would Prevent Many Cases of Baldness

The mere use of the comb and brush three or four times a day is not sufficient attention to pay to one of nature's most wonderful gifts, says Prof. John E. Austin, bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, who now has offices at The Owl Drug Co.

Both men and women owe it to themselves to keep their hair healthy, beautiful and abundant—and the proper corrective treatment of scalp disorders will do this.

Nature's signs of distress—dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair, dry or brittle hair—warn you of approaching baldness. Do not wait a day—see Prof. Austin, over 40 years a specialist—he will advise you what to do.

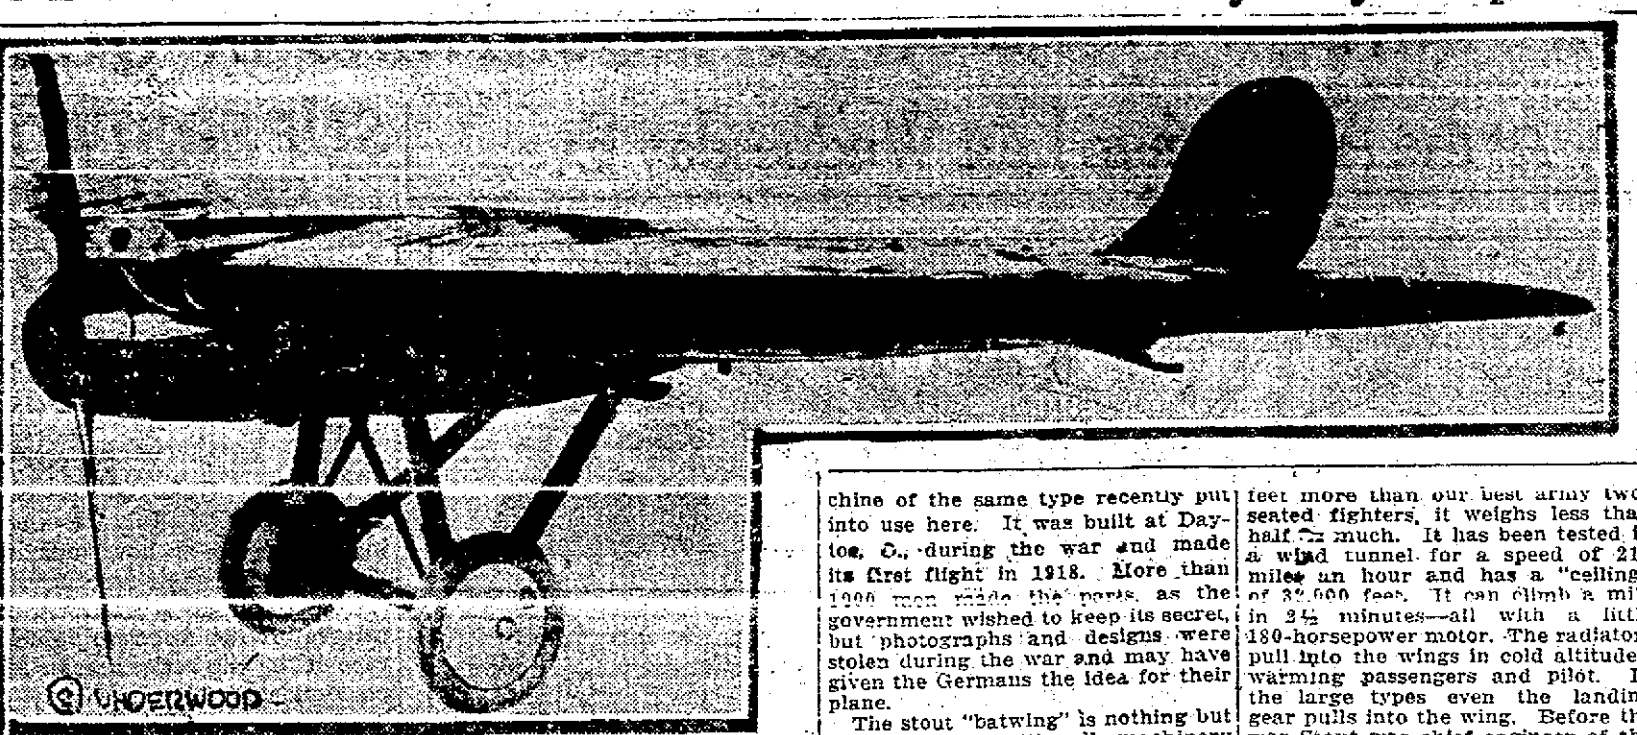

By showing you the roots of your own hair, magnified thousands of times, pointing out to you the parasites that are destroying your hair day by day, gradually killing every root until, in time, the hair becomes entirely bald, you will be convinced that any delay may be deeply regretted. Prof. Austin says the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, etc., is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp—both men and women invited—Private Office at The Owl Drug Co., 14th and Washington, Oakland; 775 Market St., San Francisco. Hours: 10 to 12 and 2 to 4—Advertisement.

STOVE REPAIRING

Only the oven part of gas ranges actually wear out. The burners simply require a little fixing. The oven makes over and reinforces with heavier material, thereby doubling its life and greatly improving its baking.

First Picture of America's Wonderful New Mystery Airplane

William B. Stout, American aeronautical engineer, formerly with the aircraft force in Washington, has produced a wonderful new airplane, with the assistance of Orville Wright and the government, of the hollow-wing type. It is claimed this machine antedates the German machine of the same type recently put into use here. It was built at Dayton, O., during the war and made its first flight in 1918. More than 1000 men made the tests, as the government wished to keep its secret, but photographs and designs were stolen during the war and may have given the Germans the idea for their plane.

The stout "batwing" is not only a giant wing, with all machinery, trussing, etc., in the wings. The engine is mounted in the center of the fuselage and is enclosed between the surfaces and every part of the machine exposed to the air is designed to lift. Although the ship has 480 square feet of wing, 40 square feet more than our best army two-seater fighters, it weighs less than half as much. It has been tested in a wind tunnel for a speed of 217 miles an hour and has a "ceiling" of 35,000 feet. It can climb a mile in 2 1/2 minutes—all with a little 180-horsepower motor. The radiators pull into the wings in cold attitudes, warming passengers and pilot. In the large types even the landing gear pulls into the wing. Before the war Stout was chief engineer of the aircraft division for the Packard Motor Car Company. At present he is head of the Stout engineering laboratories in Detroit, where the entire experimental work is being handled. Photo by Underwood & Underwood.

SMUGGLER QUEEN CAUGHT AT LAST

GENEVA, July 24.—Frau Bella Hartmann, the young and pretty widow of an American officer, who robbed the former and present governments of Vienna and Berlin of enormous sums, stated to amount to $2,150,000, has been sentenced at Lindau, Bavaria, to pay a fine of 50,000 marks (nominally $12,500) and to one month's imprisonment.

She offered to pay a tenfold fine for her sentence of imprisonment was remitted, but the offer was refused. Frau Hartmann was given the name of "Queen of the Smugglers," owing to her clever and complex system. She employed a small army of people around Lake Constance, and she always loyal to them, paying their fines, amounting to thousands of dollars, when her employees, of both sexes, were arrested.

The widow possesses three villas in the Tyrol and two on Lake Constance, full of beautiful furniture, mostly smuggled; six motor cars, three motorboats, and a splendid collection of Tausburg jewels, chiefly bought since the armistice at a low price.

Her former employees, who are devoted to her, are indignant at her sentence of imprisonment, and she has been taken in Munich as an attempt at rescue is feared.

THERE'S ANOTHER MARY PICKFORD

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—Left childless by the marriage of her daughter, Mary Pickford, to Douglas Fairbanks, Mrs. Charlotte Smith Pickford, legally adopted daughter of Charlotte Rupp, daughter of Lotie Pickford Rupp and Albert G. Rupp, wealthy New Yorker.

Mrs. Pickford took the child as her daughter to brighten her room and to relieve the loneliness caused by the absence of "America's sweetheart." The adoption proceedings were attended by Mrs. Pickford, Mr. and Mrs. Rupp and attorneys, entering the courtroom when it was unoccupied.

"It is for the best interest of the child," was all attorneys would say. Judge Reeve changed the child's name to Mary Charlotte Pickford.

Mrs. Rupp was Lotie Pickford, sister of Mary and Jack. She and her husband are said to have been living apart, but they were seated beside each other in the courtroom. Neither spoke or acknowledged the other's presence.

Judge Reeve asked Mrs. Pickford if she desired to adopt her granddaughter. Mrs. Pickford, almost a whisper, said she did. The judge asked Mrs. Rupp and Rupp if they agreed. They so indicated and the affair was over.

Austrians Ask Rich Americans for Aid

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24.—That Austrians have high regard for the liberality of millionaires in America and of the generosity of the American government is indicated by the dozens of letters which are received here from Austria asking for financial aid. Among those who appealed for aid during the past week were a labor union, a municipality and several individual.

The calls for help are referred to Daniel E. Gargues, secretary of the United States Committee for Relief in Austria. He has received an appeal from Anne Marie Pribil of Leoben, Austria. She sought the address of John D. Rockefeller, and petitions the "Lord Mayor of Washington" to answer immediately.

Tailor Disappears; Patrons Seek Suits

BALTIMORE, Md., July 24.—The whereabouts of E. Sim, a well-known tailor, who disappeared recently, remains a mystery.

Meantime seventy-five anxious men of the neighborhood are clamoring to recover their suits, which they delivered to Simon to be cleaned and pressed. Their efforts are in vain, however, for the police have barred the doors of the establishment and even the owner of the building cannot gain admittance.

Sees Husband Killed; Shock Brings Insanity

SMITH CENTRE, Kan., July 24.—Seeing a hay stack fall upon her husband, as a result of which he sustained fatal injuries, was too much for Mrs. E. K. Davis, wife of a prominent farmer of this county. Shortly following the accident, she became violently insane and had to be removed to the State Hospital.

Legion Convention Invites Warriors

CLEVELAND, O., July 24.—Marshall Poeh, Admiral Pearty and General John J. Pershing, it is reported today, may be among the noted visitors and speakers at the second annual convention of the American Legion, which will be held here September 27-29. Invitations will be extended to each of the three.

More than 25,000 members of the legion are expected to attend. The meeting is considered important from the standpoint of matters of legion policy that are to be discussed and decided.

SINN FEIN DRAFT MEETING SUCCESS

DUBLIN, July 24.—Sinn Fein has established a system of conscription in Ireland. In the rural areas where the police and military have been driven out by raids and attacks on barracks, the Irish Republicans are carrying out their own form of government, and young men who have hung back for one reason or another from joining the ranks of the Sinn Fein Volunteers are now pressed to join up.

A Sinn Feiner declared to me today that the Irish cause is now in its final stage, and every Irishman is needed in the volunteer ranks. "There are plenty of arms and ammunition for all," was his information. "The going war is in the north and west who have not hitherto joined up did not remain outside because of their apathy to the Irish Republican cause, nor from lack of valor, but because they did not think their individual services were necessary. It is now being put to every young Irishman of military age to come in."

This plan, I am assured, is most successful, and it has not been necessary to force any man to join against his will.

Nowadays, when attacks on police barracks are becoming so common, the Sinn Feiners, in their march to the attack, press every man who may be of assistance in the assault to come along. The Sinn Feiners, in company with trained scouts, these men are said to be very useful and save trained men for other more dangerous work.

San Mateo Will Put Number On Reckless Drivers

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors have instructed the traffic officers of that county to rigidly enforce the motor vehicle laws, especially with reference to CUTTING IN, SPEEDING and SPOT LIGHTS, according to the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association. Motorists are warned to keep well within the law.

Navy Band to Lead Field Day Parade

Announcement was made yesterday at the Navy Recruiting Station, Liberty Hut, that the contingent representing the Navy in Oakland's Field Day parade Monday will consist of a hundred piece Navy band and a Naval battalion. In addition to this a ball game between the Army and the Navy will be played at the ball park after the game between the Stars and the Oaks. Admission will be free.

KILLS FOURTEEN RATTLESN. POKESPOG, Mass., July 24.—A family of thirteen small rattlesnakes and their mother was slain by a visitor to the Blue Hills reservation near here. The mother snake fought for her young for the last. After she was killed it was an easy matter to dispose of the little ones. This is considered an unusually large rattlesnake family.

GOLD IS LOST BY ATTRITION

CHICAGO, July 24.—Gold used in jewelry of an estimated value of $20,000,000 is lost through attrition in the United States annually. It becomes of no use to anyone. It appears—that's all. Here are some interesting figures on the yearly shrinkage.

"While many persons possess a gold jewelry, said a jeweler, 'many more possess several pieces. I think it is safe to estimate there is one piece of gold jewelry owned in the United States for every individual. This would make 105,000,000 pieces. This gold jewelry is every becoming lighter. Constant handling, the rubbing of two rings against one another, the friction of the links of a necklace or watch chain—all these things gradually wear away the gold. The lost gold is in invisible particles that it has disappeared."

"The average price of the gold in jewelry might be estimated at 2.15 cents a grain. I am sure it is not placing the estimate too high to say that the annual loss is two grains to each piece of jewelry, or 210,000,000 grains for the estimated 105,000,000 pieces. This at 2.15 cents a grain means a total of $4,500,000 an annual loss in gold jewelry through attrition."

Free Big Games on Local Schedule and Other Attractive Contests Billed Out of Town

By MAURY PESSANO
When the Mission League and the two valley leagues opened their season about two months ago, most of the bush fans around Oakland and the bay cities feared that they would get very few good games of ball during the summer months. The clubs in the valley have taken away many stars, and have made it a hard job for the managers to put a good club in the field. But strange to say, based in the bushes is as good as ever. Those clubs who failed several months ago are today giving the fans just the brand of ball that they are looking for. The managers of most of the clubs have picked young players who are making more than good, and who are giving the fans a run for their money.

Good Sport Is In Store for The Nimrods

One week from today the rifles will begin blazing away and many a little deer will be left a half orphan. Hunters are outfitting their guns and scouting around looking for tracks and from all reports many fine bucks will be unable to return home the night of opening day. The hunting season will be the mecca of hundreds of sportsmen next Sunday, as deer there are reported quite plentiful at the Arroyo Camp. Deputy fish and game commissioners who have been in that district lately report a scarcity of water in some sections, particularly near Camp Frost, where few deer have been seen. Marin and San Mateo counties will be thoroughly combed for the elusive buck on opening day, but a majority of local hunters have planned to do their hunting in Alameda county.

Doc Moskman left last night for Mendocino county and will remain there until he gets a buck. Bob Castro has one staked out near Santa Cruz and will go after it next Saturday.

Those who follow Manuel Rose to Livermore will have the pleasure of seeing him kill a big one. Manuel has never fallen down on opening day.

The demand for ammunition was never so great, according to local sporting goods houses, and is impossible to rent a rifle in town.

Deer are reported plentiful in Alameda Valley, north of Healdsburg. Don't forget that the season does not open everywhere next Sunday. Districts Nos. 2 and 33 only being open. These districts comprise the following counties: Lake, Napa, Mendocino, Sonoma, Marin, Solano, Glenn, Colusa, Contra Costa, Alameda, San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Kern, Fresno, Merced, Stanislaus, San Joaquin, San Benito, Ventura and Santa Barbara.

ANGLERS' NOOK

The roads to Bruce are now in good condition and the fishing there is the kind that makes you talk about it long after the vacation is over.

Ten and eleven-inch trout are the rule on the Mokelumne river. The fish are biting lively and limits are easily taken.

At Walnut Grove striped bass are running as they have not for years. Anybody who can get Monterey salmon for bait can pull out the limit of five in a few casts. They exceed five pounds.

We have a report from Dos Kios in Mendocino county that trout are running up in the mountains in that section on the Eel river.

On the south fork of the Eel the trout are biting lively on brown and gray hackle flies.

Gold Lake, in the Feather river country, is now giving the anglers some real sport.

Fishing in Lake Almanor is better than any other in the state. The lake has been the means of bringing out the millions of bugs and flies.

Splendid surf fishing is now to be had around Half Moon Bay.

Black bass fishing is good now in Middle river near Stockton.

A B. Jordan, a prominent angler, has returned from a ten days' fishing trip to Idaho. Jordan says that the law protects the trout up to seven inches in length, but the fishermen never take the smallest. He says that the trout are running in large numbers and also have a size law as it would mean better fishing for all classes of anglers.

A real fisherman needs no law, as he will only take a trout that is as big as his fish. The law is there to protect the fish that are too small to be of any use.

If you are a "real" fisherman, when you catch a small size trout be sure that you let it go. You will be sure that you let it go. You will be sure that you let it go.

The Carmel river is now fair fishing above the school house on the Ranch road.

Belden—Fishing continues good in rivers and creeks, and in Three Rivers the most remarkable catches have been made.

Spring Garden—Water clear and low. No big catches made the past week.

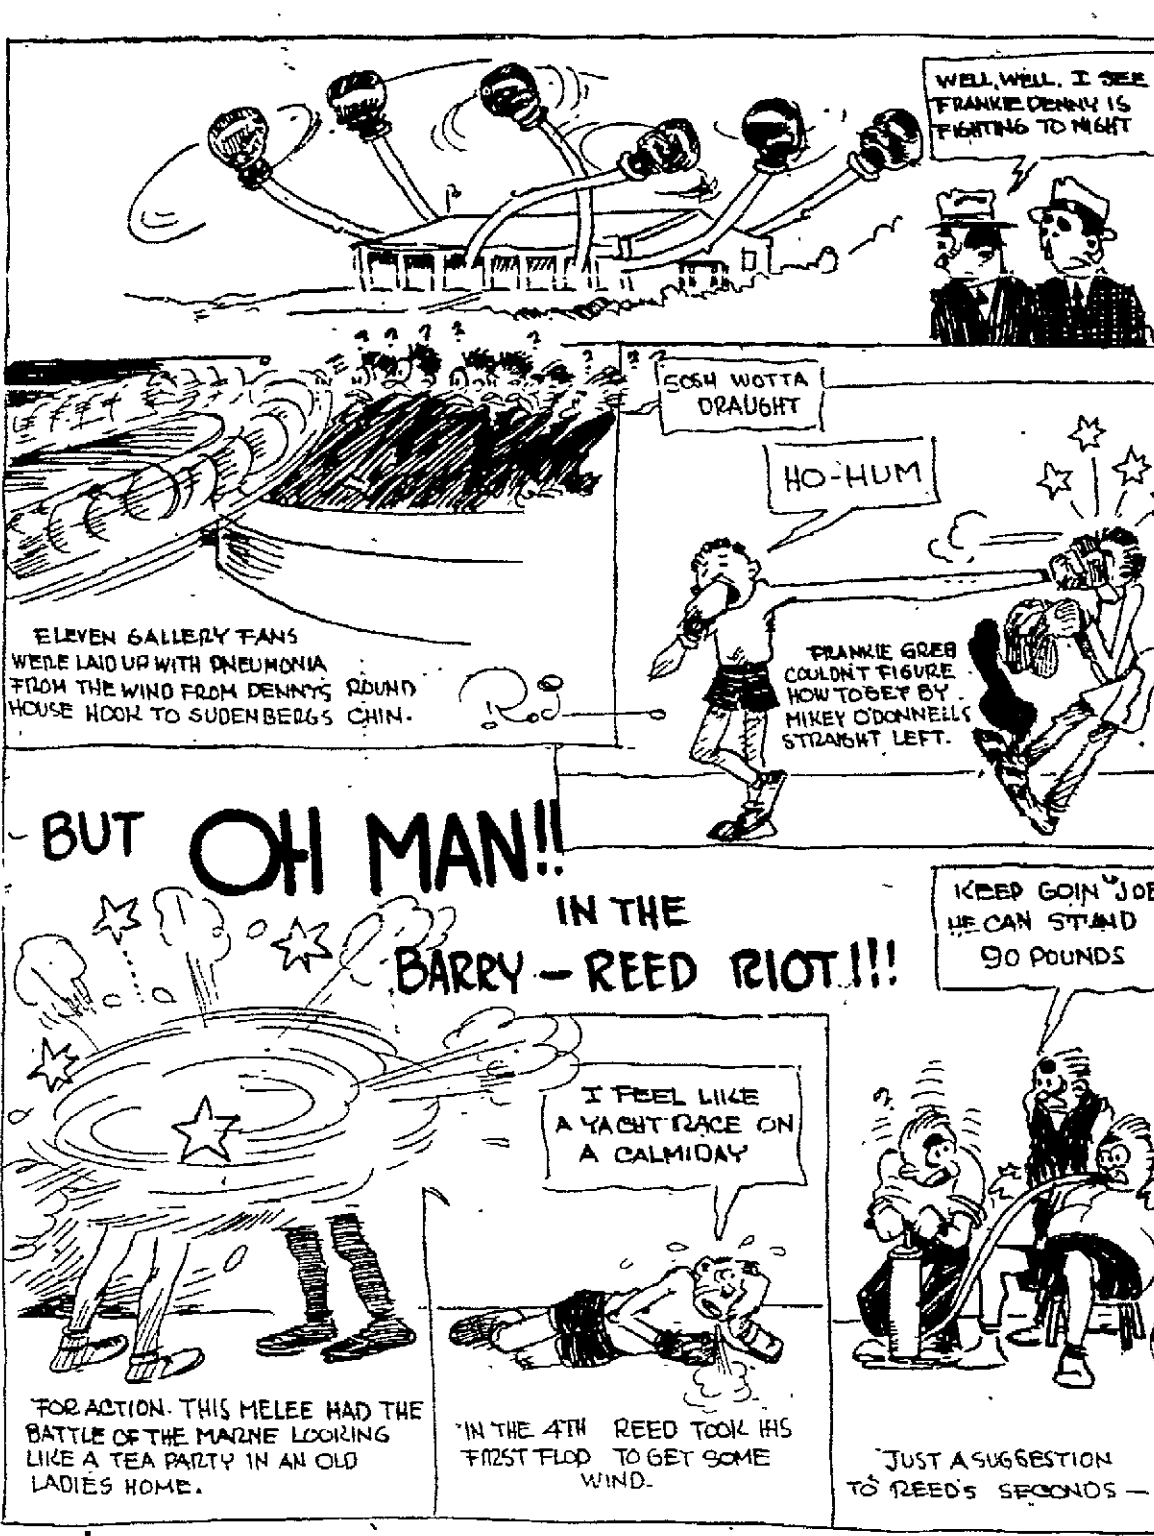

Paxton—Poor sport has been the verdict around here in the first week of last week. No fish at all have been caught. Large ones coming out from Lake Alvarado and Ma Meadows.

Blairden—Canyon Inn reports good fishing in Jamieson Lake and Creek. Other places seem to have slowed down a little.

Kettle—Fishing poor. Very small trout caught. Grasshoppers and flies are out for bait. No large catches or large fish caught.

Portland—Weather conditions favorable for fishing. Brown backs and royal coachman most successful. Feather River, Grizzly Creek and Gold Lake.

With eleven of the best girl swimmers in the central part of California ready to face the starter, the 100-yard, free style, for the Pacific Association senior championship, was held at the Auditorium last Wednesday evening.

Dorothy Becker, Alameda champion, and Florence Friesenhausen, the great little swimmer from the Y. L. I., are favorites, although a dark horse may spring a surprise. Lila Dunham, the Stockton champion, is expected to appear and should give a good account of herself.

The complete entry list follows: Florence Friesenhausen, Hazel Coulter, Lila Dunham, Ruth Crane, Dorothy Becker, Maude Nickerson and Olga Valanos.

Ullian Snowgrass and Helen Martin, Oakland Athletic club; Lila Dunham, Neptune club, Stockton; Dorothy Becker, Y. L. I.; and the senior fancy diving champion, ship for girls, will also be decided this afternoon. Mike Becker has been displaying race form of late and is expected to capture the gold medal. The complete entry list includes Ruth Crane and Dorothy Becker, Y. L. I.; Ullian Snowgrass, Alameda; Lillian Snowgrass, Oakland Athletic club; Anna Ramos, Los Angeles; and Neptune Club, Stockton.

Always wear a red cap when hunting deer. It serves to give the deer a line on your intentions and when the deer sees the red cap he will stop and look at you.

And a red cap makes a splendid target for the other fellow to aim at when he sees it move in the brush, and when the deer sees the red cap he will stop and look at you.

Deer HAVE been killed with shotguns, but most people prefer a revolver. However, if you want to get your picture in the paper use a bow and arrow.

The best place to shoot a deer is through the brush, as you don't injure the animal. The best place to shoot a deer is through the brush, as you don't injure the animal.

Should you be fortunate enough to kill a deer, don't place it in the rear of your automobile and sneak home by the side street.

Lay it up on the front fenders, come to a stop, get out and look at it. Lay it up on the front fenders, come to a stop, get out and look at it.

We only knew one man who brought home a deer covered up in the back seat of his machine, and he killed it out of season.

A favorite method of killing deer is to use dogs, let the animal, and then wait until night when the eyes shine and let it have a flock of bird-shot.

If you sit up a deer in Contra Costa county you don't have to shoot it. Just chase it into Pinole.

SUPERSTITION OF SEA WILL KEEP MRS. BURTON OFF RACER

Captain's Adviser on the Tides and Currents Quits in a Huff; Says Advice Was Ignored

By GEORGE KENT, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 24.—A plunging squally sou'wester speeding at 25 knots an hour today whipped Resolute and Shamrock in circles around their moorings, staggered them, tumbled them, tore furiously at their storm sails and then chopped up and scrambled the sea off the Ambrose lightship until the sailing of the deciding race of the cup series became impossible. The race will take place on Monday.

A drive over the whitecaps to where the Victoria lay was worth the pain, for aboard the yacht Sir Thomas in convivial mood told of receiving his thirteenth pedigreed kitten from a neighbor today. He chuckled with pleasure and declared the gift portended a great good fortune.

Another announcement which is proof that the baronet is hearkening to the warnings of the hoodoo was that Mrs. Burton, wife of Skipper Burton, would not sail in the deciding race. Deep-sea superstition has begun with Noah, branded women aboard ships as carriers of bad luck.

Rumors of dissension aboard the Shamrock were also rife at Sandy Hook. Designer Charles Nicholson also said the plank with Mrs. Burton, it is said. The reason for the departure of these two, officially given, is that their space aboard was required to make room for two additional able seamen.

Knifing their way through the water toward the start this morning, the yachts had before them all indications of a splendid yachting day. Waves kicked up their white heads everywhere. A brisk wind was aloft. The sea was splintered in the waters of the bay and brought on a high-powered sou'wester which soon put racing out of the question.

The storm came to the line notwithstanding. Shamrock bent a cream-colored storm mainsail on the mast in anticipation of an all-out struggle with the sea. Resolute also had her heavy weather clothing on. Small headwinds were set. The two craft were heeled over into the high running sea.

PARIS STIRRED BY WINNING GAMBLER

PARIS, July 24.—The sensation of the hour in smart Paris today is the story of Father Cherry, "Le Pere la Cerise." This is the nickname of an old newspaper vendor whose startling adventures have quite put into the shade such book numbers as the fall of the president from his train.

He is an old newspaper vendor who stepped into fame as a design for a stamp, and was subsequently arrested while seated on a bench in the Tuileries park and engaged in the unusual but no doubt pleasant experience of counting what appeared to be innumerable banknotes into a green bag.

Father Cherry was shabby, in-temperate, and looked like a beggar, but he was not. He was engaged in such an occupation. At the police station he explained that the money was legitimately his, that it amounts to something like $25,000, and still more marvellous—that he had won it by means of systematic betting on races in the preceding three weeks.

BETTER INFALLIBLE. On inquiry he turned out to be true, and with profuse apologies he was released. But his troubles were by no means ended. The press got hold of the story and at the next day when Father Cherry turned up he was surrounded by a great crowd of eager backers, determined to know his secret and which horses he fancied for the afternoon.

Leaving his hat in the clutches of the laughing, superstitious crowd, he fled to the fashionable enclosure, only to find the same annoying interest as to his sporting intentions among the top-hatted and the silk-gowned. This was added to the fire by the next morning's announcement that he had again backed some very comfortable winners and won another $4000.

CROWDS SEEK SYSTEM. Since that time he has disappeared, though concerning young journalists his profess to have discovered him again at the Longchamps races yesterday, with his beard shaved and his hair trimmed in disguise. He has turned into something like a legend. Paris has christened him "Le Pere la Cerise," which in itself contains the whole chapter of racing superstition.

Bad luck in French argot is called guigne, signifying the small cherry known as the black-heart. But it is a word never used for fear of misfortune by ill-luck, who use as an equivalent the less magic word of "cerise"—a short and sweet euphemism.

So Father Cherry has come into that short-lived, exultant, think, Paris popularity, and is more talked about than Krassin or Lloyd George—the dirty old man who always wins and his infallible system.

BELLED BUZZARD BELIEVED DEAD

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 24.—The famous "belled buzzard" of South Georgia, known to the people as a "buzzard," is believed to be dead. The buzzard has a small shishbell tied around its neck, said to have been placed there during the War of 1812, and is said to have been seen in South Georgia counties at intervals for many years and was easily distinguished from its companions by its size and the bell around its neck. It was seen several weeks ago at the farm of W. H. Leach, Second Creek, West Virginia.

The famous buzzard has always been a follower of war carnage and is said to have been present at every battle of any size north of the equator. It has been seen as far south as Peru, although its summers were usually spent in the southern states. During the Mexican trouble three years ago it spent two whole years at the border and witnessed every skirmish with the gringos. When the bird was last seen it was flying low with a number of other buzzards and it was especially noticed that the bird had gotten its beak fastened behind the leather strap which supported the bell and was unable to free itself. An attempt to release the head of the bird failed, as it would not allow a person to come within several yards of it.

TAKE LIFE EASY, DON'T WORRY, PRIEST'S ADVICE

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 24.—If you would live beyond three score years and ten and enjoy full strength and vigor, take life easy and don't worry, says Father Mackin, pastor of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church here, who is eighty-two and hale and hearty. For fifty-two years Father Mackin has been a member of the priesthood, though as a young man he was a sailor before the mast on a New Bedford whaler and rounded the seven seas with the many varied experiences which attend such a life, including shipwreck on a desert island.

"Take life as it comes," says Father Mackin. "Never worry about anything. Don't fret because things are thus and so. Try to improve them if you can, but don't be perturbed if you don't succeed. I believe this philosophy has helped me to do with my long life and good health."

It was in 1857 that Father Mackin's ship was wrecked and he was cast up on a coral reef, where he remained until rescued by a British cruiser.

Just now Father Mackin's interest is centered in the Father Mackin Children's Playground, which he is making one of the most popular institutions in Washington.

national training, and best of all, with tenderness and human sympathy. There is the work that shall know the end, for broken spirits do not kill. They only benumb.

Such service lays heavy tribute upon the forces of those who help. And so it is that Miss Sheppard is out in the Piedmont gardens to drive out the shadows that may lurk in her heart. And all the Piedmont friends of the Hostessers are helping in the diverting enterprise.

On Thursday a group of friends were assembled at the Hostessers' for luncheon and bridge with the lovely little lady who is the hostess.

And Mrs. Walton Moore is planning a barbecue in the Moore gardens for her next week.

The visitor will remain in California until August, when her husband will return, and the Walter Reed will know her sunny presence again.

How many weary eyes will smile when she comes "on the floor" again!

Mr. and Mrs. T. Parr and Miss Elaine Parr are touring in Alaska waters. They will remain away until close to the opening of the University of California, when Miss Parr will resume her work in college.

The Burr Bastwoods and Mrs. William Ede are in the High Sierras, the party having carried a time at Wawona, and then motoring on to Yosemite.

FROM FRESNO

Mrs. Harold Cushman Lewis (Jeanette Maxfield) one of the guests of the winter that kept them stirring after the announcement of her intention to wed, is visiting her parents, the Harry U. Mansfields of Piedmont.

A flock of informal little gatherings are being arranged for the bride, who since her marriage has made her home in Fresno.

Mrs. Lewis has brought to her domestic life a fine aesthetic equipment. Indeed she has a professional understanding of illustration and costume.

The visitor was hostess at bridge a few days ago, asking a group of congenial friends to come together for a renewal of associations.

Miss Leonore Pfister, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Pfister of Woolsey street, Berkeley, is spending the month at Lake Tahoe just before leaving for the mountains.

Miss Pfister was hostess at a tea for Miss Helen Clark, daughter of Edward Carmel Balaam. Both girls are graduates of Miss Head's, and both will enter the University of California next semester.

Miss Julia Van Fleet, one of the prettiest girls in the smart set across the bay, is at Del Monte. She is a conspicuous figure wherever groups assemble from the standpoint of beauty and style.

The high mountains have the best of it this year. Of that there's no question.

There's Wawona. No day goes by but outfits do not set out for the higher country, men and women who in other days found their mountain sport sitting around the hotel veranda. But that was in other days when the lure of the open country was new upon the people.

The dinner was in honor of Miss Margaret Deahl, a classmate of Miss Morgan's at Miss Burke's school, and to celebrate the birthday of Miss Margaret Deahl. Among the guests were the Misses Margaret Deahl, Dorothy Kierulff, Patricia Nauman, Doris Fisher, Martha Montgomery, Eleanor Morgan, and Miss Carolyn Cassidy. Among the guests were the Messrs. Kinslow, and his sister, Miss Ruth Kinslow. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Whittle with their young son, are also enjoying the charms of the Sierras. Mr. Whittle is the attorney for the San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Railway and both he and Dr. Kinslow find great relaxation in golf.

Mr. and Mrs. George Uhl have returned to Wawona after a short trip to San Francisco. Mr. Uhl is an ardent fisherman while Mrs. Uhl is one of the best swimmers and equestrians at the resort.

A decided impetus was given to golf by a ball sweepstakes tournament held over the week-end. The winner of the tournament was Charles H. Lovell, while Judge Everett Brown and T. C. Kierulff were second and third.

An interesting foursome daily on the links made up of J. L. Reagan and H. W. Beard of Berkeley, J. D. Patterson of San Francisco and Fresno and Henry Hutchings of San Francisco.

Piedmont Girl Heads All "Y" Aid in Poland

By EDNA B. KINARD

Miss Martha I. Chickering, daughter of Mrs. William H. Chickering of Piedmont and University of California graduate, is now the Young Woman's Christian Association executive for all of Poland. It was in July of last year that the young California woman made her first excursion into that country, to take over the initial unit of the Polish Grey Samaritans. She returned in November after establishing the twenty Polish-American girls in Warsaw, immediately came the plea that Miss Chickering, who has proved her ability and popularity in the war-torn country, be loaned to them until the program outlined for the rehabilitation of the people—particularly of the children—be well under way. The national association assigned the Piedmont girl, who had given the years since her graduation from college to study and active participation in immigration matters, as executive to that nation.

In a delightful little booklet which has come from the pen of Miss Chickering, and which is issued by the overseas department of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association under the title, "Into Free Poland," the story of the suffering little country is recited from the viewpoint of an American girl.

HARDSHIP'S MANY
The journey of the gray-clad party from the time they passed the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor until they arrived in Warsaw to find for themselves that the death rate in the nurseries was approximately 25 percent is feelingly told with a touch of humor and pathos. Paris was reached without unusual incident. There was a month's wait before the courtesy of the Polish Typhus Mission afforded transportation from Coblenz across Germany in a German freight train. Fifty-four cars carrying delousing machines, traction engines and small automobiles, with the Grey Samaritans finding the automobiles the most comfortable perches in their cramped quarters, brought them to the Polish border.

Here they found that the border had been moved 13 kilometers east by Germany after their departure from Coblenz, and the freight for the party had not been paid farther. While the American captain in control of the train argued and the German officers made excuses, the young women lived in a German freight yard under guard, cooking by the rails, for five days and nights. On the track next was an armored train with machine guns and two big Austrian 5's, always with steam up, ready to go in pursuit of the Poles should border trouble flare up. Miss Chickering gave orders that no word of Polish or Polish names must be spoken.

GIRLS VOLUNTEER
For it is to be remembered that the Grey Samaritans, of whom she is in charge, was made up of young Polish girls from America who volunteered for reconstruction work in their native land. The idea was originally suggested by Miss Laura G. Turczynowicz. Three hundred young women took the probation course in a chain of eastern cities. Ninety qualified for the intensive course in the Polish Grey Samaritan school, opened October, 1918, in New York. Seventy-five graduates were given diplomas by the school closed, June, 1919. The courses covered health work, industrial, social, institutional, business, housekeeping problems together with practical work in arts and crafts.

The Y. W. C. A., with the help of a $10,000 donation from the Polish Reconstruction Fund, paid for the training, transportation, equipment and maintenance for a four and one-half month period of these girls. At the end of that time the Polish government, through the Central Children's committee, assumed responsibility for them.

"Poland," declares Miss Chickering, "is a land of brave men and devoted women—eager patriots all—and the Polish government is making wonderful strides in the face of terrific obstacles."

Seeing that no little child need stay away from the school because it has not proper shoes or garments or is hungry is the self-appointed task of the philanthropy department of Oakland Federation of Mothers' Clubs. Mrs. P. L. Pease has assumed direction of the work for the coming year.—Boye Portrait.

Theresa Rich Accepts U. S. Position

Miss Theresa Rich, social worker, has arrived in San Antonio, Texas, where she will be stationed as field agent for the federal government. Miss Rich has been given the important task of gathering statistics as to conditions surrounding camps and in the cities in the district of which San Antonio is the hub. She will work under the treasury, war and navy departments.

The social service program of the government is something but recently developed to which war gave inspiration and impetus. Women of experience are being chosen through competitive examinations under civil service to extend the huge undertaking whose first purpose is to study causes for existing conditions. Miss Rich received her commission early in the month leaving a week ago to assume charge of her new post.

For nine years Miss Rich has been identified with the Alameda County Detention home, where she was among the first of the young women to enter that field of social work. She found time with her multiplicity of duties to become the author of a child's book of fiction which met with popular sale.

Patients "beating it back to life," as Mrs. Edythe Tate-Thompson, executive secretary, California Tuberculosis Association names their fight against the white plague, made and sold $1300 worth of handwork during the last year in the various state sanatoriums.

Some day the California Association is ambitious of having its own shop. In the meantime, the members and sales are being held here and there introducing the handicraft of the men, women and children in its exquisite art to the people of the state who are making the hospitals wherein science is doing its utmost to check and cure the white plague possible through their taxes. Four teachers are working in the sanatorium, instructing in the arts of basketry, bead, copper, needle work and weaving.

To the timid who fear germs, word is sent forth that no danger exists in their purchase, for not only is the manufacturing accomplished in the open air, but every article is properly fumigated before being offered for sale.

Idle hours are not conducive to rapid recovery as experts in the dread disease discovered. Great numbers of young people last year began their procession into the hospitals, bent upon seeking the white plague while yet their recovery was possible. The experiment of introducing some actual work which would not be too arduous, amusing, and that could be translated in terms of dollars and cents, was tried months ago at Arroyo Sanatorium. It was successful. The patients discovered as it was intended that they were taking the rest cure than they could struggling outside. With a new impetus given to the fight for health it was not long before the work became such that it was good enough to commercialize at good values. What had more than served its purpose in Livermore was introduced into the several sanatoriums of California.

Work from one of the California tuberculosis hospitals has been repeatedly pronounced by experts in local training to be the best in the United States as to workmanship and design.

It is the tiny Christmas seal sold for a penny each, twenty-five percent of which is given to the California Tuberculosis Association, to develop the Occupational Therapy, which has made the big program of health and happiness possible.

'Y' Quiz Is Aid to Health

There are all sorts of inventories—so why not health?

"Are you as well as you ought to be," is the question which is being put to the normally healthy woman and girl whose energy and vitality might be improved by wise living. The Young Woman's Christian Association is the health apostle newly arisen. Its program as pronounced both practical and efficient.

The health inventory has been devised by the Social Education Department of the National Board particularly to meet the need of those who may not have the opportunity to visit the association health centers where careful physical and medical examinations are offered as the first step in improvement of the general health of the women of the nation.

Tucked away into remote corners of the country, busied in the great cities, hedged about with duties and responsibilities, is a vast army of women and girls who are not ill but who yet are losing the joyousness of life and do not know why.

Honesty is imperative in answering the list of questions relating to diet, dress, exercise, bathing, personal habits affecting health which being sent out in the health inventories under the "Y" department. Weaknesses may be detected through the questionnaire and to those who will handle them on behalf of the association it will not be difficult to offer remedy by way of exercise and regulated diet to improve conditions. "These are merely charts for the normally healthy person," the association declares. Caution is given that the inventories are not in any way convoluted for the use of invalids or sick persons.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Advertisement.

"A skin you love to touch"

You, too, can have this charm

No matter what other charms you have, they count for little unless you have the greatest of all charms—a clear, fresh skin.

An authority on the skin has said: "Whatever your difficulty is, you can remedy the trouble, if you will only give your skin intelligent care and attention."

The following treatment brings the blood to the surface and stimulates the small muscular fibres. Begin it tonight and see how it will improve your skin.

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. After rinsing your face with warm water, rub a fresh lather of Woodbury's into your skin, using an upward and outward motion. Do this until the skin feels just a little sensitive. Then rinse the skin well in warm water, then in cold, finishing by rubbing for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Always be careful to dry the skin thoroughly.

Make this treatment a regular habit, and in a much shorter time than you would imagine, your skin will take on the greater loveliness that it can have.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

TOOTS AND CASPER PLANTING A BLOW ON THE COCO SURE IS A KNOCKOUT. By Murphy

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND by Adele Garrison

Marvin 719." Alice Holcombe's voice weary with the long strain of waiting through which she had passed while living, to reach me on the telephone, "I'm to my ears over the wire from Patchogue."

"Oh-h!" The exclamation little more than a whisper betrayed the tension to which her nerves were wrought. "Is it really you?" I had such a time to get you."

"Really and truly I—hold the line just a moment." I put the receiver down, walked to the doors leading into the other rooms and closed them quietly, then returned to the telephone stand again. I knew that neither Katie nor any one of the group in the living room would open those doors once I had closed them and I wished privacy for this conversation with Alice Holcombe.

"Now I am ready," I said reassuringly. "What can I do for you?"

There's a train leaving here in 15 minutes reaches Marvin just two hours from now. Can you meet me there or let me come to the house as soon as I get in? I must see you at once. I have just learned something which you ought to know immediately."

I repressed the impulse to tell her that I also had a message of moment for her. She was overwrought as it was. There was no reason for adding one iota to her suspense.

"Let me think a moment," I said. "I cannot very well have you come here because I have the house full of guests. Junior is 1 year old today."

"Oh!" she interrupted with quick contrition. "I ought not to trouble you today. And yet I—"

HER PLAN

"Don't be silly," I interrupted decisively. "Of course I'm going to see you. I have it. Some one has to go to Cresthaven after the ice for them. What time does your train reach Cresthaven?"

"Wait a minute until I find out the information."

"Two o'clock."

"Good. I will get Mr. Graham to drive me to Cresthaven in the car about that time. You get off at the station there, and we can talk while he goes after the ice. Then we will drive you back to Marvin to the station here. There is a train leaves here for Bayview about two forty-five. Of course if we're late you can take the train, directly from Cresthaven; but if not, the ride will be preferable to the wait."

"That's awfully good of you, she said gratefully. "But your husband—does he know—all he object?"

"Don't worry about that part of it," I advised a bit curtly. "Just get off the train at Cresthaven. I'll do the rest."

"I'll be there," she promised earnestly. "Good-by."

I turned from the telephone with a lighted expression and uneasiness. I did not quite see how I was to manage this trip to Cresthaven without interfering with the smoothness of my dinner arrangements. I had planned to send Alfred Durkee and Leila in the car for the ice knowing not only that they would enjoy the chance for the little trip a deux but these deaf and dumb woman," he said. "Almost generally they are clever lip readers, so be sure they get the chance to look at your dainty lips or those of your friend while you're speaking."

"Oh, thank you, Dicky," I returned gratefully. "I never should have thought of that. And please come back to the station sooner than the twenty minutes. You can stand outside, you know. Somehow I'm worried about Alice."

that I would have time for the last touches to my own costume, to Junior's appearance and to my table that as hostess were almost imperative.

But there was no alternative, and with feet that were leaden I went in search of Dicky. I dreaded his comment, for I had guessed shrewdly that he did not particularly care for Alice Holcombe, and I knew that a summons from her would not appeal to him as would one from Lillian, for instance.

His words, of the night before, however, came to me reassuringly. I don't think I've ever failed you when you appealed to me, have I? With a resolute grip upon my courage I resolved to lay the case before him frankly instead of trying to disguise my real reason for going, as I had been tempted to do.

I hunted for him discreetly, for I did not wish to make any mystery out of our going, and was lucky enough to find him alone in his room. "Well, old dear," what's on your mind?" he began flippantly, then at something he saw in my face, he sprang up and came over to me.

"Any trouble, sweetheart?" Anything I can do?" he asked.

I told him of Alice's message, and also thought with a little vaguely worried feeling as I thought of the old-time fault of thoughtless garrulity, of this mysterious man about whom I wished to ask Alice. He listened attentively, but there was a glint of mockery in his eyes when I had finished.

"Of course we'll go," he said, "because you've asked me. But I think the man is probably a real assistant of Stockbridge's, and as for Miss Holcombe I'll bet her excitement will turn out to be a mare's nest. And if you'll pardon the suggestion, I'd turn over those school papers the man wants."

"I think I shall," I said, for I could not reveal even to Dicky the secret concerning Alice Holcombe which Kenneth Stockbridge had placed in my hands.

I was startled at the appearance of Alice Holcombe as Dicky and I came into the little waiting room of the railroad station at Cresthaven. Her pallor was unusual even for her, and her usually brilliant eyes were lustreless. She looked up at us wistfully as we entered, made a desperate effort as I saw Dicky, to rally to her usual sang froid.

"Ah, Mr. Graham," she said, "I do hope you will pardon me for bringing you over here today. But some things have come up that make it imperative for me to see Mr. Graham for a few minutes."

"So I understand from Mrs. Graham," Dicky answered gravely, "and I am only too glad to come. I assure you now tell me how long you wish to talk and I will wait until that time before coming back."

"Oh, perhaps ten or twelve minutes," she answered nervously, looking at me.

"Make it twenty, Dicky," I said in as matter-of-fact manner as possible. "All right," nonchalantly. Then he looked around the room with a quizzical air. "Doesn't look as if you'll have much to disturb you," he commented.

I followed his gaze and smiled. The station held only a cat gray, washing her face and two women in the corner who were carrying on an animated conversation in the deaf and dumb language. Even if they had possessed the sense of hearing, they were out of ear-shot of our conversation. If we spoke with reasonable caution I felt relieved, for I had feared there might be a number of

Western Artists and Their Work

Edward Borein,
Etcher, Wins

LAURA BRIDE POWERS.

SOME years ago—it doesn't matter how many—details are a bore—Charles Sedgwick Alken of beloved memory, then editor of Sunset, said to me: "A cowboy came in here a little while ago with some corking good drawings. He knows his horses, and he knows how to draw them. He's done a cover for Sunset, and it is a peach"—or words to that effect—"and his name is Borein. Look him up."

After that came the Big Shake, and in the shuffle the artist drifted off to New York and down round the Hopi-Navajo country, and so our auras never met.

In the magazine world his illustrations had been bid for by some of the best and some of the worst. He was coming on in the graphic literature of the Southwest, painting and drawing Indians that were still vividly Indian—no Carlyle school stuff in his.

And after a year in the New York canyon where he had a studio with Jimmie Swinnerton down on Forty-second street, near the Knickerbocker, he grew hungry for California—as every Californian must—and he wandered West.

And behold him heading straight for Oakland, where he grew up and learned to rope steers down on the A. A. Moore ranch back of Mission San Jose.

After getting his bearings and saying hello to everybody who knew him when he was "Pete Borein's boy," he set up his studio at 640 Fourteenth street. There I ran him down, making good on that promise made long ago to our good friend who has crossed the bar.

A vivid personality is the artist, who got his first training in aesthetics on the range, much as Charley Russell got his. And the clean-cut laconic terms of the cow-country are still with him, even to his expletives. "Sorry," said the artist, "that my best stuff has all gone on to New York to Keppel's."

There were evidences enough on the walls and on the tables and floor to say that California has another etcher to her bow who until now had given to the East the best of his head and hand.

Why? Were we slow to show him appreciation? Were we niggardly in our encouragement when timidly he began to do things that were demanding expression?

Be that as it may, he has come back to his home town a seasoned observer of life, analytic, humorous, human, straight thinking and blessing every day that he lives that he

"Taming Him," etching by Edward Borein, an Oakland man, who got his first art inspiration on the ranch of A. A. Moore, when he "rode the range." In the years that have passed, he has won recognition in New York, where he exhibits at Keppel's. He is still a cowboy at heart, and has wandered back to Oakland to reproduce the life he loves on copper. His studio is 640 Fourteenth street.

is once again in the finest spot in the world. Soon we were going over the wonderful Indian art craft that he had gathered from the Hopis and the Navajos and the Blackfeet—examples of color combinations that no modern has ever rivaled and that few can equal.

"How do they do it?" I asked. "It's in them. They feel it. It's come down from the ages. Take an old Navajo squaw. She'll come into a store in the morning after riding a hundred miles to get wool for her blanket. After sitting around for a hour or two looking at the colors, she'll grin, 'Give me five pounds red.'

"She'll pay for it, and go out. 'By and by she'll wander in and sit around an hour or two, looking at the wool, and say, 'Give me two pounds black,' and saying for it, will go out."

"She'll repeat the performance until she has finished her shopping late in the afternoon, after having done her designing and her figuring in her astute old head. And when she has finished her blanket, there's won't be a pound of wool too much nor too little. They are consummate artists, these Indians."

No argument is necessary in the presence of such exquisite beadwork where a sense of color can be expressed with almost as much dexterity and subtlety as with pigment.

So it was among these true American artists that Mr. Borein has had much of his training.

Obviously, he chooses to be known as an etcher, rather than as a painter, however.

As an etcher, his love for color is obvious. His tones are rich and luscious in most of his plates—although he insists that his best things were off to Keppel's—his light and dark the honest result of lines. No smeared plates—the old artists of the trade. His values are honestly won, as manifested in some of his Old Mission series.

There is danger in the artist's violent reaction from the modern movement—that is, moving from the broad, loose technique of his "Sheep" plate into a meticulous method, where detail is observed to the possible weakening of the central thought or idea.

However, since he is working for detail, he must be judged by his success in achieving it. But wouldn't he go further if he had not right about-faced when he was working in the more subtle manner of suggestion, after the manner of moderns?

The etcher is at work upon his Old Mission series that has as much historic as aesthetic interest, which should not minimize its art value, unless fact be permitted to dominate.

But the Oakland etcher is too much the artist for that.

A welcome to the new studio in Oakland town!

Philip Lewis has had his studio in his East Oakland home since he first began to paint. William S. Rice has his, and Messrs. Gay and Gay and Gay and a few other adventurous souls have set up studios on the sunrise side of the bay. But none of them are downtown, in true Bohemian fashion.

Mr. Borein is the pioneer.

GERMAN PRINCESS ACCUSED BY WIFE

The baron, who for some time was with the North German Lloyd Steamship company in New York, is fighting his wife's suit for divorce. To prove the character and conduct of her husband with other women, the baroness, through her lawyer, has asked the court to summon Princess Eitel-Friedrich, with whom she alleges, her husband boasted to her he had intimate relations, or what

7,000,000 TAKE TIPS, IS FEDERAL CENSUS FIGURE

By RALPH F. COUCH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Approximately 7,000,000 persons in the United States now depend on "tips" or gratuities for a major part of their earnings, the occupation report of the 1920 census soon to be issued is expected to show.

This would be an increase of approximately 2,000,000 persons in the tipping occupations since 1910.

Advancing living costs and "national extravagance" are causes for the increase according to students of social causes and government officials who study the census reports. Some of these deplore the rapidly increasing number of persons in the tipping occupations. About 3,000,000 women now depend on tips as a regular part of their earnings, reports indicate.

The number of occupations in which tips are regularly coming to be regarded as a part of the compensation is also increasing.

More than 100 such occupations now have been listed including that of barbering in which until a few years ago tips were unknown, chauffeurs, messenger boys, manicurists, and department store saleswomen.

Labor unions officials are coming to be interested in the tipping occupations. One tipping practice tends to keep down wages, union officials say, one labor official is giving support to the American Anti-Tipping society which recently established headquarters here for a long term national educational campaign.

Secretary Scott of the society is editor of a weekly magazine established by the society to carry on the campaign. According to one estimate, based on census reports, approximately $3,000,000,000 changes hands annually in tips. On this basis 1,400,000 families of five persons each the Germans call a "Verhaeltnis" (liaison).

This comes close upon a little scandal in the Dresden opera house when a royal Prussian princess—the wife of another of the ex-kaiser's sons—had her devotionally slaved by the indignant frau of her chauffeur. The princess was in the opera sitting with her chauffeur, with whom she is alleged to be infatuated. The slapping was followed by a storm of applause.

depend for their entire income on the tipping occupation.

Sociological experts and government officials interested in the tipping question are eagerly awaiting the occupation report of the Census bureau. They derive their data from the report although it makes no direct mention of the tipping occupations as such. The report merely lists the number of persons of each employed in "gainful occupations." Those in which tips are regularly considered a part of the compensation are known.

England Is Amazed at Doug and Mary

By EARL G. REEVES.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
LONDON, July 24.—Mary and Doug were more like Mary and Doug than anybody expected.

That seems to be England's verdict. During their whirlwind visit to England a lot of people ranked every member of the party as a reporter and photographer at every turn, and that was not finally to move quickly and secretly if they were to see any of the England they had come to see.

During their visit Theda Bara, the best-known vamp, was among the sages. During their visit to the country, "Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks" fairly stumbled over reporters and photographers at every turn, and that was not finally to move quickly and secretly if they were to see any of the England they had come to see.

Colonel House gumshoed into town and despite the fact that some national conventions back home made his visit a deep and silent mystery, the Colonel managed only to land in the newspapers to the extent of a few briefs on inside pages.

Others neglected.

There were a few more or less notable spokesmen from across the Atlantic among the great men at Epsom, Johnstone, Hagen and the like. Of course, they landed page one now and then, but for the most part the sport pages held them.

But the "world's sweetheart," to quote the London press, and the man who married her and who has other claims to fame as well—these two, they landed page one now and then, but for the most part the sport pages held them.

Several more or less prominent in England "journalists" went into the "presence" without the proper spirit of awe due to the royalty of movie land. They admitted as much when they came away. They wrote as much when they told the stories of their interviews. They didn't expect to find Doug such an irrepressible regular fellow as he's painted by the camera.

Then they saw and listened and told the British public that the pair were more like themselves than anyone could believe possible.

"Mary and a little lamb" was one playful headline over the story of the mobbing of the famous visitor at the theatrical garden party.

Another English journalist told how Doug sought quiet and seclusion by straddling the balustrade on a balcony at the Ritz. And how the pair of them sought to escape recognition at the horse show by wearing the clothes they'd been photographed in the day before.

There was an ironic note now and then in the accounts of the Pickfords and Fairbanks. But these notes were wasted. The great General Public was interested to the point of real instead of real life.

The women who sought for auto-graphs didn't care whether the Fairbanks family were seeking a quiet honeymoon by walking out into the glare of the spotlight. They only hoped that the film idols would keep it up.

They kept it up, apparently, as long as they could. Then they escaped to the quiet of the country. Lord Northcliffe, publisher and cabinet-maker, first gave them safe haven. Then the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland.

Douglas MacLean and Douglas MacLean were printed. Their short visit, but the one that seemed to hit off their situation the best was voiced by Fairbanks.

"I knew I'd marry the world's sweetheart," he said, "but I didn't know I was going on a honeymoon with the whole world."

Marlin Beck, president of the Orpheum circuit, will sail for Europe September 1 in search of novelties for the Orpheum theater. He will be accompanied by the Orpheum's production manager, Charles Feleky.

DOUGLAS MACLEAN DOUGLAS MACLEAN

Comedy, tragedy, melodrama, love, romance, adventure, music, drama, vaudeville, pictures, polo, swimming—all these are offered by the local amusement palaces for the week opening today. The following announcements are made:

ORPHEUM—A sextet of headliners is announced this week with no less stage personages than Louise Dresser, Jack Gardner, Percy Brown, Willie Baldwin, Val and Ernie Stanton, at the top of the bill. Louise Dresser and Gardner will present a cycle of individual songs "Visions of 1870" with elaborate costumes, songs and music are the Brown-Baldwin offerings. The Stanton, billed as "The English Boys from America," put on a comedy skit "The Man of the Ice Wagon," a farce comedy, the three Danes in a new program of feats: Patsy Hawaiians in musical and dance numbers, Chong and Rosie Moxy in Chinese versions of American songs. Chinese comedy, "Tonic of the Day" and Fox news complete the new bill.

YE LIBERTY—The sale of seats for "Linger Longer Letty," in which Miss Charlotte Greenwood comes to Oakland, will begin today at the box office. The theater, which has been closed since June 22, has been completely renovated and redecorated. Miss Greenwood, who has completed her fourth week's engagement in San Francisco, will inaugurate the fall season at a Monday night performance, remaining through a Saturday night with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The New Bostonians, the light opera organization which has been playing in San Francisco, is programmed for the second week of the new season offering a repertoire of old and new favorites.

FULTON—"Tillie" will make her debut today, presenting the love tale which has been adapted from Helen Reimsnyder Martin's novel. "Tillie, a Menominee Maid," Lillian Foster will take the title role, with J. Anthony Smythe playing opposite. Others of the Fulton players who will make up the cast are: John Ivan, Mira McKinley, Frank Harlan, John Fee, George P. Webster, Ed Russell, George Taylor, Claire Sinclair, Oreta Porter. The play revolves about a conservative, frugal colony in which "Tillie" grows up to lend humor and pathos to friends and neighbors. The half-hour concert arranged by Musical Director Wallace Hawthorn has been selected from operas, featuring the "Bohemian Girl" and light opera airs between the acts.

AMERICAN—Clara Kimball Young appears today in "For the Soul of Rafael," a tale of the early Spanish days in California. "A Broadway Cowboy," starring William Desmond, completes the western angle. In her new vehicle Miss Young finds opportunity for some exciting emotional acting. Particular attention has been devoted to the costume in the Spanish story. How a westerner may impress the Great White Way is shown in the Desmond vehicle.

John Wharry Lewis and his orchestra have arranged a program of popular numbers to supplement the double bill. Edgar Baylis will be heard in an organ group.

Al Jolson Signs Movie Contract

Al Jolson, the blackface comedian, who is still smiling and saying nothing in the face of more-than-whispered rumors that he and his young wife are about to effect a reconciliation, will reappear in "Sinbad" on August 27 concluding a long vacation much of which was spent in the lobby at Hotel Oakland.

When Jolson was here, his former wife was here. At the end of his vacation nears, Jolson is at Atlantic City and reports that his former wife is also there.

Those going East, Jolson went to Los Angeles where he signed to appear in a new feature, "Excuse Me." While nothing authentic is yet out, it is reliably reported that the sum he will get for this picture will be the largest ever paid a single star for a single feature.

Jolson's contract with the Schurber of New York is for $10,000 for a single concert before the Democratic National convention. Next season he will enter the producing field and has already chosen five plays for this purpose.

Jolson is in Oakland evidently agreed with him for he tipped the scales at 175 pounds more on his return to New York than he did upon leaving for his vacation.

Another Revue Added to List

By DIXIE HINES
NEW YORK, July 24.—Another "revue" was added to the sweltering list this week when Will Morrissey, a young man of interesting personality, offered his "comiques," Morrissey learned his French in France where he was one of the first entertaining units to deliver the goods to the doughty and Elizabeth Brice, who was associated with this same unit, is now in the commercial version. In "Buzza Around," by which this entertainment matter is identified, is not up to the pulchritude and colorful standard of some others, it at least shows cleverness, originality and great promise. The company includes some pretty girls, good dancers of both sexes and a few vaudeville importations. One young woman sang some undistinguishable words to the music of Carmen. The language used was one of the mysteries of the evening. But altogether Morrissey himself, who is here, there and everywhere, Miss Brice, Walter Wilson, Violet Inglefield, Ernest Young, Robert Morrissey, Alida and others helped a lot, and one number, a burlesque of the Barrymores, Lionel and Ethel and—John, was decidedly clever and revives the presumably lost art of travesty.

The Belmont theater will be opened early in September with its first musical play, "Little Miss Charity," which will be the premier offering of Richard G. Herndon, the manager of this theater.

Lou Tellegen, who has a new play by Augustus Thomas called "Underneath the Bough," will open early in September. It was produced on tour lately and except for Ruano Bogislav, the cast will be almost new.

Rachel Barton Butler departed this week for Los Angeles, where Oliver Morosoff will produce shortly her new comedy, "Mam," which, it is said, will open the Little theater in September. She wrote "Mama's Affair."

Marie de Carabosse, a writer new to the stage, has several plays scheduled for next season. One, "Debits of Soul," is now being written by three of the best known emotional actresses on the American stage.

Georges Plateau, the French actor who was a brilliant contribution to the American stage last year, may remain permanently in the United States and build up an extensive repertoire of character plays in which he excels.

Robert Casadesu, the French actor and art director of the late Theatre Parisien, is making his first English appearance with Emily Sever and next season may combine acting in the English and French languages.

Whitford Kane, who directs the Celtic Players, the group of Irish Nationalists, the Bramhall playhouse, is preparing to include a group of Shakespearean plays in his standard repertoire this year.

Charles E. Blaney will revive for a tour "His Chinese Wife" next month and send three companies out. He also plans to build two new stock theaters in New York. He is now one of the largest stock managers.

In the De Luxe Pavilion is announced, The Leo Politz Trio, introducing the latest novelty songs, will appear in connection with Fayson's Band at the Palm Beach concert.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to learn to swim, hundreds of adults and children have registered for the free swimming lessons which have been offered by the management.

BROADWAY—For the first time in Oakland H. B. Warner in "God's Man" will be shown today. Romantic and thrilling situations make the unfolding of the story. "Her Private Husband," a first run Sunshine comedy, offers the laughter and the unfolding of the story. Write Only For Stars, Says King

Henry King is a screen director and actor of note on the West Coast. He was born in Lafayette, Va., in 1888, was educated at Roanoke, Va., began his stage career at 17 and at 19 was appearing in Shakespearean roles on the road. Here are a few paragraphs from a recent interview:

"Stars and directors are hungry, almost ravenous, for ideas that focus on one or two figures. The writer who submits a story of three kind and once makes for himself a champion of the star."

"Study the special characteristics of the stars. Pick out one and write definitely for him or her and not only fit the action accordingly, but make that star dominate the action at every stage."

Portland, Oregon, has just come out of a musicians' strike. The end came when an injunction against a sympathetic strike of all musicians was issued by the local court.

Exhibitors Now Make Most Money, Wail

It wasn't so long ago that the movie theater owner was bitterly complaining about the unjust division of profits. "The producer is getting it all," he cried.

Then, a little while later, the producer reached the conclusion that the star was getting all the glory and he was holding the sack, if that figure of speech is permissible.

"We're just working for the star," complained the producer.

And now the cycle is complete. The theater owner is making the most money, according to producer and star, and they would faint out in on his profits through a percentage, or some other system.

MENDED SHOES
AS NEWEST FAD

That is particularly true in states where the only grounds for absolute divorce are adultery.

MEN ARE CLEVER

"Men are clever. They usually can tell when they are being watched. And since their activities are watched or they put on the soft pedal, and friend wife is left just where she was before, except that she has a detached and superior view."

"Of course. I know it's an old, old idea, but if men and women knew either the husband or the wife was watching them, the wife would be each would exert himself or herself more to hold the love of the husband or wife."

Miss Floyd, who took special courses in domestic relations at the Washington College of Law, says she doesn't think a man or a woman and that she'll go to Reno as soon as she has completed some cases now pending in the District.

LONDON, July 24.—Society women are looking to their souls. Old shoes are being made new in a "society" repair shop in the West End.

"Because the price of broad satin and kid is at a fabulous figure," they say, "society is having its evening clothes resoled instead of buying new."

Since the shop has luxurious appointments and bears a gold leaf name, it is almost as expensive as the original article.

But it is fashionable at the moment to go in for "economy," and the shop is flourishing.

"Cinderella could hardly have prized her glass slippers more than society is clinging to the old ballroom fitters," says Miss Doris Eaton, the proprietress of the new shop.

"It's harder for a rich man, or a poor man, or any other kind of man, to get a divorce in the District of Columbia than it is for the dromedary of Biblical fame to penetrate the needle's eye," said Miss Florence who has very decided notions as to how liberal divorce laws should be.

"Of course, it may be that the wise is father to the thought," she continued, "but I believe divorce should be as free as marriage—free as the state does not do much such as that a divorce cannot be sought attached to every marriage license; but more properly it should be issued more easily than a passport. Divorce laws were much easier in Greece.

DISCUSES GROUNDS

"Incompatibility should be ground for divorce in every state. I believe it is the biggest reason for divorce for those who are married to live together when they can't get along than it is for persons who are not married to live together in harmony. Of course, there are many other grounds for divorce, a theory that could be put into practice. Nevertheless, it's my own idea.

"The divorce laws of many states of the Union are as antiquated as the laws of England. The only difference is that in England some effort is being made to reform the laws. While over here they will, like the brook, go on like this forever.

"The laws of England, however, work undue hardship on women, and are only good for one thing, namely, to give employment to a lot of pro-

AN FRANCISCO, July 17.—William Kent has been hit by several boomerangs in his contest for the Republican nomination for the United States senatorship, but none has struck him more forcefully or exposed a more pathetic lack of perspective, than his attempt to draw the mantle of the late Colonel Theodore Roosevelt across his shoulder. Kent or some one of his large staff of propagandists, recently called attention to the fact that in a race for Congress in the First Congressional district which Kent made some years ago, Colonel Roosevelt had written him a letter expressing pleasure and good wishes. This was designed, as have been many other attempts by men of small calibre, to give the public the impression that Kent was Roosevelt's kind of a man; that he enjoyed high favor with the late ex-President. But apparently it was hoped that a very interesting part of the record of the relations between Kent and Colonel Roosevelt would be forgotten. During his last term in the House of Representatives Kent introduced a bill. This bill is printed, filed and identified as H. R. 11331. It was introduced by Kent on February 11, 1916, and referred to the Committee on Pensions. As recording a sad moment in the career of any man who asks honors at the hands of his fellow Americans, it is reproduced verbatim:

A BILL

For the encouragement and relief of might-have-been heroes.

Whereas, the House of Representatives has recently passed a bill known as "a bill to establish in the War Department and in the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as 'The Army and Navy Medal of Honor Roll,' and for other purposes"; and Whereas, said bill passed by a vote of two hundred and eleven to one hundred and eight, one hundred and fourteen not voting; and Whereas, it is recognized that heroes go beyond the call of duty, even in times of peace, to cause the exhibition of such heroism in time of war; therefore

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that all persons in the United States of warlike aspirations who have been prevented from exhibiting their heroic patriotism and enjoying the emoluments thereof, including the holding of public office, by the action of molluscoides who have prevented war, shall be examined by a committee consisting of the great militant psychologists, Hugo Munsterberg and the molluscoides themselves, and that in consideration of services they might have performed, if given opportunity under the ennobling conditions of modern war, that they should be granted medals of honor for latent superlative patriotism that they might have exhibited which might have gone beyond the call of duty, if not prevented from such exhibition by the molluscoides aforesaid.

SEC. 2. The out of moneys not otherwise appropriated, such might-have-been heroes shall receive a pension of $25 a month from and after the taking effect of this bill until the time (to be guessed at by said psychologists) when, but for the dastardly preservation of the peace of this Nation, they might have lived or perished gloriously in the super-heroic excess of ultra-patriotic sacrifice.

The above was Kent's way of lampooning, ridiculing and wounding treacherously, through his official position, the great American who desired to arouse and did arouse the people to a sense of the dangers which then threatened and which it was soon to be necessary to meet with armed defense. Now, in the interest of his latest political campaign, Kent tries to make it appear that Colonel Roosevelt was his friend. Sincere admirers of the late ex-President who are acquainted with the above and other circumstances are not pleased with the trick.

Prophecy Being Fulfilled

It may be recalled by readers of this page that when two police judges and some others were indicted on graft charges I took occasion to say the trouble was nothing new; that the offenses charged were well known so far as anything is ever known in common knowledge; that disclosures along the same line had been made before; that persons singled out had been singled out before; that while it was well enough known that the affairs "probed" were rotten, and the common belief that those in the maelstrom were guilty, it was also believed that they would not suffer from this crusade. A jury brought in a verdict of acquittal in the first case tried under the indictments, to which I called attention as verifying my prediction, and I then prophesied farther that not only would none of the indicted or accused be brought to book but that the practices out of which the charges grew on which the grand jury acted would not be abated though they might undergo a new camouflage. Affairs are settling down in full accordance with this prophecy. Those who might be supposed to be at least in a baleful light have not been in the least abashed, one of the occupants of the bench that seemed reflected upon aspiring to a higher bench, with fair prospect of attaining it.

Tendency Now Is to Merge

Time was, and not so very long ago, when the tendency was to start such enterprises as banks and newspapers almost over night. As to newspapers, there was a saying that anybody with a hatful of type was sufficiently equipped to surprise the community with a brand new publication, wherein it was volubly explained that the new venture was to fill a long-felt want, and that it had come to stay. It was somewhat the same way as to banks. A group of men who might or might not have that command of capital necessary in the banking business would suddenly buy a showy safe, some trays that would stack up a display of coin and open up for business. But of late this impromptu way of starting such ventures has been abandoned. It requires something considerably more than a hatful of type to start a newspaper, and the tendency as to banks is to merge those already established, instead of founding new ones. There are fewer banks in the city today than at any period since the very earliest times. The latest rumor of merging is that the Fleishhakers are to take over the Well Fargo Nevada National. The rumor has been persistent, and Herbert Fleishhaker was asked about it. He says there is no foundation for it; that the London-Paris institution and its ramifications are highly prosperous, and that his idea is to shed some of the responsibilities that he is now shouldering, instead of taking on new ones.

The Migration to Market Street

One of the rumors in the money district is that the San Francisco Savings and Loan Society, now prospering at 526 California street, where it prospered for years as the German Savings and Loan Society, feels the need, as all savings banks seem to, of coming out to Market street. In this connection there is a story that the need began to be felt some time ago, and that its management had its eye to the corner at Powell and Eddy streets. That was owned by an estate that had to have the money, and for that reason, possibly, it was felt that there was no hurry. While agents were scurrying around to consummate the sale, The Knave heard that the Bank of Italy was a likely purchaser. A direct query brought the curt answer that the bank was not seeking a new location, and had no intention of seeking one. In a very short time news that the Bank of Italy had bought that commanding corner on which it is now building was published. Perhaps those who were at the head of the Savings Society asked a similar question, and receiving a similar answer, concluded to wait a while. Anyhow the story now is that the Savings Society missed a chance there, and has found it difficult since to secure an eligible site at a price that is within reason. Since the former Techna Tavern site was on the market, desirable corners on the great highway have not only sailed away almost out of sight in price but have become very scarce.

Market Street Congestion

When the proposition was being discussed to lay two additional tracks in Market street for the accommodation of the municipal line, every representation possible was made by merchants, property owners and the unclassified populace against it. What was foreseen has happened, only it has happened a good deal more intensely than it was foreseen. It was well understood that the congestion would make it almost impossible for pedestrians to cross safely. Not only has the understanding been realized, but it has been exceeded. Much discussion has taken place as to what to do. An undue proportion of the police force has been detailed to act as conveying squadrons, holding up traffic while hapless people afoot hike precipitately from one side to the other. But this is not giving satisfaction. Indeed, it is difficult to imagine what will meet the emergency short of removing the extra tracks, which of course is not likely to be done. But Supervisor Power is to the fore with a proposition to mitigate it. He proposes an ordinance which shall require cars on the outside tracks to halt five feet from the rear end of cars on the inner tracks which have stopped to take up or set down passengers, and not to get under way again till the cars ahead have resumed their way. This will be appreciated by pedestrians who recognize the danger of being caught between cars that are passing each other in the same direction, also those coming in opposite direction; but the street car men are up in arms against it. Supervisor Power isn't a street car man, and consequently is sure that this won't make any difference in a car's time; but seasoned carmen say it will make a lot of difference. The proposed ordinance will come up for discussion next Monday.

Candidates to Be Quizzed

The Civic League of Improvement Clubs and Associations is frequently referred to, but when George Skaller is mentioned it is accepted as and amounts to the same thing. He comes nearest to being the whole works of anybody that ever pushed in front such a barage of high-sounding organizations. Now we have the announcement of the committee "which is to have charge of the work of framing the questions to be put by the League to candidates." It has been appointed by George Skaller. The Civic League has self-constituted power to endorse candidates for all elective offices, including legislators and not excluding superior judges. Mr. Skaller admits that under our form of government anybody may try for a superior judgeship, though all things being equal, incumbents should be re-elected. But all who aspire to elective office are to be put through a quiz, and whether they receive the endorsement of the Civic League of Improvement Clubs and Associations will depend on how they answer the questions that will be put to them. Probably certain prospective candidates will not be as outspoken to George as they have been to me when they read his unshrinking statement as it appeared in a newspaper last week. They will not invite anybody's open hostility; but they will have an opinion of this ambitious effort to born into practical politics, and will neither greatly fear nor favor it.

Election Betting

Betting may not decide anything; still, it is at least as much of an indication of popular sentiment as the straw vote. The Literary Digest's straw vote campaign, conducted on most elaborate lines, indicated the nomination of neither of those who became the candidates. The betting trend cannot be much farther off than this, and the chances are that it is more to be relied on, as it is backed by coin, whereas the straw vote is a costless and therefore lackadaisical indication. Immediately after the Democratic nomination the odds were 2 to 1 in favor of Harding. Eastern reports were that Cox supporters saw that the odds were likely to go to 3 to 1, and were forming a pool to support their candidate. The gambler's view was that that would be a good bet anyhow, and the politician's view was that it would be a wise political move, reassuring the cold-footed contingent. But the odds have not jumped beyond 2 to 1 and latterly they have not been as strong at that as they were at first. Wagers are reported from New York of $1000 even that Cox will carry Ohio, and $1000 to $2000 that he will carry California; also $1000 to $1500 that he will carry New York State. The latest reports show slight fluctuations in favor of Cox when the third party movement was most formidable, and favorable to Harding upon the announcement that the Democratic candidate had agreed with the President to make the League of Nations pact the main issue of the campaign. Evidently bettors are still at sea for dope as to election results.

The Petition Solicitor

Not long ago I had something to say of the financial "drives" that were fairly driving people distracted. As the representative of one concern, they came in such succession, with a pattern all learned by heart and framed in a way to put the firm which refused to give down in an undesirable position, that the major portion of his time was devoted to framing the firm's diplomatic declination to contribute, or to come across with the least possible contribution that would do. Prominent people sometimes loaned aid to these drives, and not all the demands could be brusquely waived aside. But finally the evil became so pronounced that it fell of its own weight. Canvassing for and managing drives became a regular business, engaged in by experts who worked on a percentage. As soon as this became generally known those who were besought had no compunction in peremptorily refusing. Now the practice shifts to initiative petition solicitors. You encounter them—or rather, they encounter you—everywhere. They are not as big a problem as the financial drivers, but they are wearying. The secret of it is that they get ten cents a name. They are generally not concerned in the merits of the measure they seek to have you assist in getting on the ballot. Possibly you don't understand it; anyway, you sign as the quickest way of despatching the matter. The solicitor is the beneficiary, and the public is too often the victim, in unwittingly taking a burden not understood but endorsed because it was the simplest way to escape an annoyance. The initiative petition solicitor is a successor of the "drive" solicitor, somewhat mitigated in his objectionable quality but still an affliction.

Intimate Notes From Japan

Extract from a private letter from a Californian engaged in business in Yokohama: "We have labor troubles here, which may be a surprise to you. The Japanese have no labor unions as they exist in America, but they have guilds, which from my point of view are more effective than any labor union ever organized. Members of these guilds make their demands, and if these are not acceded to they simply do not come to work, and they intimidate others, so that you are absolutely unable to get anyone to fill the positions that have been vacated. There are no riots or picketing or disturbances, as the Japanese authorities prohibit strikes. But the guilds have such absolute power over their members and the labor situation in general that you have to settle with them according to their demands. Wages have increased here 150 per cent in the last five years, and living expenses have gone up 250 to 300 per cent. Without doubt, Japan is one of the most expensive countries to live in today, and also a country where you get the least for your money. Help has not increased its efficiency with its pay. As a matter of fact it is about 35 per cent less efficient. It takes at least five Japanese to do the work of one white man. . . . The more Americans visit Japan, China and the Orient and size up the political situation here, the less chance there will be of anti-oriental propaganda that some newspapers there delight in, with the danger of causing the United States to become involved with this country. As a matter of fact, the sensational American newspapers are holding their country up to ridicule before other nations. It would be an international crime for a first-class power such as the United States to go to war with Japan. Japanese efficiency and ability to handle themselves and their war machinery has been so greatly overrated that it is difficult for the people to understand the real truth; and due to the fact that the papers publish so much regarding the menace of the Japanese, an element in this country believe that they are quite capable of standing off the United States—all of which they would be rudely awakened from if anything of this nature should occur. I speak with absolute knowledge when I say that other powers, including some of the allies, would be delighted to see the United States take Japan on and give her a good trimming, they not caring to spend the money or take the responsibility. Hence a great deal of propaganda is being circulated, not only in this country, but through Europe, that the ultimate outcome of the various differences between Japan and the United States over immigration and other economic problems will result in war."

Roosevelt on the Japanese

It is interesting while the subject is under Congressional investigation to consider Theodore Roosevelt's position on the Japanese question. Some insight may be obtained from John J. Leary's biographical sketches, wherein intimate talks with the great American were recalled. One of these sketches, published in McClure's Magazine for July, 1919, treats of Roosevelt's break with Taft. There were several irritations, which, as narrated, give the reader the idea that Roosevelt felt a proprietary interest in his successor, which the successor at first acknowledged, but later ignored. This concerned cabinet appointments and the carrying out of policies, concerning which latter there is this elucidation: "We had a perfectly good treaty with Japan, under which we had the right to pass exclusion laws. Japan asked that we not do so, offering to make a gentleman's agreement to keep her folks at home if we would not pass such a law. The agreement was made, and kept; but we had a right to force exclusion under a treaty if Japan did not do what was right. Mr. Taft, however, went to work and made a new treaty, in which that right to exclude was waived, we relying on their gentleman's agreement, which they may or may not live up to, as circumstances may seem best to them. That was a mistake and how California ever let that treaty go through is beyond me. Now as matters stand, Japan can do as it pleases. The part of wisdom was to have retained that provision of the old treaty as a club."

The Wooden Federal Way

On several occasions in discussing matters in which they were involved I have referred to the wooden ways of federal bureaus; but an instance recently brought to my attention eclipses all those which went before. A typist in one of the bureaus lost the key to her steel locker, where she kept her hat and things. A duplicate key had to be provided, and did they send for a locksmith and have him fix it up in a few minutes? By no means whatever. "Departmental Regulations—Series X 198—For Official Use Only," is a formidable tome designed to meet such emergencies. There is a chapter directing what to do as to lost, strayed, stolen or broken keys. It contains twelve paragraphs, numbered 9462 to 9473, inclusive. The first one recites that "if an employee loses or breaks a key to any room, office, cabinet, desk, drawer, closet, box, locker or other receptacle he shall report the fact, with explanations, in writing, to the chief in his divisions." Then the effort to repair the damage follows a labyrinth through chiefs of divisions, clerks, mechanics, purchasing agents and messengers until it would require a very alert mind to keep track of the twelve steps described in the twelve paragraphs. In the meantime, if the typist's vanity box is immured with her other paraphernalia, her nose is in danger of taking on an intense shine, for it consumes a week to officially produce the key to open the locker.

Explaining the Earthquake

I had not heard of an attempt to account for the Los Angeles earthquake on new hypotheses until I read a statement by J. H. Prentice of that city in a Washington paper. He says that "so-called scientists" had advanced the theory that the quake was due to the large amount of oil taken out of the ground in that vicinity. "They say that so much oil has been removed that it created a vacuum, and that the earth settled down in consequence." The usual Los Angeles habit comes forth here. Not leaving the ridiculousness of such a theory to stand out for itself, it is explained that in the first place, any danger from this source around Los Angeles was passed long ago. "The wells in the vicinity of the city have been producing for years, and now there is only a steady gradual flow." That wouldn't disprove the theory if there was anything to it, but it might reassure timorous persons not give to scientific reflection who have had some idea of migrating thither and who would therefore become qualified subjects for the real estate. Again we have an exemplification of the adage about a ruling passion being strong in death.

How Lawson Butted In

An outstanding feature of the international yacht race is the casual interest taken in it. The accounts are not featured, and if you ask how the race went yesterday, for instance, the person questioned will be likely to answer that he forgot to look when he was reading the news. Whereas, in former times—when Lord Dunraven contested with the Valkyrie, in 1895, or in the first attempts of Sir Thomas Lipton with his Shamrocks—the news vied with that of a world series, or of the old-time bouts for the world's championship. There was an immense difference between Dunraven and Lipton as to their sportsmanship, however. Dunraven charged fraud against the defender, a charge that he was invited to prove. Not proving it, and not apologizing, he was expelled from honorary membership in the New York Yacht Club. We have had several examples of Lipton's thorough sportsmanship during his several efforts. I fail to find any reference in any of the accounts to Thomas W. Lawson's attempt to butt into the America's cup races. Of course it is generally known that Lawson is a very rich and somewhat eccentric resident of Boston, who emerges at intervals and attracts attention in various ways. He seems to have been denied membership in the New York Yacht Club, holder of the America's cup, yet aspired to have a hand in the cup's defense. In the late nineties or the beginning of this century, he caused to be constructed a defender, and proposed to enter it in the races then pending. His propositions were entertained by neither the challenger nor the defending club. After completing and elaborately equipping a craft—and it was represented to be a creditable specimen of naval architecture—he sailed over the course, and shortly afterwards had it dismantled and broken up. My recollection of this incident is due to having received a magnificent volume illustrated with cuts of the yacht that never had a chance, together with pictures of all the yachts that have contested for the America's cup, and a detailed history of this great international event, and of course an account of his controversy with the New York Yacht Club over his effort to participate in the cup contests. The book was such a notable contribution to yachting bibliography that I felt bereaved over its disappearance, it presumably having been "absorbed" by somebody who recognized from several standpoints its value.

Increase of Car Fare

What is very likely to happen is an increase in street-car fare. The employees of the municipal lines have demanded $6 a day and this cannot be met in any other way. Previous to the high-cost era street car companies were not having it easy. In various cities they have been permitted to increase fares, the city of Oakland not being an exception. The situation in San Francisco, therefore, is not a solitary instance. It would not be an embarrassment to the municipal administration if it did not mean so much. An increase in carmen's pay means only that to a private corporation; but when the carmen are municipal employees it means demands from other employees in other service—a raise all along the line. Besides, there is bound to be clamor when the San Francisco constituencies have to pay more. It will have political effect, which the municipal official always seeks to avoid. There have been many vainglorious boasts that municipal management would show something over private management, which a considerable contingent believed, and this will be an awakening. It is not a surprise to those who knew how such things turn out and it is not a disaster. The surprise would be that the increase in fares has been delayed so long. But it would be an immense argument for municipal ownership if the increase had not been found to be necessary.

Lemare Grateful for Appreciation

3927 CLAY STREET, S. F., July 15.—To THE KNAVE: Thank you ever so much for your uniform and consistent appreciation of my efforts and the difficulties of my civic problems. Regarding your article of July 11 I recognize in Mr. Uda Waldrop a young organizer of merit and assured future. To have within easy reach a wonderful and responsive organ—I dream of it as only responsive to serious effort—is, indeed, a blessing for all ambitious and worthy musicians, and I assure you, sir, that I am not only willing, but anxious to further the opportunity so given for all striving to attain high musical ideals. This willingness is accentuated by the hope that those honored by such opportunity will have an ever-present stimulus to uphold the dignity and ethics of my profession. Again thanking you,

I am sincerely yours,

SHORTAGE OF GAS IS NOW AT AN END

By JIM HOULIHAN

The gasoline shortage which has been in effect in many cities of Northern California is at an end. The experiences of motorists coming back from various Sierra mountain resorts are any criterion. TRIBUNE map-making crews which log mountain tours every week and have found that in the last two weeks it has been possible, in practically every instance where they have made investigation, that ample supplies of the fuel could be secured in abundant quantities.

Citing a case to verify this statement is the remark made last Monday by garage men in Truckee to The TRIBUNE party. "Why, man, alive, we'll sell you all you want to buy. Bring us the containers to hold it and we'll fill you up, gas tanks. At Feather River Inn, The TRIBUNE man was told that the hotel has a supply of 40,000 gallons and will sell the motorist any reasonable quantity he wants. Quincy was the only town which was found short of gasoline and the condition there has now been remedied.

Yosemite has ample supply. On the previous week's tour over the Tioga road gasoline was bought at Carl Inn which is located on the Big Oak Flat road. At this point no stringency had been felt nor had there been any curtailment in the fuel sale in Yosemite Valley where all of the resorts will fill up all the tanks needing gas.

From Lake county comes word that virtually every one of the hotels can now take care of their patrons very nicely. At Santa Cruz the supply has been sufficient to take care of the heavy summer travel for the past two weeks.

Here in Oakland a "No Gas" sign has been scarcer in the last seven days than a hip of Old Crow and officials of the various oil companies, while still reticent about being quoted, are willing to infer that all restrictions will be removed in a very short time which may still be in existence.

SHELL CO. WELL STOCKED. Dave Sinclair, manager of the Shell company, declares his corporation has been taking care of trade at all of the Shell service stations and that it is a rare condition now to find any one of them out of gas.

While characteristic yelps occasionally come up from Southern California about a tightened fuel condition there and reports trickle over the wire about federal investigations, no motorist has been seriously hampered in his travels through that part of the state. There may be a limit on the quantity which will be sold, but it is not a difficult matter to reach the destination you seek on your tour south of the Tehachapi.

If any motorist has delayed a tour into the Sierras, or, for that matter, to any point a long distance from Oakland, the writer recommends that he complete his plans and start the journey whenever he cares to get under way. Don't let Never mount a new tire as a spare. To do this is to invite the attentions of the tire thief, whereas if an old tire is used as the spare the dishonest one probably would turn up his nose at it.

Finger Safeguard Is Expert's Suggestion

A holder made as follows makes the inserting of round pins in valve stems and other parts a simple matter. Wrap a piece of .064 gauge wire around the pin three times in loose coils. Then make a half coil at the bottom to prevent the pin from slipping all the way through. The use of this holder prevents pinching of fingers in case the spring slips when it is being held by the valve lifter.

In Concord, N. H., a church runs a garage for the convenience of the motoring members of the congregation.

THE FEATHER RIVER DISTRICT IS ATTRACTING MORE motorists this season than ever before in automobile history. While a number of routes leading to various destinations are shown on this map just two of them were logged last week by a TRIBUNE-Columbia Six pathfinding party headed by ALDEN McELRATH, Columbia Six distributor. Follow the arrow and you denote the route the Columbia Six crew took. Views adjoining the map show scenes along the route. There is plenty of gasoline at all resorts. Feather River Inn, alone, has 40,000 gallons on hand.

TO FEATHER RIVER INN IS EASY TRIP

By EMIL REINHARDT.

It is really only once a year that a motor car owner gets a chance to enjoy a few weeks in the high Sierras where he may fish, hunt or swim. Some prefer to stay at hotels, where they may live as they do in the city and others choose to camp or rough it during their vacation in the mountains. It's all a matter of choice, however, between the two. Recently many inquiries have come into the TRIBUNE asking for information about the roads to Feather river and to Plumas county resorts. This territory was mapped last year by a TRIBUNE representative, but since that time the roads recommended in good condition have changed somewhat, and in order to report a new and better route to the reporting public, a TRIBUNE mapping party in a Columbia Six roadster driven by Alden McElrath, local Columbia dealer, started from Oakland via Sacramento and Chico to inspect several roads in the Feather River of the Sierras.

There are six routes into this wonderful country, two out of Chico, one main road out of Marysville, one main road out of Oroville, the Auburn-Grass Valley-Nevada City-Dowdville road and the Auburn-Collinsville road via Truckee.

The route into Lake Almanor taken by the TRIBUNE pathfinder is one that is not often used by Eastbay motorists, but is without a doubt in good condition as any road leading to these mountain playgrounds.

One of the roads out of Chico is known as the Humboldt road. This road is a little rough in places shortly after leaving Chico and fairly free from small, loose stones which often confront the traveler during a tour in the mountains. From Forest Ranch via Berdams ranch and Loma, a distance of twenty miles, the road is good, but a little dusty, however, it should be made in second gear.

From Butte Meadows to Jonesville, there is a slightly up grade. There is a free camping ground in this locality and fishing has been reported good.

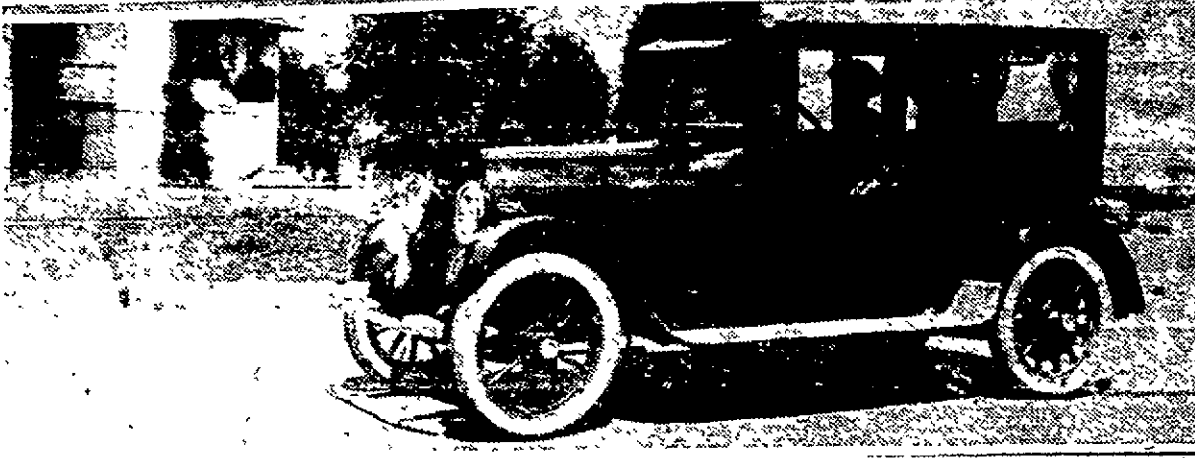

It might be advisable to take on water at Jonesville, as there is a steep grade for five miles to the summit which brings you to an elevation of 8500 feet. From this point the scenery is beautiful. The drop from the summit is long and it is only a short distance until you reach Almanor Inn situated on beautiful Lake Almanor.

The Humboldt road from Chico to the Lake is nine miles farther. This is via De Sable, Powellton, Chaparral and Longvale. The road is rough in some places owing to stock being driven over it. Both these roads are used to get to the Lake but the Humboldt road is preferable.

Arriving at the Inn the TRIBUNE mapping party put up for the night. During the day many fish had been caught that were real catches. In fact, nobody seemed sorry that they had come to the Lake to spend a vacation.

In order to make Feather River Inn by Sunday afternoon and enjoy scenery that is hard to surpass, one should get an early start from Lake Almanor. Mountain roads usually have their share of rough patches. Some cannot be said of the road out of Chico from the Lake to Feather River Inn. They are a bit narrow in places but cautious driving should eliminate any fear that often disturbs the new and inexperienced driver.

Feather River Inn the Sunday night stop, is known the country over for its beauty and location. W. G. Thigpen, manager of the Inn, states that the present season is off to a good start. The Inn has ever had through his efforts many improvements have been made. Just recently Thigpen took it upon himself to help the traveler by having the posting of road signs has been neglected during the last year or so, and this is one thing that hinders the unfortunate traveler who has not made arrangements to get hold of maps to help him over his route of travel. Thigpen has placed signs from Quincy to the Inn. They are in plain English and are easy to read. There is plenty of gas at the Inn. In fact there are 4000 gallons on hand.

From Feather River Inn to Truckee there are a few grades that seem a little tough but on reaching the summit of the highest one it is found that a car will not boil as might be expected. A short distance from where the road branches off to Lake Independent there is a bridge that needs some repair work. Stones and logs have been laid across the road on either side of the bridge and a small detour into the creek is necessary.

From Hobart Mills to Truckee and then on into Sacramento the roads are not bad, in fact they should be classed as very good.

In Truckee signs are displayed reading, "All the gas you want." Truckee natives can't understand why there is a shortage of gas anywhere.

The TRIBUNE party arrived in Oakland Tuesday noon very much satisfied that the route they had taken was the best for reaching a string of resorts that are popular to all Eastbay motorists. Many campers in the mountains, most of them city folks, seem satisfied with their luck as nimrod experts. This year finds many roughing it. A suggestion to those contemplating a trip to resorts in the Feather River valley is to take the route via Chico and Humboldt road to Feather River Inn, take the Auburn-Collinsville road via Truckee. This is perhaps a little longer than the road via Auburn-Grass Valley and Nevada City, but is considered at the present time the best road of the two.

The Oroville-Quincy road is used by some going to Lake Almanor and Feather River. This road is rough between Merriak and Bucks ranch and considerable grade work is encountered. The route out of Marysville is very poor at the present time and travel is light over that road. ### Magneto Trouble Is Caused By Dirt

A common cause of poor magneto action is dirt on the interrupter points. When the points are subjected to being dirty a few drops of kerosene will remedy the trouble and restore the parts to good working order.

STURGES VISITORS' WEEK Tomorrow Until Next Saturday TWENTY-FIVE TIRES GIVEN AWAY

An Opportunity to See a TIRE FACTORY in Full Operation

We extend a heartfelt invitation to everyone interested in tire making to come to our factory during Visitors' Week, which begins tomorrow and will last until closing time next Saturday.

Every man, who ever bought a tire, will be welcome. Entrance will be by pass only, but passes can be secured from The TRIBUNE, from the Enquirer, the various banks and hotels.

Sturges Tires and Tire Soles are manufactured in the most highly scientific manner possible with the finest materials obtainable from all parts of the world. The processes are tremendously interesting and will give the motorist a standard, by which he can judge tires when on the point of purchase.

You realize that visitors rarely are permitted to go through a Tire Factory. We believe every man who buys tires should have an opportunity to see how they are made. So we plan Visitors' Week. We will give the people of Oakland and her sister cities a chance to see to what extent their own home factory is developing in this great industry.

HOW TO GET TO THE FACTORY

Take Seventh Street S. P. car, Melrose line, get off at 105th Avenue, or take traction cars running out Fourteenth Street to 90th Avenue; transfer to 90th Avenue car; ride to Foothill Boulevard. Automobiles will be waiting to take you to the plant.

Automobiles follow Foothill Boulevard to factory at 105th Avenue and Foothill Boulevard.

The highways running to the factory will be marked with arrows pointing the way.

TIPS ON BATTERY CARE ARE GIVEN

Those who are touring in the mountains or on other long drives should be careful as to the condition of their battery and electrical equipment," advises Clark Nowak, manager of the Oakland Battery Company, Eveready Battery distributors. He claims that a thorough test should be made before starting a trip. If a battery is found to be fully charged it is a good idea to cut down the charging rate of the generator or burn lights while en route.

The generator must be clean and brushes adjusted. Be sure the battery is filled as the excessive heat due to long driving causes the water to evaporate, and if it becomes dry injury is done to the plates and insulators.

Alterable Wheelbase Found in Every Car

It has often been remarked facetiously that a certain car has an alterable wheelbase. As a matter of fact this is literally true of almost every car, especially of those which have Hotchkiss drive. When the springs flatten and remain so even to a slight extent the axles are further separated and the wheelbase is changed, perhaps an inch or two. Measuring the distance from wheel center to wheel center is a good check on spring condition.

In Germany 18 industries are listed for the manufacture of motor vehicles.

Platinum Is Found In Old Magnetos

In the old days platinum was not quite so expensive as it is now, and in the screws of old magnetos and contact coils there was often inserted a good-sized piece of platinum. By using a file carefully it is possible to remove the brass and reclaim the platinum, when it can be soldered upon the end of a new screw.

Highways in place of railways are favored in Great Britain.

ACCESSORY FIRM MOVES DOWNTOWN

Another addition to automobile row is the firm of Dinsmore Bros., well-known accessory dealers of the Piedmont district, who will open in their new home at 2335 Broadway Monday, with a line of automobile accessories and sporting goods. For those who enjoy fishing and hunting the two Dinsmore brothers will have a department with a full stock of rifles, ammunition and fishing tackle. After a successful three and a half years' existence in Piedmont, where the Dinsmores built up a good business, due to service they gave, it was decided that bigger possibilities awaited them in a more central location on Broadway.

SILVER LAKE ROAD OFFERS EASY GRADES

Where hundreds of motorists have made the trip into the Sierras and on to Lake Tahoe over the Placerville and Colfax roads only a few have traveled over the easier and shorter Silver Lake road. According to Fred W. Pabst who made the trip over the road last week in a Cadillac, this is almost a high gear road to the eastern side of the range. The Don Lee advertising chief took a car from San Francisco to the eastern side of the Carson grade without soiling the intermediate gear for more than a mile altogether on the entire trip. Not only are the grades easy but the road from Jackson over the mountains is in very fine condition with practically no rough places and little dust.

As a contrast to this easy trip into the higher mountains there is a road from the foot of Carson Pass to Blue Lakes which is one of the hardest and most difficult in the entire west. The fact that only ten per cent of the cars that attempt it succeed gives a better idea of what kind of grades are to be surmounted to reach these beautiful lakes. The cars that get up the worst pitch on the low gear without bucking can be counted on the fingers of one hand, so say the natives.

The run is thirty-five miles over the Carson Pass from Silver Lake. At the entrance to Hope Valley the road turns sharply to the right off the road to Woodfords and climbs the grade and drops down into Faith valley. There is another climb and the motorist finds himself in beautiful Charity valley. The roads are not only very steep in places but many of the grades are slippery and full of rocks.

Few cars make this side trip and it is not advisable unless you have confidence in your driving and your car has power and stamina.

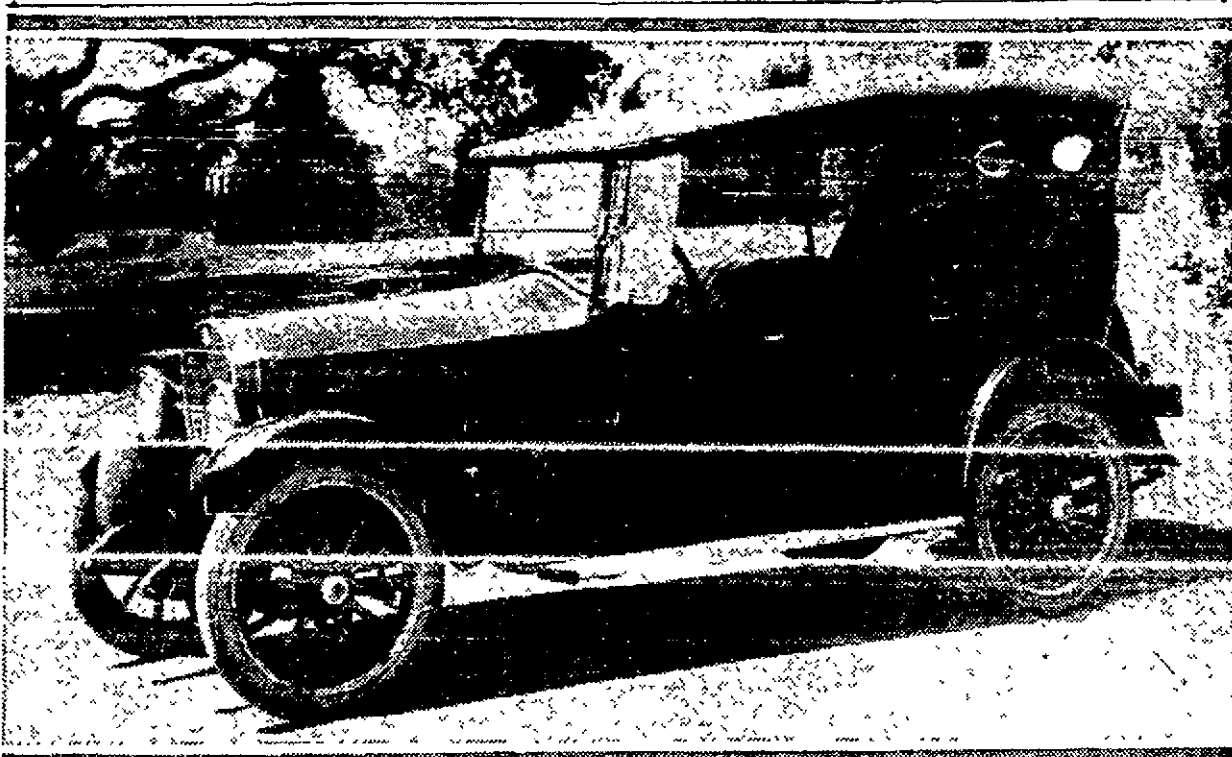

The Cadillac carried five people over the grades but it was a hard pull on the low even for the Cadillac. There are no such grades over the Jackson-Silver Lake road. This is the old emigrant trail and as the road is in good condition it makes a fine, optional route to Lake Tahoe. From Stockton to Meyers via Sacramento and Placerville the distance is 151 miles. Over the Jackson road to Meyers the distance is 121 miles. There are some bad stretches in the thirty miles from Clemence to Jackson but fully half of this distance is good going. There has been a great deal of travel over this road and the dust is not disagreeable. After leaving Jackson there are practically no rough spots.

The country has all the picturesque of the most beautiful Sierra country with the landmarks that bring back the memories of those stirring days of '49.

"California should jealously guard these historic old landmarks," said Pabst. "As the years go by and the comforts and speed of transportation improve the generations of future days will marvel over the trials and hardships of the pioneers."

It was a sturdy race that crossed the desert and the plains, to finally cross the mountains and find the promised land. How marvellously beautiful the Sierras must have

A SCRIPPS-BOOTH TOURING MODEL OF THE LATEST SERIES TURNED OUT BY THE Scripps-Booth unit of the General Motors organization. The lines and finish have a pleasing appeal to motor car critics.

START MOTOR WITH CLUTCH OUT

"What's the use of pushing out the clutch when you start your motor as long as the shift lever is in neutral and there is practically no load on the engine?" Many motorists ask this question, which sounds like a logical one, but as a matter of fact, it is based on a wrong supposition, according to Westley E. Gillette, manager of the service department of the Chester N. Weaver Company, distributors of Studebaker automobiles and Day-Elmer trucks.

"There is really a considerable load on the engine," said Gillette, "just on account of the shaft and gears that must be turned."

"Just try this test if you want to see how much this load amounts to: some morning with the clutch in. Then have someone hold the clutch pedal down, or fasten it down with blocks and try it again. If you turn the engine over rapidly you'll see there is quite a difference and that the load is much greater when the engine spins at the rate the starting motor turns it."

looked to those early pioneers after the weary months of slow travel. And what a tragedy to die in the very heart of all this beauty with the journey's end so near. Along the Silver Lake road is the grave at Tragedy Springs where the two emigrants supposed to have been murdered by Indians are buried. The old carving in the tree done so many years ago is growing indistinct and should be covered with a glass.

A few miles further is the Maiden's Grave, marking the burial spot of one of the younger members of the party.

"The Sierra country tells an interesting story of the hardships of the pioneers. It will give a few minutes of their trip to looking up the various places and comparing the trials of such a few years ago to the comforts of today."

CHEERIO—OL' TOP! Meet Leonard Hatton of the Don Lee staff, just back from a ten weeks' trip to "dear ol' Lummox."

The aggregate mileage traveled by automobiles over Pennsylvania roads in 1919 exceeded 4,000,000,000.

There are 231,501 motorcycles registered in the United States.

DRIVERS TOLD NOT TO SPARE GREASE

Too little attention is given to proper grease lubrication of automobiles and machinery, according to James T. Rucker of the Petroleum Products Company, manufacturers of Oxal lubricants.

"Motorists who demand nothing but the best the market affords in the way of lubricating oil are neglectful of the grease they use in their machines," claims Rucker, "and while grease is not used in the quantity that oil is, nevertheless it is a lubricant that performs an important duty. Grease cups should be given a turn quite frequently. Grease cups are not placed on automobiles for ornamental purposes, but have a most useful function to perform, and only grease of good grade should be used."

"Cup greases have for a base pure mutton tallow. The best tallow is imported from the great sheep growing country of Australia. A fine grade of cotton seed oil is another important ingredient and in addition to other elements is the addition of light paraffine base mineral oils."

For proper lubrication a cup grease should be neither too soft nor too hard, but of medium consistency, with a high melting point, as its duty is to remain on a bearing instead of melt and run off.

Metal Surfaces Saved By Coats of Lacquer

It is possible to protect metal surfaces by applying several coats of lacquer or celluloid varnish. The lacquer should be applied with a camel's hair brush, after the metal has been polished highly. There must be no trace of grease on the brass or other metal when it is lacquered.

Receipt for Slow Speed in Ignition

Poor engine operation at low speeds is a common complaint, with the usual cause in the carburetion system. Often an air leak throws out the carburetor adjustment so that an insufficient amount of fuel is fed. Wide spark pluggs with a magneto having weak magnets is a combination which may induce this same trouble. With a battery system in use the ignition may be neglected until the carburetion system has been attended to, and if this fails to locate the trouble the ignition should then be overhauled.

Makes an Economy Record Run Oakland to Los Angeles and Return

26.2 miles per gallon of gasoline on 850-mile trip to Los Angeles and return in 30½ hours' actual running time at a speed of 28 miles per hour carrying all luggage and equipment of 4 passengers, total weight 878 pounds.

This was performed by a stock car, driven as you, an owner, would drive under normal running conditions, keeping at all times within the speed limits.

T. H. Davis and J. N. Stebbins, Maxwell salesmen, drove the Maxwell on the trip, Davis the entire distance on the down trip and Stebbins on the return. E. H. Bellows, sales manager of the Western Motors, together with "Rod" Kendrick of the "Tribune" acting as observer, completed the party of four.

There is no reason why you should stop your trips. There is gasoline enough to take you anywhere you want to go.

The party took gasoline with them but found that they could get all they needed along the road and did not touch their reserve supply.

There was no attempt to break records, it was just a trip to show how easy it is to go out and back in an economical car.

DASH LEVER TAKES PLACE OF PEDAL

"Just as the old 'Armstrong' starter was relegated to the limbo of discarded automotive devices so will many of the present levers, pedals and instruments used in operation on automobiles be replaced by mechanisms which are easier to operate," believes W. V. Hall, Oakland manager for Philip S. Cole, Haynes distributor.

"One of the most characteristic traits of a modern car is the policy of making the driver's life easier. Some motorists call us lazy on this account, but the man who exercises ingenuity or employs mechanical devices to save time and energy is not lazy. He is efficient and he gets a great deal more pleasure out of life than would otherwise be the case."

No one can tell today just what additional improvements along the line of making motoring an easier matter for the motorist will come within the next ten or twenty years. When we consider the changes of the last decade or two have brought it seems almost too hard to look quite so far ahead.

"Perhaps some automobile genius will devise a way by which the hood will raise automatically by the mere press of a button, perhaps a convertible body that can be changed from open to closed car style or from roadster to five-passenger model with equal ease and celerity will be evolved. Whatever the changes made, one thing is certain—the day of improvement and progress is far from a thing of the past."

"As a sort of forerunner of the days to come, is the elimination of a starting pedal on the motor car. Instead of a floor-button that must be stepped on sometimes several times, all that one has to do to start one of the new Haynes cars is to touch a switch lever on the dash. The pressure of one's little finger is sufficient to start the motor humming."

Many Valves Prove Value to Engines

Q. Is the seven-valve, four-cylinder engine a success? I realize that this type is universal for racing cars, but how about it for regular cars? How long has this type been in use? A. The six-valve engine for stock cars is a success and is now used in White and Stutz cars. There are a number of advantages in this construction, among them being higher volumetric efficiency and an increase in engine power and speed. The four-valve per cylinder engine is not new, having been introduced in 1909. The latest champion of Italy used an engine of that type in a stock car in 1911 and is still making it.

Choke Spring Will Aid Auto's Starting

When the outside temperature rises to 80 degrees or more the carburetor choke is useful only in starting. If a spring such as is used on pedals or brake rods is attached to the choke handle to the dash or cowl frame during hot weather the control will return to normal position automatically. This not only saves gas but tends to reduce the formation of carbon deposits.

About 2,700,000, or nearly 3 per cent of the total population of the United States make their living from the automobile business.

SPEAKING OF DARING FASHION DESIGNS. JUST GLIMPSE THE LINE OF THIS JACKSON sport model which the John T. Thornton Company is now showing. It's about as striking a model as has been displayed here in weeks.

On Saturday, August 7, the third annual picnic of the employees of the Chevrolet Motor company will take place at Shellmound Park. The day will be taken up with a well arranged program of athletic dancing, music and games.

The new Chevrolet band will play throughout the day and the Chevrolet orchestra will play for the dance.

An athletic program will be carried on consisting of sprinting races, relay races, jumping and volley ball.

George Scott, superintendent of the factory, is head of the executive committee, assisted by Peter Maurer and Ralph Whitney, A. L. Warming-ton and G. P. Jackson, R. Busby, Herb Matthews and R. T. Barter.

California has more motor cars than the entire registration of European countries.

TRUCKS ARE AID TO DAIRYMEN

Remember the story about the bright dairyman who saved the expense of churning by buying a motor truck? The truck jolted so that the cream was butter by the time it got from farm to dairy. His idea was all right for butter, but when he wanted the cream brought to him in its original lacustrine form, he was simply out of luck.

While Oldsmobile Economy trucks would be found a poor substitute for the old-fashioned churn because of its springs, they can be depended on to bring milk and cream many miles from country and deliver it in just the condition it was in at the start of the trip.

"This has been proven on a large scale in the larger dairy sections of the state," declares H. C. Markham of Markham & Putzer, Oldsmobile distributors here. "George A. Meyer, general manager of the Western Creameries Company, lives in Oakland, his firm operates dairy plants up and down the entire Pacific coast. Several months ago Meyer placed an order with us for a truck. A few weeks use convinced the officials of the creamery concern that they were getting more mileage than ever before at a minimum of expense for fuel and upkeep, and they decided to purchase the number of trucks in use in their firm."

Tin Cans May Be Turned Into Drip Pans

The tin cans that commonly contain the better brands of oil may be cut up into a variety of useful things. By cutting the tin diagonally across a small shelf and drip pan may be made. A wall tray is also easily made likewise a dust pan, to which a handle may be attached. An oil can holder is easily devised with a drip pan made by the use of a sheet of perforated tin is an extremely useful accessory and saves much dirt around the garage.

Many middle western cities strongly discourage the carelessness of "jay walking."

Gaskets Lined With Asbestos Are Good

Different locations demand different types of gasket material, depending on whether they are to be subject to the action of water, oil or gas. Gaskets in the water line should generally be of graphited asbestos, cut from a sheet and then spread with shellac. Care must be taken not to get too much shellac, because where there is an excess some of the shellac may be squeezed into the water jacket and make trouble. For oil joints use paper and for gas joints copper covered asbestos. Asphalt was first used in Paris as a road material 50 years ago.

The Motor of Seven Years Ago and the Motor of Today

The Chandler Six of 1920 is a refinement of that first Chandler Six of 1913. Seven years of devotion on the part of the Chandler organization to this one Chandler motor has placed it in the position of distinction which it holds today.

Seven years of service in the hands of thousands of owners, seven years of skillful application by Chandler engineers, has brought the Chandler motor and the one standard Chandler chassis to approximate perfection.

In these seven years many motors of many makes have come and gone. Chandler continues a leader among fine cars, because of the excellence of its performance.

On the one Chandler chassis are mounted six handsome types of body.

MANY WANT AUTO WITH RACE FAME

Fame of the Monroe car as winner of the American racing classic at Indianapolis and as a star performer on the other speedways of the country was responsible for the more than usual interest taken last week in the announcement of O. N. Hirsch as Eastbay distributor of the new four-cylinder car.

As a result, many of the motor fans have called at the Hirsch headquarters in Oakland to look at the Monroe. The car's appearance has caused just as much comment as its success in the motor races.

"Our only trouble has been in keeping a Monroe on the floor to show people. We thought we had enough to last a few days, but so many people were not satisfied with just looking at the car that every one of our original consignments was sold the first week. We expect to have more by Monday," Hirsch said.

"There is no question but that the Monroe is making a hit in Oakland and in the interior counties. Our dealers are enthusiastic about the Monroe because of the economical features of the lowest priced cars on the market when it comes to running on a minimum of gasoline for a maximum mileage without heavy upkeep expenses of any kind."

MOTORISTS HELP BOND CAMPAIGN

The first step in securing California's position as the leader among the good roads states of the country has been achieved through the success of the campaign to place the initiative petition increasing the interest rate on their state highway bonds and relieving the counties of interest payments upon the November ballot. The eight-day campaign directed by the California State Automobile Association, with the cooperation of public officials and commercial organizations means:

1. The construction of these roads most essential to the state from an economic standpoint and the completion of the contracts now under way.

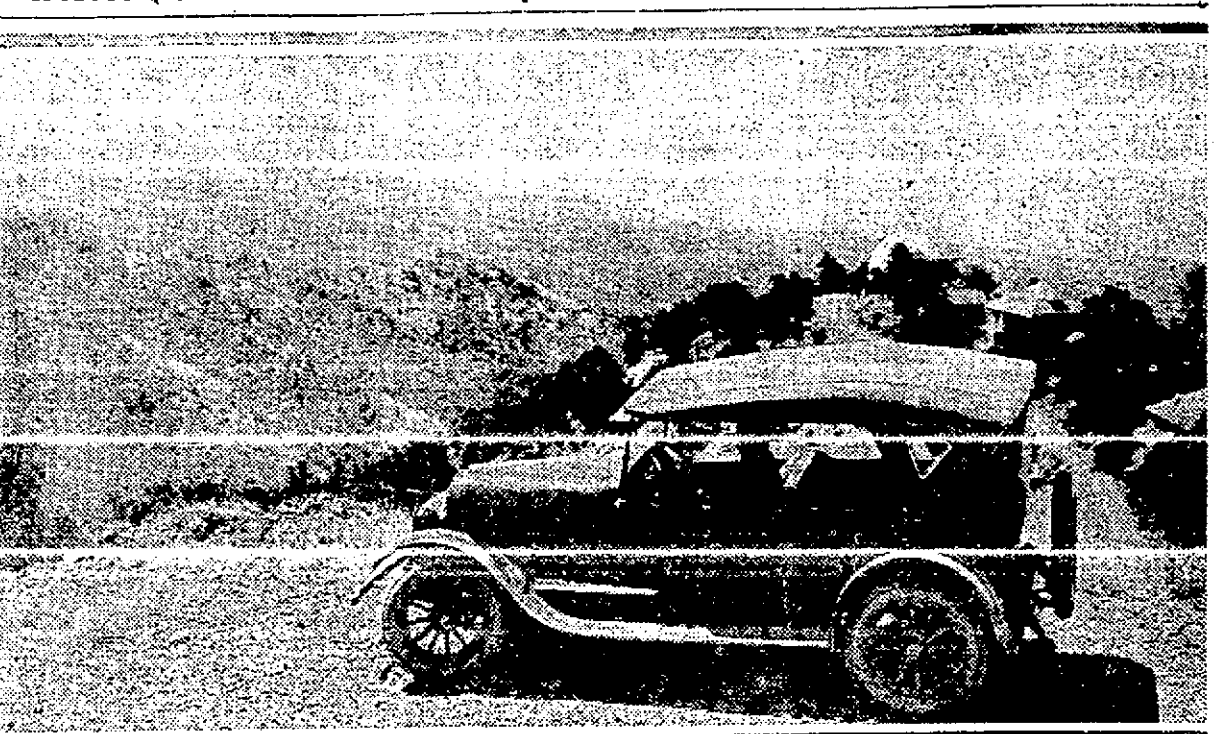

2. TO SAVE ORGANIZATION

That the state highway organization will be held together instead of being scrapped.

3. That the state will be in a position to carry forward its entire road program when construction funds and transportation conditions warrant.

Gasoline Aplenty For Autoists Who Go On Camp Trips

There is plenty of gasoline to be secured at the resorts of California. This is the word sent out by Foster Curry at Camp Curry in Yosemite, by the Lake Tahoe Association of resorts in the high Sierra, and by almost all the resort owners in the mountains and along the streams of the state.

There are more cars coming into California now than for many years past. There is no shortage of fuel anywhere to the east of this state and motorists throughout the nation are coming in increasing numbers. Some of them are shipping their cars across the desert because they do not want to drive, but by far the larger number are coming in their own machines, driving all the way.

Hills Offer Site for Auto Camp Plan Would Be Benefit to City

Oakland is criticised by motorists and tourists because it has not set aside any of the delightful spots in the wooded hills and picturesque canyons within the city as a summer camping ground for motor parties, according to Joseph Berger, of Berger Bros., tire dealers.

"It is to be regretted that the city has not followed the example of other municipalities of lesser importance—especially those south of here—in making some provision of this sort," Berger claims.

"Oakland should be boosted as a summering place. Other cities have done this with resultant benefits that are indicated in the recent census. The climate here is second to none and the scenic beauties of the city are incomparable. The picture of Lake Merritt, surrounded by its beautiful parks and backed by the green hills with their hundreds of wonderful mansions, is 'one that' not equalled by any of the moving picture travelogues.

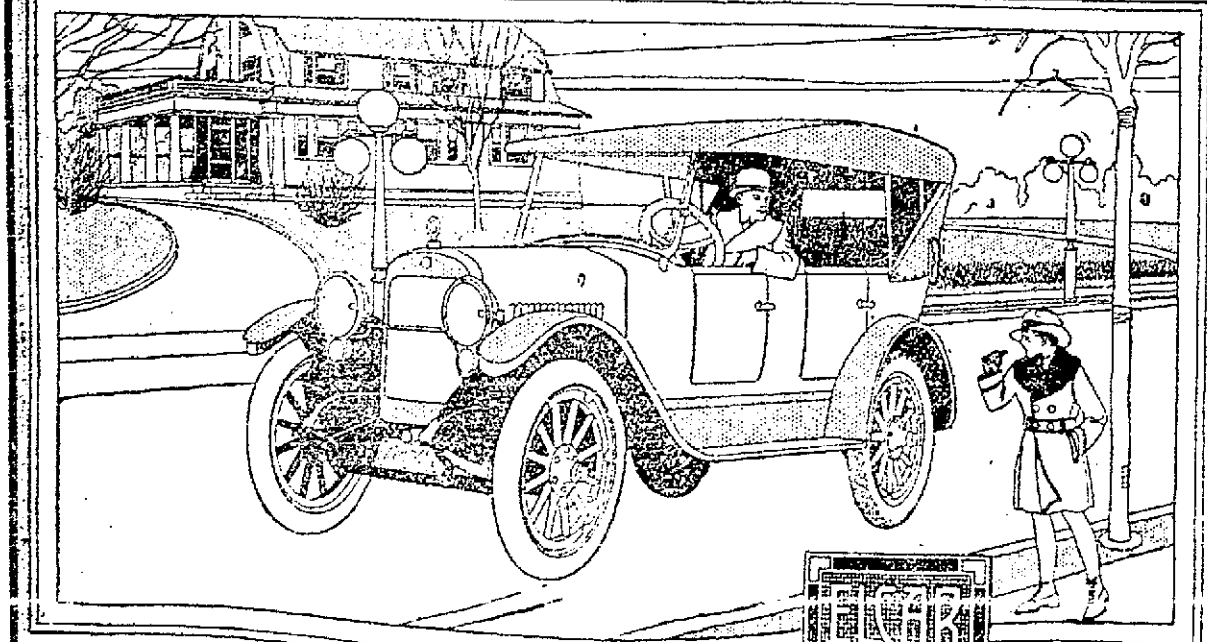

"But most of this is lost to the automobile tourists. Ordinarily they give the city a wide berth as they hurry through. They do not enter within the city because there is no place for them to stay. If there were a municipal camping ground where they could make camp they would stay a while. But the people that are out on the road do not care to change from their traveling tents into hotel or city clothes. Many of them do not carry clothes like these along on their trips.

The installation of such a ground would not be difficult. Any one of the city parks or some beauty spot in the hills would do. All that would be necessary would be the installation of some system of free water supply. Perhaps the city set aside the ground, a public spirited water company would supply the water.

"Let us hope that the city fathers will in the near future take the necessary measures to provide such a ground. The cost would be nominal and the returns in valuable publicity for the city as well as the business and esteem of the visitors would be great."

THE NEW SAVAGE TYPE

CONSIDERED BY MANY MOTORISTS THE BEST FABRIC TIRE ON THE AMERICAN MARKET

SPECIAL BREAKER

Even as the tires on your car, O Motorists, are but a small part of the whole machine, so is the breaker strip to a tire. But its function is as important to the tire as the tire to the machine, for the whole tire is affected by the way in which it does its work.

If you know not the use of the breaker strip, open your ears to my words: Even as the name implies, it is a strip of loosely woven fabric so placed in the tire that it will "break" the mighty blows of the road.

Even as the stone cast into a stream causes a wave to flow in every direction, so does the breaker strip spread the shocks of the road over the tire. A good breaker strip gives mighty battle to those great enemies of your purse: stone bruises and wear and tear, and adds many moons to the life of the tire.

The Great Chiefs of my people know how important is the breaker strip, so they have it woven especially for our mighty "Savage" "D" Type tire, as different from that used in ordinary tires as the sun is different from the moon. Great is the cost of this bit of fabric but it does the work we call upon it to do better than any other that we know of.

In your eyes, O Travelers of the Highways, this is but a small matter, but consider it with other features in our "D" Type and you know another reason why this big, sturdy casing, the pride and joy of our hearts, has been proclaimed in all the land by many of you—"The best fabric tire on the American market".

I SALUTE YOU, O MOTORISTS! LITTLE HEAP HAS SPOKEN.

"Little Heap" as a character is symbolic of The Spreckels "Savage" Tire Company. By birth he is a "Savage", by adoption, a member of The House of Spreckels. Wise for his years, educated in modern ways and imbued with the spirit of the organization he represents, the little "chief" is an authority on the construction of "Savage" tires and tubes. It is fitting that the sterling qualities and the sturdiness of his race are characteristic, too, of the products with which he is associated.

TRIP MADE ON 26 MILES TO GALLON

Moving along at a steady clip of 23 1/2 miles an hour or better, except where a lower rate was required by local speed laws, a stock Maxwell touring car made the Oakland to Los Angeles round trip in the past week, with the very creditable mileage average of 26.15 miles to the gallon chalked up in its favor upon its return to the sales headquarters of the Western Motors Company, Maxwell distributor in this city.

Directed by E. H. Bellows, Maxwell sales manager at the Oakland establishment of Western Motors Co., Tom Davis and Neil Stebbins, the plucky little Maxwell covered 850 miles on 32 1/2 gallons of gasoline. The entire idea of the trip was to see exactly what mileage a Maxwell would give on a long trip if driven just as the ordinary motorist would go. One of the salesman's demonstrators was taken. It was a real "drive as you would drive anyway" test. The regular Maxwell carburetor adjustment was adhered to, using no leaner a mixture than usual.

"I feel quite pleased with the results of the trip," stated L. E. Clifton, Oakland manager for the Western Motors Company, upon the return of the Maxwell party from the south. "What particularly gratifies me is that the test really means something. The 'trick' test with a specially geared and groomed car, mechanically adjusted so as to artificially increase the mileage, and driven by a trained driver who has practiced many times over the route chosen."

"Any driver who exercises ordinary motoring intelligence can make the same high mileage in a Maxwell. This is possible because of the absence of surplus weight in the car, and because of its special, in-built mechanical devices for increasing mileage."

Four passengers, in all, made the trip, each traveling with individual baggage. None of them were lightweights. In fact Bellows says: "If they don't believe it, tell them to come down and look at me." Altogether the car carried 835 pounds over and above its own weight. Altogether the car, when loaded, weighed 3044 pounds. No mechanical difficulties were encountered on either the trip down or the trip back.

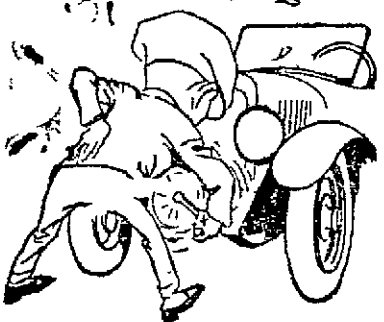

Going south, the trip took 14 1/2 hours with almost five hours taken out en route. The speedometer registered 400 miles, and 14 1/2 gallons of gas were used. Coming back, several more hours were used up with stops for meals and picture taking, making the total 18 hours, 450 miles and 18 gallons.

Kenney came to America in 1911, entered the automobile business on his arrival here and has been connected with the Chevrolet organization at various intervals since this car was first introduced in California.

proportionately higher in price than ordinary common steel and iron, they are worth more and a motor car constructed of such materials is bound to give longer years of efficient service."

The passenger automobile, once the lord of the transcontinental highways, is rapidly losing caste. Today it is the heavily laden, rumbling motor truck with its load of several tons that is becoming the king-pin of these long highways, taking and holding the right of way.

A survey recently taken by the travel and transport bureau of the E. E. Goodrich Rubber Company at a point on the Lincoln highway twelve miles from Pittsburg, showed that one out of every three vehicles which passed was a motor truck, loaded with goods of all description. During the twenty-four hours when the check was taken, 476 motor trucks went by, as compared with 924 passenger cars and nine horse-drawn vehicles. Among the tonnage carried by the trucks was iron and steel products, building brick, farm produce, farm supplies, gasoline, hardware, chemicals, lumber, fruit, milk, and a multitude of other things.

First-hand information on the struggle for skilled laborers now in progress in the Eastern automobile manufacturing centers has come to Frank O. Renstrom in a report from Harry Meisel, of the Renstrom organization, who was recently sent East on a three-month scouting trip to the Grant, Briscoe and Premier factories.

"Everywhere you go it is a scramble to get labor," the Renstrom "scout" writes. "The skilled mechanic is now more sought for than gold. Money is a second consideration. It is just a question of getting the right man."

"The war had its good effect in that the metal industries of the country turned their energies over to the production of alloys for war works, such as armor plate. This has brought on an over-supply of these strong lightweight metals for mechanical use. While they are

Westinghouse Air Springs insure comfort in Motoring

Westinghouse Air Springs mean personal comfort to the autoist for they completely absorb the constant jolts and annoying jars of motoring. Your machine will skim over the roughest cut roads with ease if it is equipped with these Springs.

These springs, as the name indicates, are Air Springs. They allow the body of your car to rest on four cushions of compressed air. And what could more completely absorb the constant vibration and road shocks of motoring than air?

These Springs give you service every second your car is running.

Self-starters work only a few minutes in a day; lighting systems work only when it is dark—but Westinghouse Air Springs work constantly.

The Westinghouse factory has sent us a man who is specially trained in the work of adjusting these Springs to any car.

Call on us—and let Mr. PEABLES tell you more about Westinghouse Air Springs—the Springs that let you ride on air.

RUN ACROSS CONTINENT ENDS TODAY

Unless some bit of bad luck overtakes it, the Overland Four, which is speeding across the continent on an economy run, will check in at The TRIBUNE building about 10 p. m. tonight. It started from New York at midnight last Sunday and its grind of 3336 miles is scheduled for completion in just one hour less than eight full days.

From telegraphic reports that have filtered into the local Willits Overland branch a notable economy record is being maintained and it is the belief of branch officials here, headed by Harold Knudsen, that the final net average will be much better than twenty miles to the gallon. Twenty-five different drivers working in relays will have piloted the car from ocean to ocean and no one of these men has, or will have seen the car prior to sitting behind the steering wheel.

The stunt is a unique one and is commanding a lot of attention. In the cities through which it has already passed there is much speculation as to what the final showing will indicate.

A close check is being kept by observers on the amount of gasoline and oil which has been used and these reports will be tallied immediately after the run ends tonight in San Francisco.

Weather and road conditions have varied across the land. There has been a mixture of rain and clear weather, and a combination of good, fair and bad roads.

The Lincoln Highway is the route taken by the Overland crew, headed by Harold Knudsen, is leaving this morning for Sacramento to

It takes more than a pretty color of paint to convince a woman of the merits of a car nowadays. Women have proven themselves the most particular of automobile purchasers—the hardest to please. ## NEW CAR IS SETTING A SPEEDY PAGE

What is probably a new record in sales for an unknown car is being established by the Victory Motor Sales Company of Oakland in the orders this firm has already booked for the Gardner Four and also in the actual deliveries which have been made.

These Gardner Four cars have been sold and delivered in as many days by the organization which Carl Christensen heads and if the selling speed is maintained, which has already been made, the allotment of cars which have been given him should be disposed of well within the year's period in which he has contracted to sell them.

Until the appearance of the Gardner in Oakland, three weeks ago, little was known of it by motor car owners and very limited information was available except to those motor car dealers who had viewed it at the eastern shows.

Produced by the Gardner Bros. Company of St. Louis, a corporation which had built cars for thirty years and which for the last nine or ten years has been actively interested in the automobile industry, the Four, now made by the Gardner Bros. seems to have made quite a name in numerous sections of the United States. In no state, however, has a greater welcome been accorded than that given in California.

Next from the remarkable showing made by Christensen's sales force in selling Gardner cars, the record speaks in forcible demand which continues to prevail in Oakland.

WOODEN WHEELS NEED PAINT AND CARE TWICE YEAR

The wood wheels with which the average car is equipped need little attention, but there are certain small formalities that must be attended to if the paint is to go on doing its strenuous duty. The spokes must be tightened and the wood be given protection at least twice a year. Paint and varnish protect the wood against the entrance of water, which will rot it. Where the paint chips off, the wood may easily become affected even though it has been treated before it was made up into a wheel. Spoke looseness on cheap wheels may be generally obtained by giving the wood proper treatment. If the spokes do become loose at the felloe or hub they may be tightened by the use of wedges. In the case of rear wheels the brake drum bolts are rarely if ever given any care, yet these bolts do strenuous service, they ought to be tightened whenever opportunity offers. Hub bolts in front, if tightened will never give trouble through spoke looseness, which in turn will produce squeaking.

Cheap Tent Put Out for Motor Camper

The motorist who wants to buy a camping outfit at a very low price can find what he wants in a stock being offered by the Wilber Auto Trunking Manufacturing Company of 2042 Telegraph ave. This concern entered the field this season for the first time and has made a tent that sells at a very low price. It can be carried in compact fashion on the running boards of a motor car and is set up quickly.

Q. What is the most popular type of tent point on the market? My present car is fitted with joints and I cannot get the makers name. Can you make me a list of the types? A. The Spicer joint is our standard type. It is used on practically all makes of vehicles. You will have to give me the name and model of your car before I can give you a list of the data.

CAR TAG IS DEvised TO STOP THEFT

An automobile identification system has been worked out by Frank Robertson of 2046 Seventh avenue and J. C. Twomey of 230 Grand avenue.

The plan calls for a brass tag, with the information denoting license number, owner of car and its make. This tag is to be attached in a conspicuous part of each automobile operated in California.

Corresponding with the tag the owner would carry another small enough to be fastened onto an ordinary key ring, which also would bear credentials showing the operator to be the lawful owner.

If different states adopted the Robertson-Twomey system these men would try to place on the statute books a law by which.

No oil, gasoline nor motor supplies would be sold to any one who did not have both the original identification tag on his car and the miniature tag on his person.

No private garage could be rented without the tags being presented as evidence of rightful ownership of the motor vehicle.

No automobiles could be stored in public garages without presentation of these tags.

No transportation company could accept for shipment an automobile or truck which did not have the tags.

Whenever requested by police officers the tags must be produced.

It is the belief of both Twomey and Robertson that a state fund of approximately $500,000 would be derived in California from the sale of these tags and that money thus obtained could be used in the employment of a larger staff of men for patrolling highways.

Old Engine, Thick Oil, Motor Rule

After a motor has seen reasonably long service, so that the pistons do not fit as closely in the cylinders as they did at first, it is advisable to use a heavier grade of oil in order to take up a little of the clearance. In racing motors where the piston to cylinder clearance is often more than twice that used in ordinary practice, the drivers use heavy oil. High viscosity lubricants such as castor oil or mixtures of castor and mineral oil are favorites for racing motors.

DEALERS GIVEN TIRE LESSONS

To better educate its various service station dealers on the meaning of Goodyear's tire conservation service, a large advertising campaign has been indulged in to instruct motor car owners on how to get most mileage out of tires with the least amount of tire trouble. The duties of the service manager employed in each Goodyear branch were explained and later motion pictures illustrated the different processes employed in the conservation of tires.

Tomorrow night a similar meeting will take place in the Goodyear branch salesrooms to be attended by motor truck dealers for the purpose of better explaining correct service methods on large pneumatic tires. Every truck representative in the Eastbay cities is invited to it.

DON'T FORGET TIRES AS TOUR IS PLANNED

Before starting on that long tour you're planning for this summer remember your tires. They will have to bear the brunt of lots of hard usage before you get back and unless you don't care about annoying delays, see that they are in first class shape before you begin the first leg of your trip.

It's a common practice of motorists, says the Diamond Rubber Company Inc., to overlook their tires even when they are very careful about other things. They take great pains to see that their engines are running smoothly, brakes adjusted properly, nuts tightened, grease cups filled, and so on, and then pass up their tires entirely.

length of the race was, as well—399 gruelling miles.

"And that isn't all," added Smith. "Of the ten cars that finished the race seven of them were Exide battery equipped."

GEAR REDUCTION ON HIGH CLEARED FOR QUESTIONER

Q. What is meant by gear reduction on high? What relation has the speed of the motor to its power and performance?

A. The term gear reduction refers to the ratio between the number of teeth on one gear to those on another gear. The gear reduction on high is the ratio between the number of teeth on the differential ring gear and the driving pinion. Thus 3 to 1 means that there are three times as many teeth on the ring gear as there are on the pinion. This means that the engine turns over three times to one revolution of the rear wheels when the gears are in high.

2. As the engine speed increases the power increases up to a certain point called the peak. At this point the engine has reached its maximum power, although the speed may be further increased.

The use of aluminum is almost indispensable for the production of automobiles.

IGNITION TESTED IN SPEED EVENTS

R. C. Smith, manager of the Smith United Service, local Exide battery service station, is elated over the showing that has been made by the Exide battery and Delco Ignition in prominent speed events this year.

"Take, for instance," Smith states, "a recent racing event—the International motor sweepstakes, held in Indianapolis on Memorial day. Here was one of the most exacting tests of endurance to which a battery has been subjected. And yet Gaston Chevrolet, an American driver, at the wheel of an American car and in competition with some of the greatest stars of Europe and America, came in winner—using Delco ignition and an Exide battery."

"Not only was the speed of this race ($815 miles per hour) a test of battery endurance, but the great

HONDURAN TELLS OF TRUCK LINES

Truck operation in Honduras has its distinctive and interesting features, B. D. Guilbert of Tegucigalpa says. Guilbert is a member of the H. A. T. Company, which handles the bulk of all kinds of transportation in that section. He is on a combination business and pleasure trip and he is looking over the interesting sights and studying the commercial activities of California.

Last week he spent in Los Angeles, but will visit all the principal cities of the state before returning to his Central American home. The chief business of his company is handling the government mail, passengers and express matter between Tegucigalpa, Comayagua and San Lorenzo, the port city serving that territory. He has in service six Moreland trucks, including one four-ton truck, upon which he depends for the bulk of his heavy work. He first started in business five years ago with Morelands and has them still running.

Because of the fact that he handles the government mail on a ten-hour limitation contract, it is absolutely essential that no time be lost.

Low Grade Fuel

No PACKARD TWIN SIX owner needs to worry about the low grade of gasoline, for every new model TWIN SIX is equipped with the PACKARD FUELIZER—the only real solution of the fuel problem.

The FUELIZER is an inherent part of the carburetor and makes any grade of gasoline a perfect fuel by affording perfect combustion.

Consequently there are no fouled spark plugs, practically no deposit of carbon and no passage of raw fuel into the crank case to dilute and ruin the lubricating oil.

It gives an immediate starting of the motor, no matter how poor the fuel or how cold the weather.

The FUELIZER can be applied to any model of the PACKARD TWIN SIX at small expense—it will soon pay for itself.

WAS THERE, LO, AND HE'S OVER HERE

There's nothing in the world to convince a man like having him try it out for himself. No one, perhaps, is harder to convince than a newspaper man. He is in a business where he must always fight shy of too much enthusiasm and exuberance and where he always plays the role of the "doubting Tommie."

But this particular newspaper man in the case in point is convinced. This is the way of it:

In Alameda reposed his household goods, also many and various "volunteers of forgotten lore" and the domicile to which he wished them conveyed was in Berkeley, 101 ten long miles away.

"Let us show you what you can do with our speedy little one-ton economy model," suggested H. G. Marcham, of Marcham & Purser, Eastbay Oldsmobile distributors.

He did. Fifteen minutes to load and about ten to unload; thirty minutes on the road; was over in a jiffy and not a nail or a screw, not a cracked goblet or a mutilated piece; no packing, no laborious wrapping and unwrapping of mirrors and dressers and polished table and chairs. It was a revelation to the doubter and it conclusively proved what a truck can do.

AVOID RUTS AND PROLONG LIFE OF CAR

A tip on driving and its relation to repair bills is offered by Westley E. Gillette, manager of the service department of the Chester N. Weaver Company, distributors of Studebaker automobiles and Day-Elmer trucks.

"When a car is rolling along at a speed of 25 miles per hour and strikes a large stone or bad bump," said Gillette, "every vital and moving part of the motor and mechanism receives the impact of a blow of nine or ten tons in force. Not fully realizing this, many drivers continue day after day to drive merrily along, suffering their cars to unfold punishment when by simply avoiding the bad spots much trouble might be saved. If more care were taken in driving cars would stand up longer and repair bills would be fewer."

from the factory in Detroit and will arrive here the end of this week.

SIERRA RESORT'S REPORT SUPPLY OF GASOLINE

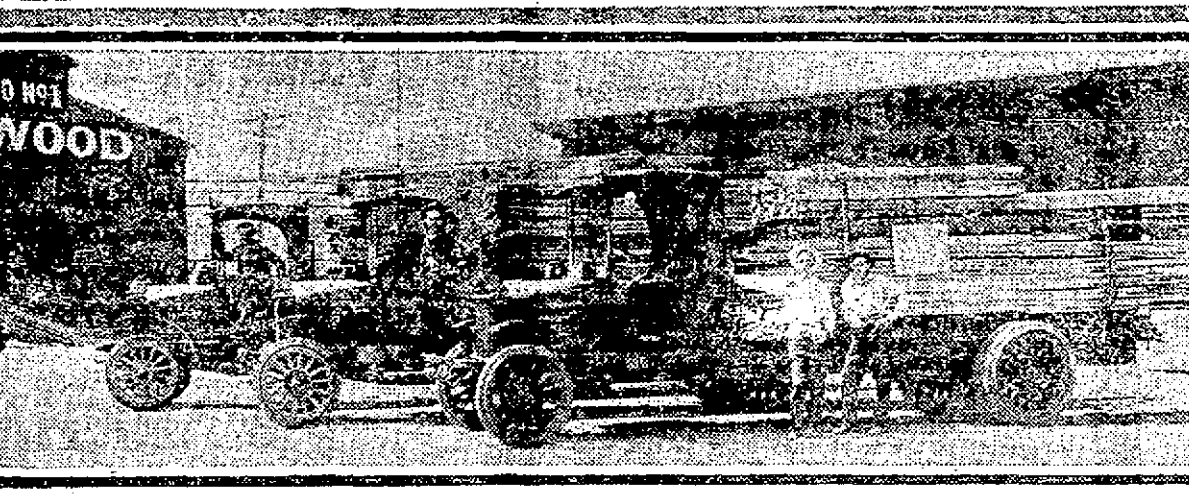

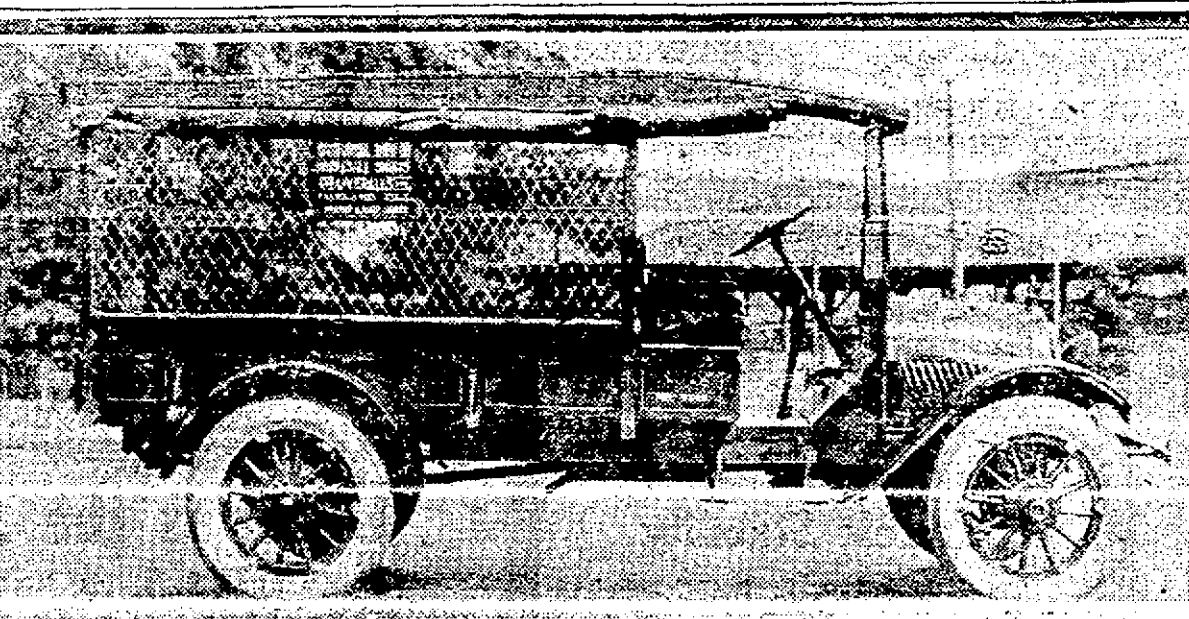

Motorists en route into Yosemite will find plenty of gasoline at Earl Inn, on the Big Oak Flat road. This information was sent by the hotel manager, to Dr. W. A. Clark in reply to an inquiry regarding fuel conditions.

Similar news is sent out by practically every resort in California. If a shortage ever existed at any of the big Sierra hotels it was only of a temporary nature. Certain it is that stringent regulations do not govern the sale of gasoline.

Lamp Battery Rods As Carbon Brushes

The small carbon rods which are part of the ordinary pocket lamp battery can be filled and trimmed down to make a very acceptable temporary replacement for worn out carbon brushes in the magneto.

THIS DESIGN IN OLDSMOBILE LIGHT DELIVERY TRUCKS, HAVING SCREEN SIDES, has taken quite well with various commercial organizations in the eastbay cities. It has lots of carrying space for bulky merchandise and can be quickly loaded.

AUTOISTS ASKED TO VISIT LOCAL TIRE FACTORY

Further progress in the expansion plans of the Sturges Tire and Rubber Company are announced by V. K. Sturges, head of the Oakland tire manufacturing concern. A $40,000 building has been erected and in it is housed equipment for cutting and making tire molds which are used in producing tires.

Sturges says the additional unit he has recently completed is the only plant of its kind west of Akron. It is no longer necessary to send cast to buy tire building machinery.

The Sturges Half Sole tire which is featured by the local manufacturers is enjoying its biggest year since starting in business.

This week has been named visitors' week at the Sturges factory and motorists are invited to see how tires are made.

Production Near Up to Car Orders

With steady expansion at the big plant and things moving rapidly, Rev. (Karlmann), general manager of Hawley, King & Co., distributors of Oakland cars in California, reports that production is catching up with orders and that there will be a steady stream of cars coming to this territory in the near future.

"The statement of the Oakland Motor Car Company that every effort would be made in 1929 to satisfy the demand for Sensible Sixes is borne out by Gartzmann.

TRUCKS RELIEVE RAIL CONGESTION

When railway congestion reached its sudden crisis early in April, and the flow of freight to and from the Autocar factory was for a time almost totally suspended, it was necessary for the company to call upon its own product, in order to keep its plant operating. It was necessary not only to get shipments of raw material into the factory, but also to keep going from the factory to the various branches and dealers, which was paramount to secure raw materials for the factory, and to help out other manufacturers.

The trucks did all and more than had been expected of them, and if they had not been available the plant, like some other manufacturers who were not so well served with motor trucks, would have been obliged to run on greatly reduced hours or possibly to shut down entirely. This unusual emergency service could not have been accomplished if it had not been for the remarkable loyalty of the drivers, who went without rest for long periods and worked day and night with the single thought in mind, which was to get parts to the branches and dealers, and material to the factory, so that The Autocar Company and its trucks could keep going and continue to give their particular service to the country at a time when the industrial life of the nation was

NEW AUTO FERRY NEAR COMPLETION

Finishing touches are being given to the new automobile ferry which is being built for the Rodeo-Vallejo Ferry Company. Completion date is expected some time during August and it is the hope of the Rodeo-Vallejo ferry management to announce shortly that services will be available on the new ship before September 1.

The boat now in course of construction will haul approximately 65 automobiles and its speed is expected to be great enough to permit a trip from Rodeo to South Vallejo in twelve minutes, a running time which is about fifteen minutes faster than can be obtained from the present steamer Isaacson.

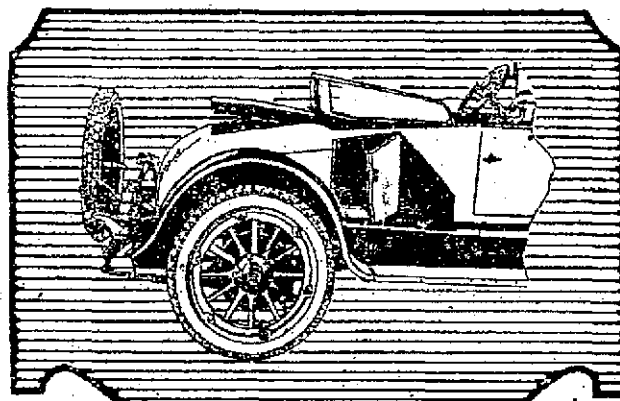

Motorists will hail this news with delight because, with the installation of the new craft, there will be provided for them the best ferry service possible from Contra Costa into Solano counties.

The Six Minute Ferry now runs two boats an hour and each trip carries six minutes in crossing. On holidays, during rush periods, an extra boat is pressed into service. Now, with the new Rodeo ferry there will be still greater facilities for hauling automobiles across the bay into Solano county and little danger of congestion is likely to arise, at any time.

Cheap Grease Cups Found Expensive

Cheap grease cups are more than likely to become worthless in a short time. It is almost impossible for the ordinary man to turn one of these cups down and even if he is able to, the operation may not send the grease home where it is needed. The only remedy for this condition is to install really efficient grease cups, oil cups or get a lubrication system of the kind that puts grease in the bearings under high pressure.

CROSS SECTION (UPPER) AND COMPLETE VIEW (LOWER) OF THE NEW MONTGOMERY-KIMBALL MOTOR, AN engine radically different in design from any gasoline power plant in existence. It has a turbine case, is air-cooled and is a two-cycle instead of four-cycle principle. Great claims are made for its economy, its simplicity and low manufacturing cost.

ENGINE WITH TURBINE CASE COMPLETED

and Geo. E. Kimball? Will the turbine case and two cycle principle involved in their motor supplant the present successful crank shaft and four cycle design used in virtually every automobile and most stationary engines? These inventors think so and if you listen to them for just a few minutes you are convinced by their sincerity in the engine they have produced that a radical change in power propulsion methods is already here.

The first successful operating engine they have built is completed and has been tried out for the last week to an extent great enough in its results to cause George Montgomery, one of the originators, to emphatically declare that the automobile manufacturer who does not adopt the new type of high speed gasoline engine which he (Montgomery) has been instrumental in perfecting, will soon become a second rate motor car circles.

Further tests are planned at the Hall Scott plant in Berkeley which will include a brake and a dynamometer demonstration to show that statements which have been made have been fulfilled.

CLAIMS WHICH ARE MADE.
These are just a few of many claims made by the inventors. That the Montgomery-Kimball motor with the same size bore and stroke will produce from eight to ten times as much power as the motor now in use.

That the motor which has already been made and which they say develops from 80 to 100 horsepower has run on one gallon of gasoline for an hour and a half at a speed which is the equivalent of a continuous speed of 50 miles an hour in an automobile; in other words that the Montgomery-Kimball motor can deliver at least 50 miles for each gallon of gasoline consumed.

That this new motor eliminates the present type of engine and all so the transmission, there being necessary under the new principle only one forward and one reverse gear.

That a large percentage of weight will be eliminated from the automobile which would be equipped with the Montgomery-Kimball motor because the latter engine is considerably lighter.

That the first cost of a motor car would be considerably less, because it will be much cheaper to produce the Montgomery-Kimball power plant in view of its very few component parts.

The foregoing claims are, of course, subject to possible revision. The present is a much too early period, in the writer's opinion, to pass final judgment on the ultimate success awaiting this motor, for in my calculations there is yet to be held the good old fashioned road test which will bring out any weaknesses that might exist and which as yet have not come to the surface.

No motor rear manufacturer of prominence ever adopted any radical change without first having subjected the new principle to every kind of abuse he knew, realizing that if there were any hidden "bugs" it was a matter of sound business judgment to discover them before his hands.

In the turbine case which forms part of the new motor, much the same idea is involved as that employed in a triple expansion steam turbine motor. There is practically no lost power.

From a manufacturing viewpoint the designers say that a low cost will be obtained because all of the parts used can be turned out and completed by machinery and the hand fitting will be unnecessary.

OFFICERS OF COMPANY.
The intention of the present company which is constituted as follows: Geo. J. Montgomery, president; Geo. E. Kimball, vice-president; Herbert Bred, secretary; directors, Chas. P. Eccleston, R. T. Hughes, H. W. Brunk and W. Porter, will be to sell manufacturing royalties to motor car, motor truck, aviation engine and stationary engine builders.

Both two and four cycle motors can be built on the idea incorporated in this motor and patents are said to have been issued covering them.

The writer is anxious to hear what motor experts like Col. "Al" Hall of the Hall-Scott Motor Works, will say of the local engine, for an approval from him would come pretty near satisfying any skeptic that there is merit behind the idea. In the meantime we are also curious to see what developments will come from an actual road test.

FRESH AIR IS DIRE NECESSITY, SAYS EXPERT

Stale air may have a very deteriorating effect on tires, according to S. L. Fisher, Firestone branch manager.

To offset this difficulty, he recommends that the tires be filled with a fresh supply at least three times each year.

In discussing the question of inflation, Fisher gives advice about the common fault of automobile owners in guessing at the air pressure.

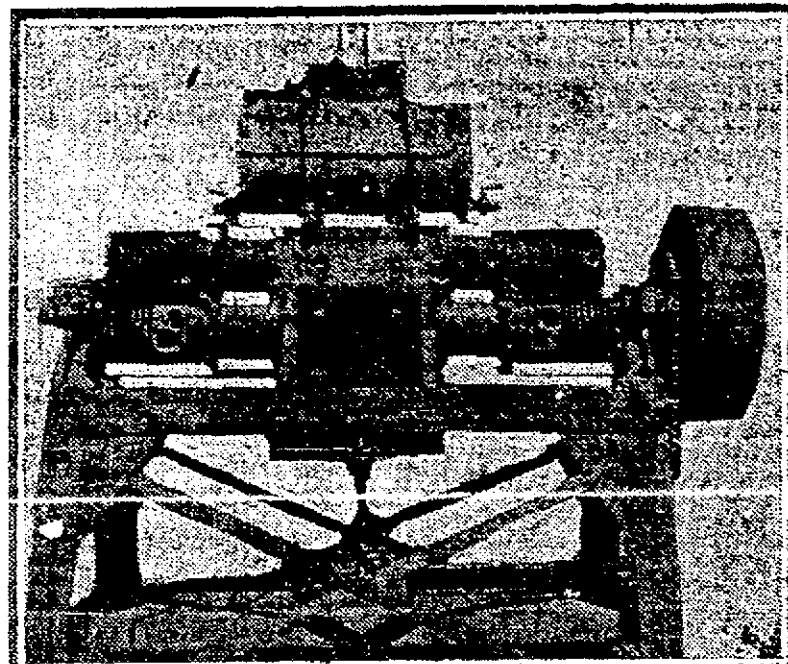

"We believe," he says, "the most satisfactory inflation method is to pump up the tires in accordance with formula and then, if necessary, reduce the pressure slightly until it ceases to cause excessive vibration to the car or traction slippage of the rear wheels. Make a record of the pounds of pressure at this point and, it always maintained, the greatest efficiency from tires and car will be enjoyed."

NEW VOLUME IS GUIDE TO ROAD

The Transcontinental Volume—"Volume T"—just published, is a new tour bible built to satisfy that lust for long tours.

While the minute details of the other volumes are not included, the tourist may travel where he will over main routes to any prominent point within the four walls of America and have complete road guidance every mile of the way.

Volume T, say the Blue Book scouts, contains 36,000 miles of roads—not including return routes—and considering that it is only about 3400 miles from San Francisco to New York, the scope of the information included can be appreciated.

Besides indicating the best roads for the long-tour motorist there are hundreds of city and sectional maps, points of interest, information on hotels, garages, service stations—in fact most of the merits of the more local volumes on a broader scale.

Texas leads the country in the amount authorized for good roads, with bond issues totaling $44,708,000.

Supreme Test of Truck Stability

Truck operation in the Coachella Valley is not what the most enthusiastic optimist could term a path of ease.

A truck has to operate there under conditions of extreme heat. It has to dig through roads that are but wheel tracks in the enveloping sand. It has to fight through sandstorms, over into, out of and through chuck holes and washes.

Large numbers of Morelands are operating in that valley. Their owners are among the most enthusiastic Moreland boosters. Talk with them and see their trucks at work and you will quickly learn why.

Moreland trucks are built with an understanding of the work they must be ready to do in the West, of which that in the Coachella Valley is but a sample. They sure go stand the gauntlet.

Pictured below is one of the Moreland trucks in a typical desert road which, day after day, is doing its important work in the valley, dependably and well. It has to or there would be great loss and hardship.

Moreland Service

Don't forget that Moreland service stations are equipped to supply standard unit parts for all trucks using these units as well as Morelands. It may save you time and money.

Utility is the True Test By Which to Judge the Real Value of a Motor Truck.

On city streets and country lanes, alike, no matter what the nature of the load, the Oldsmobile Economy Truck has proven itself to be the truck of maximum utility. You can depend upon it. It does the work.

ARMLEDER Quality Motor Trucks

Armleder trucks are equipped with full floating worm-drive rear axles. The weight is carried on an extension of the axle housing and the live axle itself is left entirely free for the transmission of power. The housing makes a much stronger support for the load than the live axle and it relieves that vital part of some complicated stresses which in the semi-floating or three-quarter floating type of axle it is forced to carry. To secure equal strength in the axle drive shaft it would have to be made abnormally large.

Another important advantage of the full floating type of axle is its much greater accessibility. A rear wheel can be removed from an Armleder truck without the use of a wheel puller. There are only

Features You Get Exclusively in MACK TRUCKS

The Flexible Pressed Steel Frame

A motor truck frame is a bridge between the two axles. In Mack trucks the frame is flexible, as flexible structures withstand vibration with less ill effect than do rigid ones. A flexible frame will give to unusual stress and recover where a rigid one would buckle or break. The flexible frame accommodates itself to road shock and thus protects the whole truck.

Inherent flexibility in a frame is only possible when flexible materials are used.

Pressed Steel in Mack Frames

Truck frames are either of rolled or pressed steel. To roll a frame the steel is subjected to a crushing process which is damaging to the steel fibers. When the steel is pressed, however, the fibrous structure of the steel is left undisturbed. There is another added advantage that is important: Pressed steel is the lightest form in which steel may be shaped for a beam of given strength.

Next: Spring Lubrication.

Bungalow

In one of the most beautiful residence sections of Oakland, planned by two artistic women who understand how to keep requirements, built for their own home, by day labor and never occupied. Refreshingly different from the usual run of contractor-built bungalows—nothing cramped, nothing crowded. The rooms are large, well lighted and correctly arranged with places planned for piano, pictures and furniture. The kitchen, dining and living rooms are bright and cheerful and the bedrooms are comfortable and cozy. The bathroom is complete with a toilet, sink and tub. The house is finished with a beautiful blue and white color scheme and a large front porch, with a large lawn, and a deep lot. This is indeed a snap.

GOLFER GIRLS

Sketches from life by
H. J. Westerman

COPYRIGHT, 1920; McCLELLURE
NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE.

The girls who pass the latest scandal while the other one of the three some struggles between keeping her eye on the ball and her ear on the scandal.

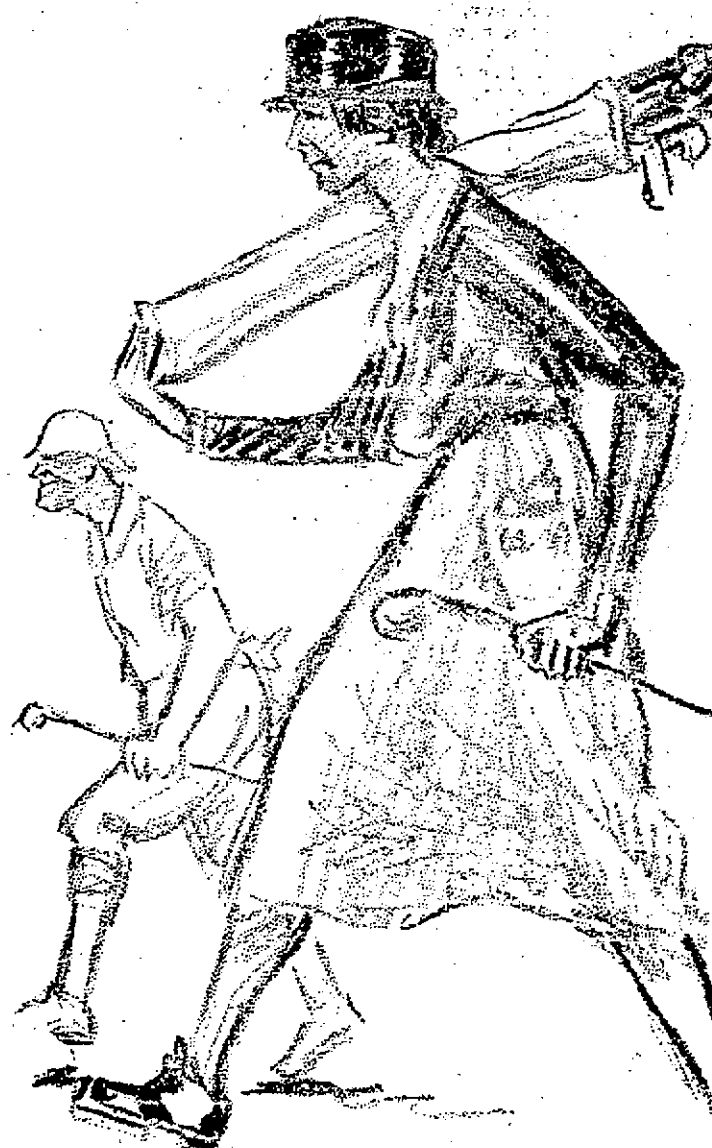

"She usually is off the tee in three. Isn't that terrible? The first tee always makes me so nervous."

"We won't worry about our drives dearie we're playing more for the companionship anyway!"

"Oh! Marge! I'm just doing wonderfully! I've just played the first nine in 196. That's the first time I've broken 200 on it!"

She shoots 'em like a man, walks like a man, and talks to 'em like a man if you know what that means.

The women who play nine holes in three hours and spend about one hour of the three straightening out the score after each hole.

The girl who giggles herself and her companion out of about half their shots and says: "Oh! well we had an awfully jolly afternoon even if we did play atrociously, didn't we, dear?"

She says, "I won't count that one because I was hurrying and there was no reason for my missing it!"

Growing Up With Warren Harding

by Jack Warwick

Boyhood Playmate, School Chum and First Newspaper Associate of Republican Presidential Nominee

© UNDERWOOD-UNDERWOOD

Miss Wyoming Greels Senator Harding at Washington.

Mrs. Harding Pins a Rose on Warren G.

Back yonder in the early '70s Warren Gamaliel Bancroft Winniepe Harding, dressed up in his first long-pants suit of perpendicular stripes, stepped out of a small, yellowish-little Ohio village and presented himself as a candidate for President of the United States of America. What the Republican National Convention did at Chicago, June 12, 1920, was to give formal recognition and official endorsement to this boy's incipient ambition.

The aim of this story is to tell some of the intimate things that go towards filling the gap between the first pair of long pants and Chicago, events which the public does not know, but of right ought to know. The big outstanding thing in Warren Gamaliel Bancroft Winniepe Harding's nomination—this is as far as the writer cares to tote the excess nomenclature—is that the door of opportunity has not been slammed in the face of American youth, that it is still open to boys who look forward and strive. Warren G. Harding's struggles were not less humble than the experiences of James A. Garfield, the boy who drove the canal mules.

In telling these things I wish I might eliminate the personal pronoun and avoid the appearance of clinging to the coat tails of a possible President. As it is and must be, I am a monstrosity—the shrinking violet that has developed into a sunflower. But I must bloom on.

DRAB CALEDONIA
There would have been no sense in starting this story off like fiction, making silvery sunlight filter through fretful maple trees on a summer morning. It would have added nothing in the way of interest to what is to follow if I had thrown in a background of hills and forced them to stand on tiptoe and kiss a simple horizon. One cannot, in good faith, plant mountains in the soil of a notoriously flat corn belt. Neither can one conscientiously make an inspiring perspective of a town pump in a center of "hoosegrows," a public square of an old-fashioned village.

It is better to stick to facts. In this case the main fact is Warren G. Harding, Republican nominee for President. His boyhood was spent in this old-fashioned village with the barren public square and a town pump in the center, or near it. Paraphrasing the words of a poet, that the pump has been removed, but the well remains where it was in Harding's young days. It is no easy matter to move a well.

WARWICK MEETS NEW BOY
Returning to Harding, he first dawned on my vision that morning of a glorious summer day, snick-snapping in his first long pants. Truth be told, the admission that he looked better in them than he looks in golf togs, or the Washington cameras are added to campaign lying. It does not matter whether he was six or eight, he was tall for his age, and is yet, for that matter. He was conscious of his new clothes and looked imperious. It was the only time he has ever looked that way to me, and this goes for a period covering many years.

The Hardings—the father was a country doctor—had moved from Morrow county, where Warren Gamaliel was born; but not in a log cabin. It so happened that I was born in a log cabin, mentioned here because it was the only time I ever got ahead of Harding, but I must bloom on. As a new boy in town, that long pants morning, Warren Gamaliel inspired the traditional boy aversion to tidy new comers. His registerable self-satisfaction and loomed good enough to muss us. The parents had come to town to stay indefinitely, but the youngster created the impression in my mind that he was merely stopping over for a brief period.

Nothing came of the desire to desecrate the new clothes. Furthermore, they didn't last long, anyway, for the boy soon grew out of them feet first. I cannot recall the next meeting with the newcomer, but it was not long before a mutual friendship was formed that ripened into a faith that made it possible to assume the hard knocks that came to us in later years.

THE TOWN'S "LITTLE DEVIL"
Every small town has a few oracles who make it their business to enlighten the community as to what boy is going to Congress and which one is headed for the penitentiary. The oracles never deal extensively in presidents because the demand is light. I recall a visit to Caledonia not long since during which I met the major oracle of the town. He greeted me with this remark: "Well, Jack, I see Warren got there." He added that Warren always was mighty smart. Warren had then reached the United States Senate. It so happened that the Senator had been one of the boys to whom the oracle had given the title of "little devil."

But that "little devil" phrase was not applicable to Warren G. Harding's young life if it was meant to imply any sort of viciousness. He was always good humored, full of fun that didn't hurt. He was a harmonizer and peacemaker among belligerents.

Since the Chicago Convention Caledonia, when it isn't standing on its head, is scratching it in an effort to recall all the little, devilish things the nominee did when he was a boy in the village. When memory doesn't produce results, fancy comes to the rescue. Not all of the stories told are absolutely true. The temptation to embellish is strong within the people of a presidential candidate's boyhood place of residence. The man the Caledonians are talking about is a regular boy, a human in his love of harmless fun and without the taint of incorrigibility. Somewhere I have seen it intimated that during their early residence in Caledonia, the Hardings were acquainted with poverty. William Dean Howells has defined poverty as the dread of want. There was no dread of want in that home. My visits there were frequent, and to me it was one of the happy, homey homes of the village.

A DREAM NEWSPAPER
It was in this Caledonia home that two boys dreamed dreams of some day editing and printing a newspaper. They even went so far as actually prepare copy for their dream paper. Many miscellaneous articles were clipped and put away to be ready for the great publication day.

I have seen the statement that Harding's first journalistic work was done on a college paper at Oberlin, where the old Central Ohio college which graduated him was located. If he did that, we kept me off his exchange list. I never saw the college publication, though I was never entirely out of touch with him while he was a student in the institution. Warren G. Harding should have had at least one good whipping from the teacher during his school days

Greetings from the G.O.P. Nominee

In Caledonia. I am not here to say that he did not deserve many more, but one would have been enough to add color to this chapter of rumination. His escape may be attributed in some measure to the fact that corporal punishment in the school room was going out of style at that time. The custom of flogging or trying to lick, the teacher went out when the graded school came in, and teachers were disposed to let well enough alone when pupils were inclined to be at all tractable. Indications of rules had to be most flagrant to bring about demonstrations of physical force. At this period of which I write "Hoosier Schoolmaster" days were fast passing away.

The nearest Warren G. came to getting a whipping is vivid in my memory. I got it. Both were involved, but it so happened that I was nearest the teacher when caught. The first and only blow struck me across the shoulder blade and produced temporary numbness of the whole arm. In retrospect it tingles yet. The heavy hickory ruler, a yard long, was broken to pieces in the first crash. The result was that the teacher never got around to Harding, then or thereafter.

Caledonia is still talking about Harding's school days, during which he maintained an attitude of ease. Though not a prodigy along any line, he absorbed easily all that was taught. Nobody ever saw him at hard study, but he shone at recitation. No other pupil had one-third as much time to give to things that were not in the curriculum. While others fought to win the prize he sailed through on flowery beds of ease. Inasmuch as he was ever prepared for recitations, the teacher didn't find it necessary to keep one eye on him.

WARREN ALWAYS "SUSPECT"
There were no angels in pants, long or short, enrolled in the Caledonia schools when Harding and I attended, and many irregular things happened. If one of the girls dipped her pen into the inkwell on her desk and found in it water or something that should not be there, under the rules and regulations, suspicion was at once directed towards young Harding. There is a maxim against telling tales out of school. As for me, I'm opposed to telling details out of school.

In the back porch Caledonia was a plug tobacco village. If one of the boys in school felt like nipping off a chew of "dogleg" during study hours he was in the predicament of having no place where to spit out the juice and at the same time avoid detection. At these times resourcefulness of a high order was required, and most of the boys were equipped with a mentality that enabled them to meet the emergency. Grammar was as easy to Harding as pulling a sunfish out of the Olen-tan-y or Whetstone river. Orthography gave him no trouble whatever. I recall at one time the word "unparalleled" was massacred and lacerated by a number of the pupils before it reached Harding. He had no trouble with it. The ease with which he handled it after others had failed so fixed itself in my mind that "unparalleled" remained in after years one of the easiest words for me to spell correctly.

Even though I have blossomed into the audacity of a sunflower where I once was a violet, I still have a natural hesitancy against going into these small details concerning the town oracle's "little devil." But there is another side to the story that must be given consideration. We have a great republic, a country that reaches out among its people to select its leaders. It is no more than fair that the people should know their candidates for high office intimately, not alone as they are, but as they were. I am telling you that Warren G. Harding was a plain American boy among American boys, equipped with a bright mind, sense of humor and unafraid of work of the commonest kind.

FIRST SMELL OF INK
"Chores" is an important word in the lexicon of the son of a country doctor. It means horses to curry and feed, a stable to be kept clean and a cow to milk morning and evening. Few boys, on farms or in small towns, have learned to do these things earlier in life than Warren G. Harding learned them. If a boy may have another boy of his liking with him the labor is lightened. In love with horses myself, though not crazy about milking cows, I was often with Dr. Harding's son to see that the work was done right. A team that comes in after a hard drive over mud roads needs considerable attention. Dr. Harding's horses were not neglected.

Caledonia was never a pretentious place, but it was good to live in for around the town on the back of a horse. The town oracle shook his

WAS HARDING "GOT RELIGION?"
In our tender years W. G. and I were regular attendants at church and Sunday school. We even went to prayer meeting together and saw dear old patriots who have since come to their reward. Religion is the throne of grace for life everlasting while watching us through their fingers. For the sake of the coming generation it should be stated that the patriots never taught us anything worse than they were accustomed to doing unto each other in horse trades.

Among these self-appointed mentors of youth for the sake of righteousness was a blacksmith who at one time was the most profane man in town save one. After he "got religion" he could speak louder than any man in town, but none.

This man's suspicion of boys was so potent that he would not let us alone. Finally we called a meeting of the boys and decided the only thing we could do as law-abiding boys would be to proclaim his own village of Caledonia. We made him run a "runner" of practical verification. Within his hearing, but with eyes to keep out of his reach, the cheerleader would cry "Who owns Caledonia?" Then the boys would call in chorus the name of their tormentor. We not only kept our noses clean, but less activity against us, ever after.

An intimate paragraph or two speaking pleasantly of this little village of Caledonia may not be out of place here. I have heard it called a "hell-hole" with a Billy Sunday emphasis. But it was not that. Under the liberal state liquor laws of the time of which I write the place had a saloon for every 100 population. It was a Saturday night town and things broke loose at least once a week. Yet in spite of the saloons and the drunken rowdism many boys of the town grew up to be men of manhood. For this the schools with the right sort of teachers and the church with the right sort of preachers were responsible. Out of the class of Warren G. I do not remember but I recall eight or ten who went out into the world and made good in the pulpit, in law and in business.

HARDING'S OUTLOOK

The Hardings moved from Caledonia to a farm, where the father continued to practice medicine while the son tilled the soil. Now, I'm not going to give any farmer the impression that Warren G. was successful at this sort of thing. He was not with the accent on the Not Not.

As a boy Warren G. never missed anything in the fun line. When life was particularly dull he relied upon his own resources to make it lively. He was a member of the basketball team, and they never had the cheese or nailed up the cracker barrel where they saw him coming. It was this little town that gave Warren G. and myself our first smell of printer's ink and let us get our fingers in type. Dr. Harding was instrumental in persuading two men to come to the town and start a weekly newspaper. They called it The Arcus. Three men, an editor and two printers, tried to live on the income from this small sheet in a town of 700 people, when one could have starved to death more comfortably. The Arcus was a sensation in the community for a short time, until it changed ownership and settled down to business. Under another name it still lives and is glorifying the nomination of Warren G. Harding for president.

During his boyhood days in Caledonia, Warren G. Harding was a one-race crowd on a horse. He rode bareback and did our milking on a pike road outside the village. The horses belonged to Dr. Harding, and Warren G. always won because he selected the better of the two animals.

Prince, a bay beauty that had received training on the race track and could run like a hurricane behind time, was his arbitrary choice. For many years, Prince's stablemate, inevitably, fell to my lot. The result was a foregone conclusion before the race started. I never had a chance on Rozzante, whose only ambition was to keep within reaching distance of Prince. This is not a belated grievance, it is history. The sport was worth any sacrifice of pride. When they were "letting their out," the horses enjoyed the race and the riders got reaction, of which there was not a surplus in the village.

Warren G. was forever darting the natives with his mad dashes around the town on the back of a horse. The town oracle shook his head and made the dire prophecy "hot the 'little devil' would break his neck some day. But he never knew as the world knows, and now he is astride the elephant. Strange and interesting are the mutations of time."

With many trepidations the book was published. But before it saw light as a book it began serially in the National Era, beginning June 5, 1921, appearing in withstanding I saw less of him during this period than in later years and one could see that while he had acquired a simplicity for farmers he had acquired a love for farming.

I have seen him drive to town in a wagon drawn by one horse and one mule. It was a low, shabby outfit. Horse and mule made an unnatural combination. There is not enough democracy in a horse to enable it to adapt itself to the society of a mule, and to be hitched with one is humiliating. As for the mule, it can have no ancestral pride or hope of the future and a boy and man's comprehension. The Harding mule was a fair degree among his kind. He was the owner of a grey eye, with a disposition to match. From the window of the little Arcus printing office I have seen Warren G. drive his team of incontinent animals into town and out again, not standing on a load of compost for the farm. Up to this time Warren G. Harding had painted barns and houses, made brooms, set type in the village printing office, milked cows, and curried horses, farmed and learned to play a cornet.

After the cornet more or less let us alone. Finally we called a meeting of the boys and decided the only thing we could do as law-abiding boys would be to proclaim his own village of Caledonia. We made him run a "runner" of practical verification. Within his hearing, but with eyes to keep out of his reach, the cheerleader would cry "Who owns Caledonia?" Then the boys would call in chorus the name of their tormentor. We not only kept our noses clean, but less activity against us, ever after.

WAS HARDING HEAD OR FOOT?
From the farm Warren G. went to the Central Ohio college at Iberia, only a few miles distant. Here he ran true to form as a student and an animating influence. This little college fell into a state of "innocence" when it had succeeded in graduating Warren G. I do not remember whether he stood first or second in his class, but I do recall that there were only two graduates who were not graduates of the college.

A lawyer was picked out for the difference in the world. Some sort of start was made towards attending to the duties of a lawyer, but the work was unprofitable and didn't last long. This was in Marion, which place the family moved before the elder son finished his work at college.

But before going any further with these Marion experiences I shall take Warren G. back to Caledonia and let the reader hear him play the band. Continued Next Sunday.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE
Many an author with more literary ability than the author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has never achieved one-half the fame nor the smallest fraction of the grateful remembrance Harriet Beecher Stowe won almost overnight. And Mrs. Stowe herself wrote several better stories with finer literary flavor than the work that made her immortal. She wrote the book under difficulties that would have caused a woman less resolute to wonder why she should be so tried. Sister of Henry Ward Beecher and Charles Beecher, and the wife of Prof. Calvin E. Stowe—rich in everything but money—Mrs. Stowe had "written" ever since she was a little girl. In days when money was scarce in the home, some of Mrs. Stowe's friends sent to "Annals," that paid well, some of Mrs. Stowe's "pieces," and sometimes money came back for them. With the first money she earned she bought a carriage. But riches of another sort came to this family. Mrs. Stowe was the mother of seven children—and it was in the intervals of caring for them that she began her book.

When "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was offered to its publisher he suggested that the Stowes take part of the risk and receive half the profits, but the Stowes were too poor. The arrangement was therefore made that Mrs. Stowe should receive a 19 percent royalty. With many trepidations the book was published. But before it saw light as a book it began serially in the National Era, beginning June 5, 1851, appearing in

MYSTERY CHUM
1514 36th Ave., Oakland.

In the early days of the settlers there once lived a mother, Mrs. Williams, and her son Cuthbert. They were Puritans. When Penn came to this country and founded Pennsylvania, Cuthbert asked his mother if they could pack and go to Philadelphia. The Indians were very hostile in Massachusetts, where they lived, and he thought they might be afflicted under the new treaty. So they packed up and after a long trip arrived at their new home.

Cuthbert then cut down logs and began to make a log cabin. They had only two rooms and the roughest furniture. Some of the dishes were of wood. But they were very happy and at last the new home was finished, and they had planted a garden. Then they held a celebration and invited the neighbors, most of whom lived many miles away.

The day before the celebration Cuthbert set out to get some food. He had to go to the mill and half day's journey away. He was almost there when twelve Indians surrounded him. They bound him hand and foot and then took him to their camp. When they arrived there they cut him in a tree.

In the meantime night had fallen and he had not returned to his mother. So she rode to the nearest neighbor and stayed there while the men organized a party to search for him. They went the same way he had followed and at last came to the Indian camp. They found Cuthbert. They freed him. Then there was a big fight with the Indians, but the white people won and when they held their celebration the new home the next day they had many reasons for rejoicing.

So sweet, so dear, so true?
'Tis the best thing a child can have,
I think.
For 'tis a love that will never forsake you.
'Tis so sweet to know that she loves me too—
To share my sorrows and joys—
Now tell me please, Oh! tell me true—
What is so sweet as a mother's love.

An Indian Scare—A True Story.
This happened during the uprising of the Ute Indians in the Black Mountains. My grandfather and grandmother were pioneers and were living on a small settlement. One day the wives and mothers were afraid when the men went away to fight. My grandmother happened one night to be alone with my daddy, who was a little baby. Grandfather was out on watch. Grandmother had a candle and the light was sitting in the dining room looking out, watching for my grandfather. It was a bright moonlight night.
Suddenly a figure came close to the window and looked in. In his hands the figure held what seemed to be a tommyhawk and a large bunch of feathers stuck up on his head. My grandfather started screaming. The figure ran to the door, crying:
'Why, what is the matter, Mrs. Thulen?'
At that instant Grandmother recognized the voice as that of one of her neighbors. She opened the door and sure enough, the supposed Indian was only a friend! The bunch of feathers was her little starched sunbonnet—and the tommyhawk was a pair of slippers which she had given to her neighbor to help her with. So the scare ended in a happy laugh!

The Pirates' Den is certainly fine but the Witches' Cave is better. Charles Jordan thinks he is a little bit too smart. But he had better keep on the look out for Cow Girl Jane, for I will guard our Cave! Once some boys and girls were on a hike and saw down the road a dead body lying on the ground. They began to run, but the girls only laughed. For it was only a boy carrying a stick. That show how BRAVE boys are!

Little Tom was a bad boy and never minded his mother. One day his mother said: 'Tom, every time you disobey me a white hair grows on my head.'

Tom looked at his grandmother, who was sitting near, and said: 'Gee Mother, you must have been fierce when you were small for grandma's head is as white as snow!'

Rosamond's Paradise.
A great blue automobile rolled slowly down First street. Little Rosamond was watching it from her place in the gutter and said sadly to herself:
'Oh, if I were only rich like that. If someone would only love me and watch over me, I would be happy. Here she broke off and covered her eyes with her little hands to hide the tears. A misfortune had befallen Rosamond. She had been stolen when very young and raised in the slums and she had indeed no one to love her.

As she lay there sobbing a man with the jolliest of faces tapped her on the shoulder and said: 'What is the matter, little one?'

'I promise you a home with a truly mama and papa to love you if you will get me some important information.'

On Rosamond could only give a delighted cry in answer.

her eyes with her little hands to hide the tears. A misfortune had befallen Rosamond. She had been stolen when very young and raised in the slums and she had indeed no one to love her.

As she lay there sobbing a man with the jolliest of faces tapped her on the shoulder and said: 'What is the matter, little one?'

'I promise you a home with a truly mama and papa to love you if you will get me some important information.'

On Rosamond could only give a delighted cry in answer.

Writing For The Censor Ticklish Job

CHAPTER XXI

Photoplay writers must observe national censorship regulations, for while scenario editor, star and director may find their story to be masterpiece, it is at the last moment someone reflects that the big scene will not pass under Regulation No. 12 of 1918. It is all over.

It is a story which may be disapproved of as a masterpiece, but the censoring of important scenes after it is completed.

Two systems of censorship prevail in the National Board of Censors. To those regulations the larger companies have bound themselves for the betterment of the picture and the betterment of the industry. Local boards which have sprung up like mushrooms in small towns and provincial communities.

While no human mind can remember the innumerable conflicting regulations of these small town boards, since each local censor has his own ideas of what constitutes morality, the censor must at least follow the National Board's regulations, which are consistent and reasonable. The National Board will usually disapprove.

RULES TO FOLLOW.

1. Pictures in which character triumphs by virtue of immorality alone, as in the case of a woman who takes the "easiest way" to achieve her ends, are disapproved.
2. Scenes of filthy debauchery.
3. Scenes of violence, the purpose of featuring some unique and shocking crime, as coldblooded murder.
4. Scenes of violence, the purpose of featuring some unique and shocking crime, as coldblooded murder.
5. Scenes of violence, the purpose of featuring some unique and shocking crime, as coldblooded murder.
6. Scenes of violence, the purpose of featuring some unique and shocking crime, as coldblooded murder.
7. Scenes of violence, the purpose of featuring some unique and shocking crime, as coldblooded murder.

Considerable comment has been aroused in Los Angeles through the release of a short film comedy devoid of sub-titles, and the ten-year-old controversy over whether or not motion pictures eventually will be issued without the aid of catch-lines has revived.

However, motion picture producers, directors and actors in general are disposed to look with disfavor upon a "wordless picture," one director, Henry King, comparing sub-titles in motion pictures to the usual props of the spoken drama.

"The idea of theorists that the motion picture will some day be made without the aid of catch-lines is one of the ideas that are theoretically desirable, but in practice is impossible," says King.

Production experts, however, who have given deep study to the matter, hold no such views. The picture drama will never be stripped of language any more than the incident of the stage. Why should it be any more desirable in the one case than in the other?

"Good titles help not only in clarifying the situations for an audience, but also in the presentation of the picture. Sometimes titles are so clever that it might almost be said that they are a part of the picture. This is particularly true in film comedy."

In the case of serious drama it is almost impossible to convey to the audience what is really going on without the aid of titles. The picture drama will never be stripped of language any more than the incident of the stage. Why should it be any more desirable in the one case than in the other?

The majority of the water scenes of the new J. Parker Read Jr. vehicle were taken here. ## Constant Changes Keep Actor Young, He Says

One of the most general themes for debate in the motion picture world is the cause of a star's popularity—and the answers are as numerous as there are queries on the subject.

That mysterious force called personality is held to be second only to genius in aiding the motion picture favorite to maintain "year after year" a film following.

Edward McWade, a Goldwyn player, is the son of Robert McWade, who played "Rip Van Winkle" for thirty years on the stage.

Anita Steward recently entertained in her Los Angeles studio Mrs. Maud Murray Miller, member of the Ohio Board of Motion Picture Censors.

Hoat Gibson, Universal's two-rolled western drama hero, has signed a contract with that organization which "ropes" him for five years.

Winifred Black FOLKS AND THINGS

good-natured as she is, she is puzzled to death about it.

Foolish? Well, maybe she is, but after all no one likes to be different from everyone else, and she feels that she is different.

Her mother told me about it, and so the next time I took some girls to a party I made it my particular business to notice this particular girl.

Yes, it was just as they said. She was by far the prettiest girl in the room—hair, eyes, features, figure, all of them were just what I needed. She wore a sweet little frock charmingly made, and she danced very well.

Right in the same party with her was a little snub-nosed rascal of a girl with a pair of saucy black eyes and a way of wearing her dress that made every ruffie on her skimpy little skirt a challenge and invitation to an altercation.

WHAT IS THE SECRET? Little Black Eyes was surrounded with partners, and Little Beauty was glad to dance with anyone who asked her—yet she danced well enough, too.

What was the secret of it? I sat close to Beauty and observed and hunkered.

Her first partner was a young fellow just back from France, and Beauty was crazy to meet him. But when she did meet him, what do you suppose she talked to him about?

She asked him if he liked Latin and whether he found it hard to pass in algebra or not.

The young fellow from France had never studied Latin in his life, and he wouldn't know a problem in algebra if he met it in the street. But Beauty talked on and on, and the young fellow's eyes, at first slight with admiration and interest, began to rove.

The next partner was a senior home from college for a vacation. He wanted to talk about cane rushes and freshies and profs—anything so it would be about himself and his ways, and his friends and his little wits.

Beauty wouldn't have it. She asked him about algebra, too, and Latin and he stared and thought, "Good gracious, a girl who asks me about algebra and Latin? What a thing!"

Black Eyes went to the same school and was in the same class with Beauty, but she was a different partner with a long homily on Latin or mathematics?

No, she said.

"I've been wanting to meet you ever since you came in the door," said Black Eyes. "There's something about the way you dance."

"When did you get home? I've been dying to get a glimpse of you. I've heard of you for years," said Black Eyes to the junior from college.

WAKE UP, "BEAUTY!" Personalities, quick questions, light laughter, swift replies—that was the secret Black Eyes knew. And underneath it all, the steady, unflinching use of the muscles of her face and through the motions of her body.

Therefore, a fagged brain or a weary body spell failure for the motion picture actor. Despite many opinions to the contrary, the film actor does work hard and faithfully—fully as hard as the hardest worker in any business or profession in any other line.

What is the secret, then, of the actor's constant spring of enthusiasm—the enthusiasm that keeps him in and again, of course, her, young in spirit and appearance?

It is the change of roles and the equally frequent change in locale. I believe, answer the question. The actor's life is a constant change of scene, and about 3 feet five inches tall.

"TALKS WITH T. R."

Latest Addition to Field of Roosevelt Literature is Made Up From Extracts From Diary of Well-Known Newspaperman Who Was Intimate Acquaintance of Colonel.

"Talks With T. R." is the latest addition to the field of Roosevelt literature. The work is made up of extracts from the diaries of a well known and veteran newspaperman, John J. Leary Jr., who, during his thirty years of intimate association with Colonel Roosevelt, kept a special series of notebooks in which he recorded his many conversations of an intimate personal nature with the former President. As evidence of the close relationship that existed, the author publishes a facsimile of a letter Roosevelt wrote to Colonel Van Deman of the Military Intelligence in 1917 which read: "I have long known Mr. John J. Leary Jr. well and intimately. I vouch for him absolutely. . . . I would put him in any confidential position under me, if I were given command."

Now with the presidential campaign in full swing there is much of political interest in the intimate conversations related concerning certain well known political leaders who are now in the public eye. Apparently Roosevelt was much taken with Will Hays, chairman of the Republican National Committee. "Hays is a trump," declared Roosevelt. "He is all right. He may make mistakes, but he won't make many. With Hays at work on the job, I think we'll get results. For one thing, there is only one party now. Most of the Progressives have come back. Most of the others will follow. Those who won't return would sooner or later have quit even the Progressive party—they're just natural-born Mavericks who won't stay long in any herd, and won't stay branded."

This will be interesting reading to those "irreconcilables" among the Roosevelt followers who have enlisted under the banner of the recently organized third party. The present work was published before the convening of the Republican convention at Chicago and so the author could have no object in referring to Senator Harding's relationship with Roosevelt. According to Leary, the Colonel had a high regard for the Republican nominee. Discussing the campaign of 1916 and his attitude toward Judge Hughes, Roosevelt was determined at the outset to make campaign speeches, believing that his letter announcing his support of the New York candidate was all that the situation demanded. "If Burton or Harding had been named, I would have to support the nominee against Wilson," which strongly indicated that Roosevelt felt very kindly toward these two candidates.

Further proof of the friendship existing between Senator Harding and Roosevelt is furnished by the author in recalling the fact that the Ohio senator offered the amendment to the army bill that would have permitted the Colonel to raise a force to take to France during the late war. Harding forced the amendment through the Senate and it later passed the House.

In making this reference to the campaign of 1916, Leary declares that it was the intention of the Colonel to make speeches in California, but his itinerary was changed, which in all probability cost Hughes the election. Roosevelt was popular in California and had he come to the Far West instead of the nominee, the unfortunate Johnson-Hughes episode would not have occurred and the state would have rolled up its usual majority for the Republican ticket.

tured. Soon all the sight was gone." The ex-president gave a very plausible explanation of how the charge was generally circulated that he was addicted to "strong drink," by the way that resulted in a libel suit followed by a complete vindication that thereafter silenced the calumny. Roosevelt did not smoke and when he declined people would often ask, in a joking way, "What are your bad habits?" In the same spirit he would reply, "Prize fighting and strong drink." Some family members entirely a sense of humor took the Colonel seriously and said, "Roosevelt, I hear, drinks hard." According to the Colonel, "Another fellow replied, 'Yes, that's true. He told me so himself.'"

Discussing his break with Taft, Roosevelt explained that following the election of his cabinet officer to the Presidency he was told that the members of the Roosevelt official family were satisfactory to the new incumbent. "The President and I," he said, "were in the White House and he authorized the Colonel to inform those holding the various portfolios, which he proceeded to do, much to his later embarrassment. There were also other causes of friction. During the Hughes campaign, however, occurred a happy reconciliation in the Blackstone hotel in Chicago. This is how Roosevelt related the story of the meeting to Leary:

"Jack," he exclaimed, "did you know I've just met old Taft. I was never so surprised in my life. I thought I heard some one call 'Theodore' and I looked up just as he reached the table with his hand stuck out. There was so much noise being made I am not quite sure what he said. I think it was, 'Theodore, I am glad to see you.' I grabbed his hand and told him I was glad to see him. By Godfrey, I never was so surprised in my life. I no more thought of him being in Chicago than in Timbuctoo. But wasn't it a gracious thing for him to do?"

Later the Colonel said, "Jack, I don't mind telling you how delighted I am. I never felt happier over anything in my life. It was splendid of Taft."

Leary declared that it would be evidence, particularly in Washington, that the party was really and truly united.

"I believe you are right," declared the Colonel. "It is too bad to spoil Mr. Wilson's breakfast!" While in a retrospective mood Colonel Roosevelt discussed the cabinet he would have named had he been President.

March 4, 1917. It will be of particular interest to Californians to learn for the first time that the former Progressive leader, Meyer Lissner of Los Angeles and formerly of Oakland, was slated for secretary of the interior. Here were the others: General Goethals was to be secretary of war; Raymond Robbins secretary of labor; George W. Perkins, secretary of the treasury; John King of Connecticut, postmaster general; Admiral Winslow was to be his choice for the navy, and Henry Cabot Lodge, "if he could drag him from the Senate," secretary of state.

As evidence of the many other interesting chapters treating upon subjects not discussed in this review might be mentioned the following: "Clashes with the Kaiser," "That Gary Dinner," "Perkins and T. R.," "Roosevelt's One Talk with Mr. Wilson," "The Colonel and John L. Sullivan," "The Newspaper Cabinet," "Roosevelt on Labor," "Devil Fishing," "The Colonel and the Treaty," "Henry Ford and Mark Hanna," and "Mr. Wilson's Ideals."—J. R. K.

"The Girl on the Hilltop," Gambier

Being more or less in love with three beautiful girls, each one of which is unselectively urging him to marry the other, but apparently tied hand and foot by traditions when he falls heir to a magnificent English country estate, Roger Lingard, an American wounded doctor, is brought out of his predicament only by the hand of fate.

The tale is unfolded in easy, logical, interesting sequence in Kenyon Gambier's book, "The Girl on the Hilltop." By far the most realistic and satisfying modern novel dealing with the war-time effects on England's social and industrial life, Gambier's volume takes the reader to a peaceful, narrow, nobility-ridden country parish in the days just before the war and returns the hero again, gassed and disabled but heir to a vast estate through the killing of his male relatives, at the end of the conflict.

While the author lightly attempts to touch the great industrial problems of Germany, the unrest of the returning soldiery and the need for greater production by cutting up vast estates, the book does not take on the nature of a polemic.

Tolerance by nationals of things which they do not understand in the habits and customs of other countries is a lesson taught through the necessity for the American hero to understand the English.

OVERLAND MONTHLY, after having improved its contents both as to quality and quantity, announces in the current number that in the future the magazine will be in the 30-cent class. Along with this announcement is one that plans are being made to add to the artistic and literary merit of the publication. drank it all up—I mean, stirring where it had been in the cup.

"I didn't know but after supper he'd speak to me and ask me to come to the library."

"There were lot more things I'd like to have said to him. But he didn't. He never said a word. He just kept stowing and got up from the table and went off by himself. But he didn't go out to the observatory, as he most generally does. He went into the library and shut the door."

"He was there when the telephone message came eight o'clock. And what do you think? He'd forgotten he was going to speak before the College Astronomy Club that evening."

"I don't know why. I did think, for a minute, 'twas 'cause of me—what I'd told him. But I knew, of course, right away that it couldn't be. He'd forgotten his stars for me! Probably he was just reading up about some other stars, or had forgotten how late it was, or something. (Father's always forgotten things.) But anyway, when Aunt Jane called him he got his hat and hurried off without so much as one word to me, who was standing near, or to Aunt Jane, who was following him to the hall, and telling him in her most im-ama-zed-at-you voice how shockingly absent-minded he was getting to be."

ONE WEEK LATER

Father's been awfully queer this whole week through. I can't make him out at all. Sometimes I think he's glad I told him all those things in the parlor that day I dressed up to the observatory, not even into the library. He'd asked about the dining-room till Aunt Jane went out into the kitchen to give her orders to Susan; then he burst out, all of a sudden:

"Well, Mary, what shall we do today?" Just like that he said it, as if he'd been doing things together every day of our lives.

Of course, I knew I was surprised I showed how surprised I was by the way I stammered and flushed up.

"Certainly, do," he answered, impatient and scowling. "What shall we do?"

"Why, father, I—I don't know," I stammered again.

But he asked me to do other things. The next day after the walk he asked me to play to him. Yes, he asked me to; and he went into the parlor and sat down on the sofa and he listened while I played three pieces. Of course, I didn't play loud ones, nor very fast ones, and I was so scared I'm afraid I didn't play very well. But he was so happy with his stars and his telescope, and so glad to show them to me—oh, I had a beautiful time, and I told him so; and he looked real pleased. But Aunt Jane said he was really thinking of half an hour, and I had to go to bed.

The next morning I thought he'd be different, somehow, because we'd had such a lovely time together the night before. But he wasn't. He said, "Good morning, Mary," and he read his paper all through breakfast without saying another word to me. Then he got up and went into the library, and I never saw him again all day except at dinner time and supper time, and then he didn't talk to me.

After supper he took me out again to see the stars, and he was just as nice and friendly as could be. Not a bit like a man that's only a father by order of the court. But he was so happy with his stars and his telescope, and so glad to show them to me—oh, I had a beautiful time, and I told him so; and he looked real pleased. ## "Mrs. Craddock" Occasional Papers

W. Somerset Maugham, author of "Moon and Sixpence," has written novel of woman who married "Beneath" Her.

A subject popular in the times of Goethe's Lady Book and used by writers since there have been such institutions as marriage and class, is that of the woman who married "beneath her." The result of such a union is uncertain if we are to take the word of the novelist. The lady may find that only with the honest son of toil are her ideals to be reached and that the life in the humble cottage is better than that of marble halls. It was once the fashion to write stories with this lesson.

Regardless as to which gets the worse of the bargain when the daughter of wealth elopes with the chauffeur the result is still one of interest. W. Somerset Maugham, author of "The Moon and Sixpence," is the latest to have his fling with the subject but, as it may be expected, he has given it a new twist and has fashioned a novel of bright moments and of a real heart appeal.

Bertha Ley defies the opinion of her relatives and the countryside who she marries Craddock. She does the love making and hers is the initiative responsible for the mating. Seldom has a woman been so deeply in love. There is in the strong country lad something that appeals with force to the woman who has traveled the world of show places and whose eyes have begun to bore her. It might have been a happy wedding had Craddock possessed the soul of desire to love as did Bertha.

The contrast of the two, the man who was self-satisfied with his pitiable knowledge and the woman of refinement, the clashes in matters of culture, would not have wrecked this romance had it not been that the man there was no appreciation of the devotion his wife had given and no desire or impulse for him to continue the romance past the honeymoon.

Bertha leaves Craddock, comes back, and leaves again. How she returns for the last time and how she finds a solution are made clear in the chapters that follow. The book has many points of country humor, some keen dialogue and clever delineations of character. With the disillusionment that comes to the wife there comes no power of understanding the man she has taken and no desire for any appreciation of the thoughts that may be his. Bertha, who was self-satisfied with her pitiable knowledge and the woman of refinement, the clashes in matters of culture, would not have wrecked this romance had it not been that the man there was no appreciation of the devotion his wife had given and no desire or impulse for him to continue the romance past the honeymoon.

Robert Frost publishes a series of four poems in the July number of Harper's Magazine, after an almost ten-year absence of two years. Mr. Frost's explanation of the long lapses between publication of his poems is that he likes to get acquainted with a poem and be sure that he likes it tolerably well before allowing it to be printed. Also, he regards publication as an interruption in the smooth flow of his work. In the last of the four poems, "The Road Not Taken," the poet of New England continues in very much the same vein as his "North of Boston" and "Mountain Interval." Each of the four poems represents a different aspect of his work—or, as he said in speaking of them, they are "big bear, little bear and middle-size bear." Mr. Frost, who recently resigned his professorship at Amherst, is now staying on his farm at Franconia, New Hampshire.

DR. WILLIAM E. DODD Dr. William E. Dodd, Professor of American History in the University of Chicago, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia, on June 8. Professor Dodd, who is the author of "Statesmen of the Old South" and editor and joint author of "The Riverside History of the United States," recently had published an appreciation of "Woodrow Wilson and His Work," which has already gone to a second edition.

Shaw Sequel

Sir Harry Johnston Uses Characters in "Mrs. Warren's Profession," for His Novel, "Mrs. Warren's Daughter."

For the most part the man who writes a sequel to another man's book has a thankless task. There is in evidence that bulky volume which represents the labors of a well-meaning writer who sought to give an adventure to the characters in "Pickwick Paper," an achievement interesting enough and filled with chapters which must be admitted to be similar to those of Dickens. A public was not concerned with any Pickwick save the genuine and the experiment, so far as any wide recognition is concerned, fell flat.

Sir Harry Johnston is a modern writer with this habit. He varies the plan by making no pretence to continue in the style of the creator of his characters and cares not a bit if he makes them perform in ways that might displease the original author. When he wrote "Mrs. Warren's Daughter," carried on the story of "Mrs. Warren's Profession," and with his manner of so doing he created no little sensation.

Warren's Daughter," in which he has had the temerity to take Shaw's characters out of the play, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," and use them in a novel. With not such much "by its name" he has done this, there is as yet no word that the great Bernard visited him with wrath.

Johnston has a peculiar style of writing that gives to his story something of the action of a play. It is filled with asides, done in the present tense, and with explanations. Dialogues are started without introduction, the story stops abruptly at times somewhere else and at no time is the occasion taken to bother with reasons.

So long as the reader may follow, and most certainly he is able to do so, there is no reason why Sir Harry should not ride roughly over the literary precedent. In this story he shows how Vivian Warren shapes for herself an honorable career. In the middle of the suffrage war he takes her a creature of English possibilities and a determination to work for her cause. She is who plans many of the ways to thwart the police and she is who is the center of some well-told exploits of a dramatic period in English history.

The war comes into the book and the live social and economic questions of the day are reflected therein. Mrs. Warren's Daughter meets with persons of many stripes and in the recounting of her comings and goings there is humor and the ability to touch off effectively the follies which make men loved and tolerated.

"I guess I must have had my conscience pretty well inflicted with culinary meditations, for, without intending so, I say, out loud, to the imagination, but it turns out to be true, and here it rare, with the French fried, and six soft-scrambled, or toast."

Mame turned her head quick as a flash. Her eyes were sparkling and she smiled sudden.

"Medium for me," she rattles out, "with the Julienne, and three straight up. Draw one and brown one." Mame made order to come.

"Oh, Jeff, wouldn't it be glorious?" And then I'd like to have a half fry, and a little chicken curried, with rice, and a cup custard with ice cream, and—"

"Go easy," I interrupt, "where's the chicken liver pie, and the warden's saute on toast, and the roast lamb, and—"

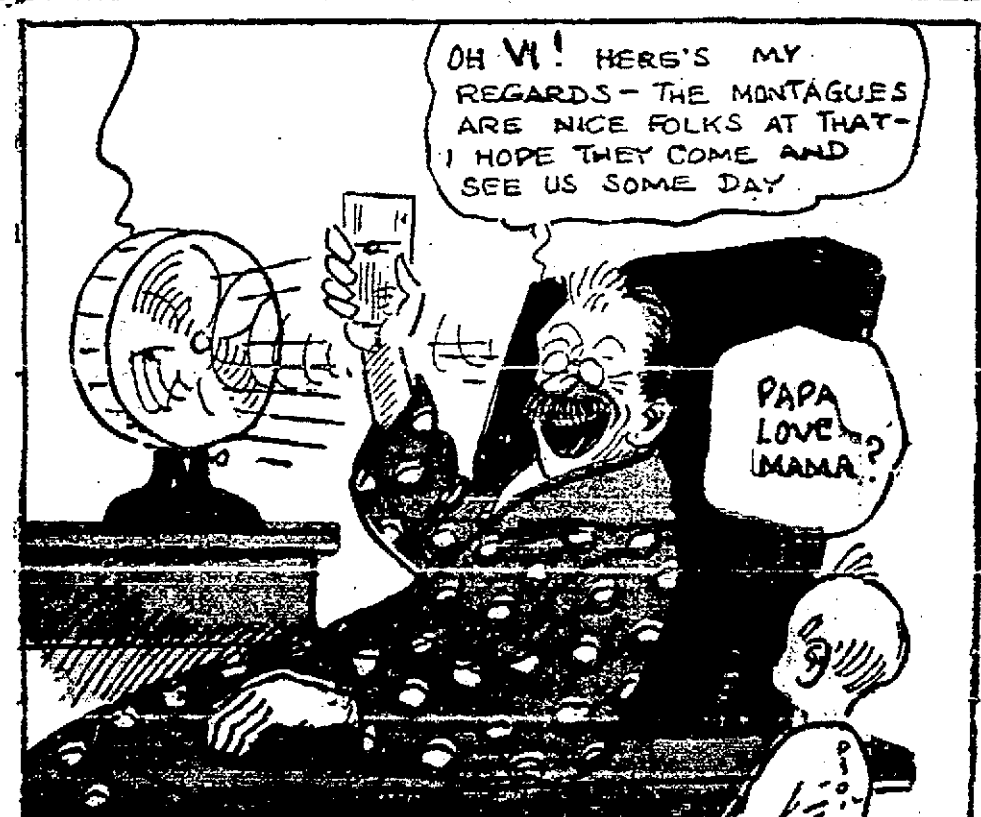

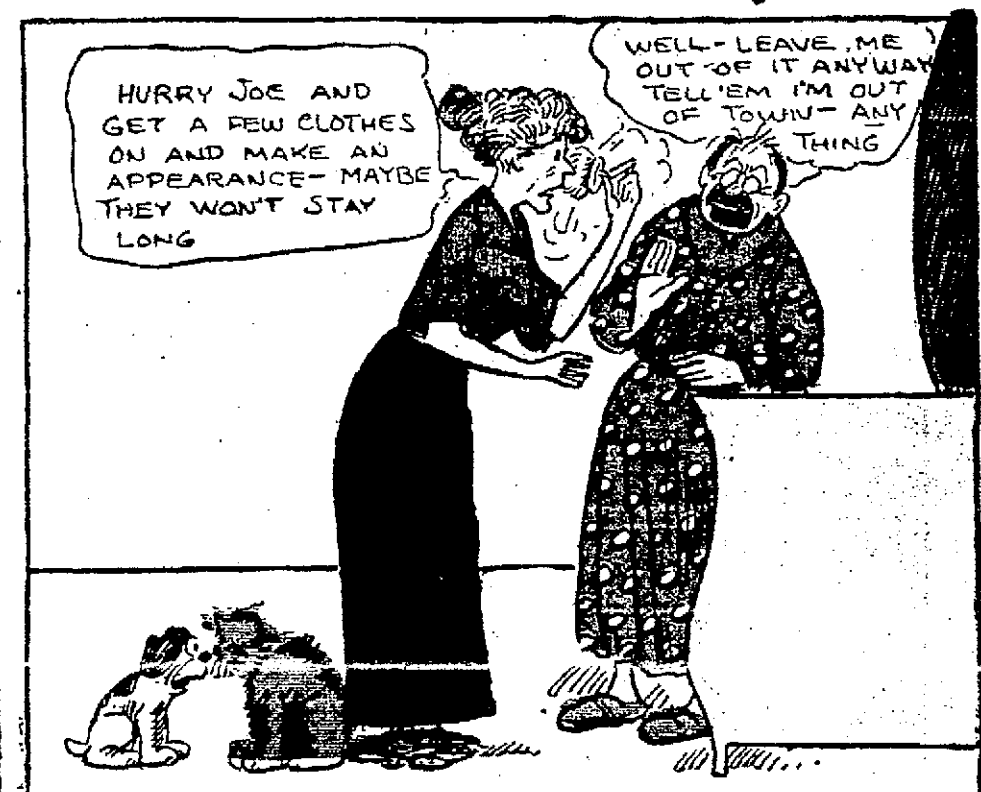

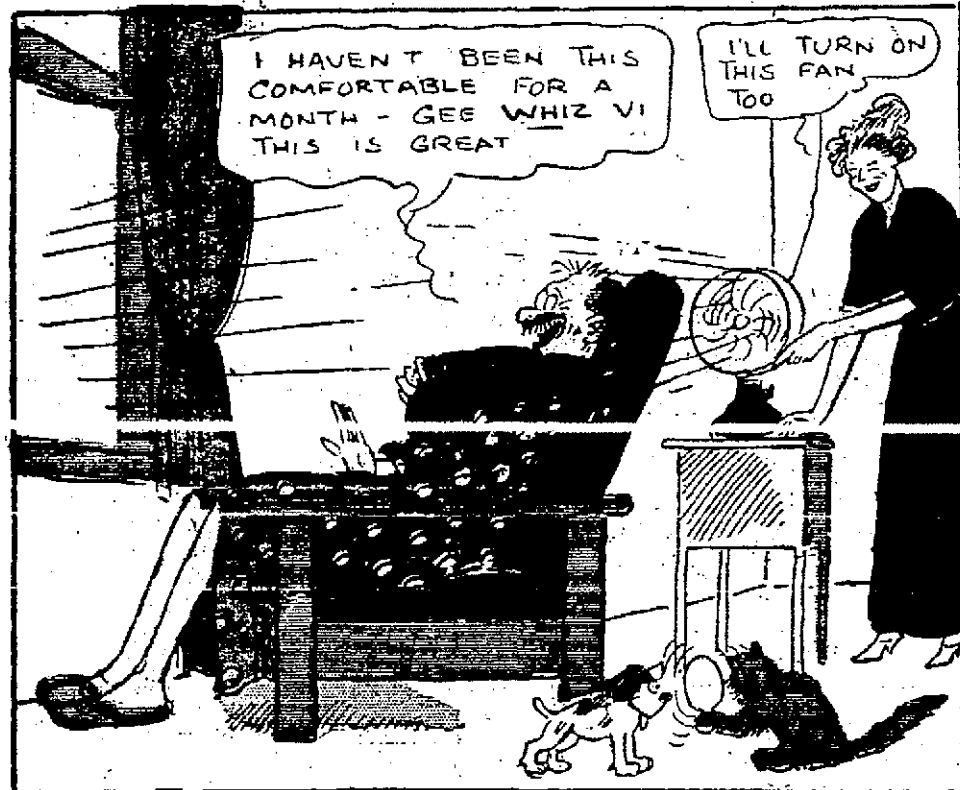

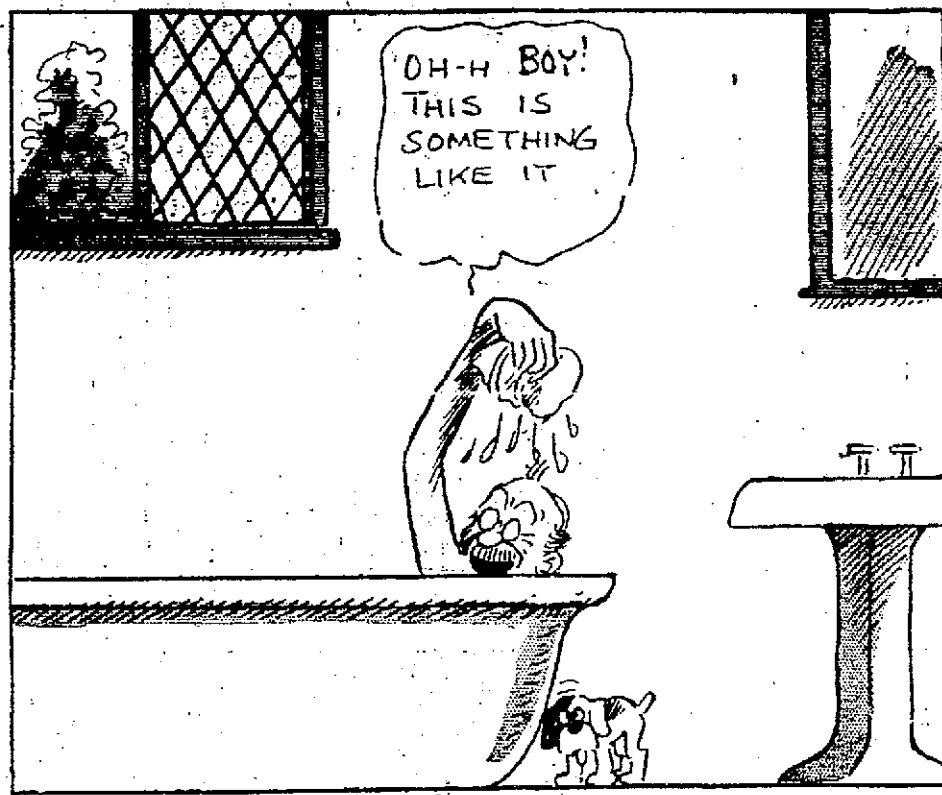

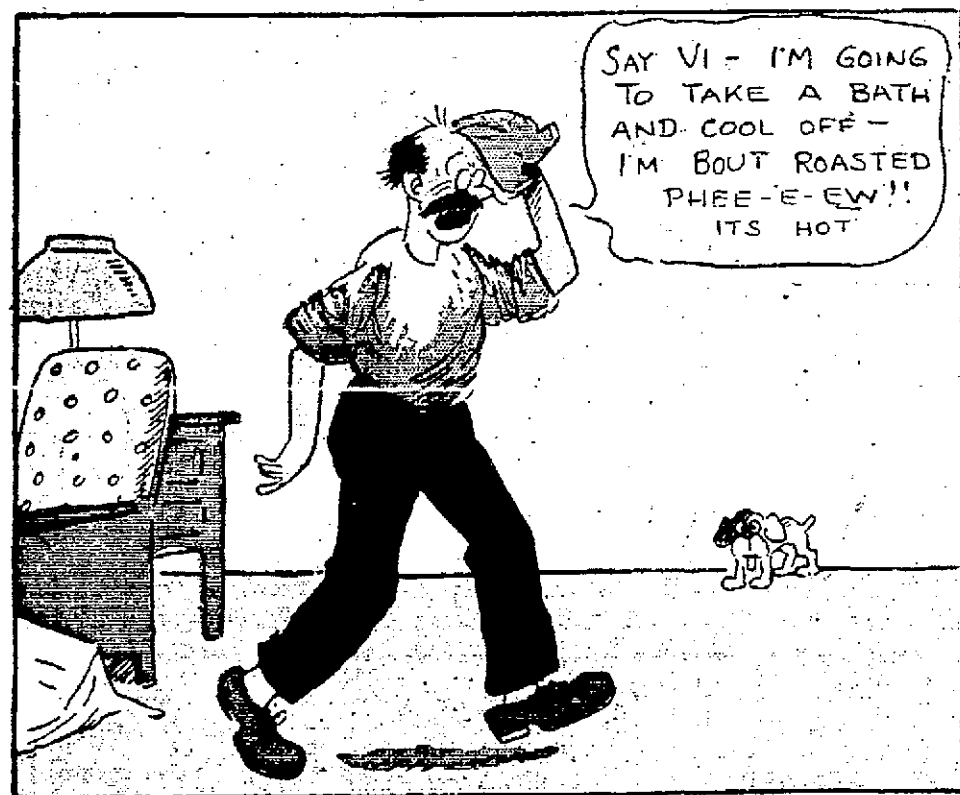

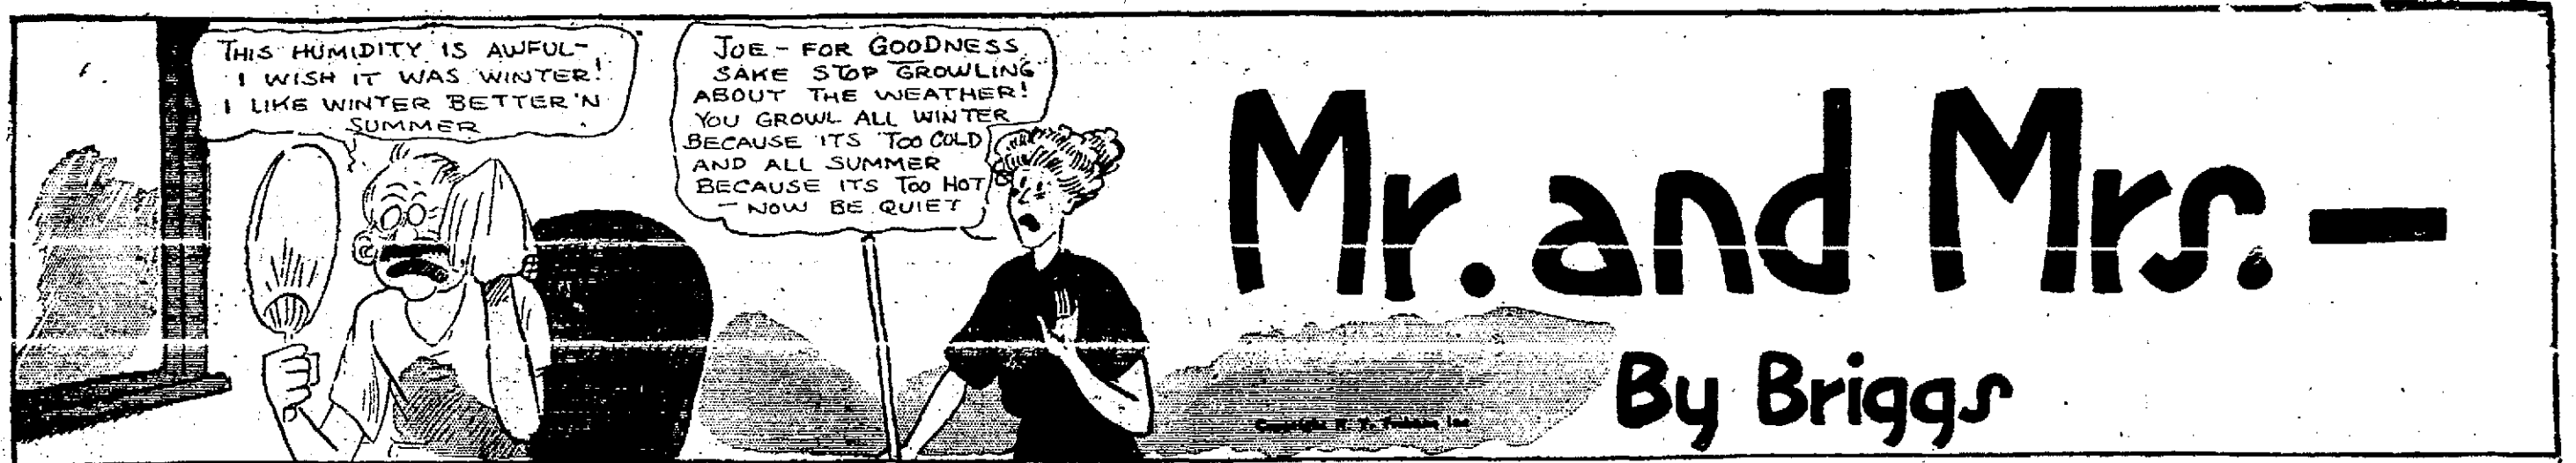

"Oh," cuts in Mame, all excited, "saute and sauce, and the turkey salad, and stuffed olives and raspberry tarts, and—"

"Keep it going," says I. "Hurry up with the fried squash, and the hot corn porridge with sweet milk, and don't forget the plum pudding with hard sauce, and the cross-barred derry pie!"

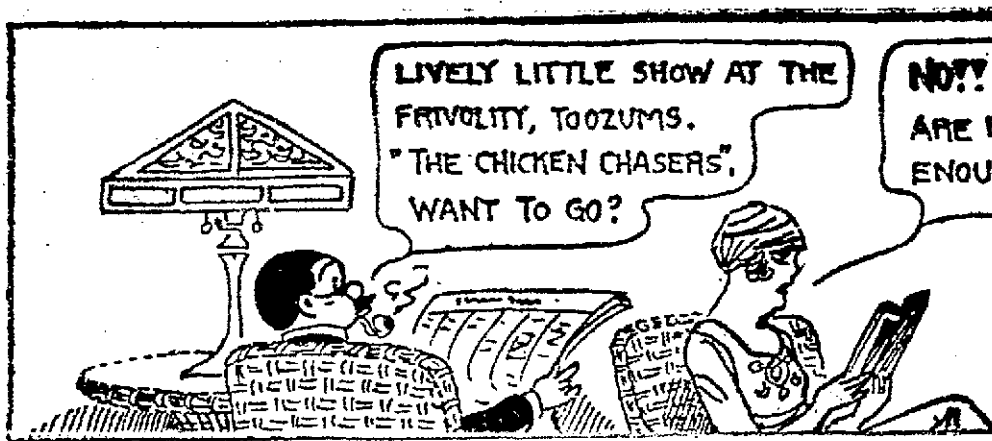

"Yes, for ten minutes we kept up."

SEE THE LADDER SLIP! SEE THE LADDER FALL! BUT DEAR OLD UNCLE WIGGILY WAS SCARCELY SCRATCHED AT ALL! BUT THE ALLIGATOR! OH MY!

"Nurse Jane ought to like the bungalow much better after I paint it sky blue pink," said Uncle Wiggily as he stood on a ladder putting some dabs of color on his hollow stump house. "I hope nothing happens when I am up here. If I should fall in the pots of paints I'd look like some scrambled Easter eggs." Uncle Wiggily had used up nearly all the color in one pot when he saw Billie Wagtail, the goat, and Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow coming along. "I'll ask one of them to hand me another pot of paint," said the bunny.

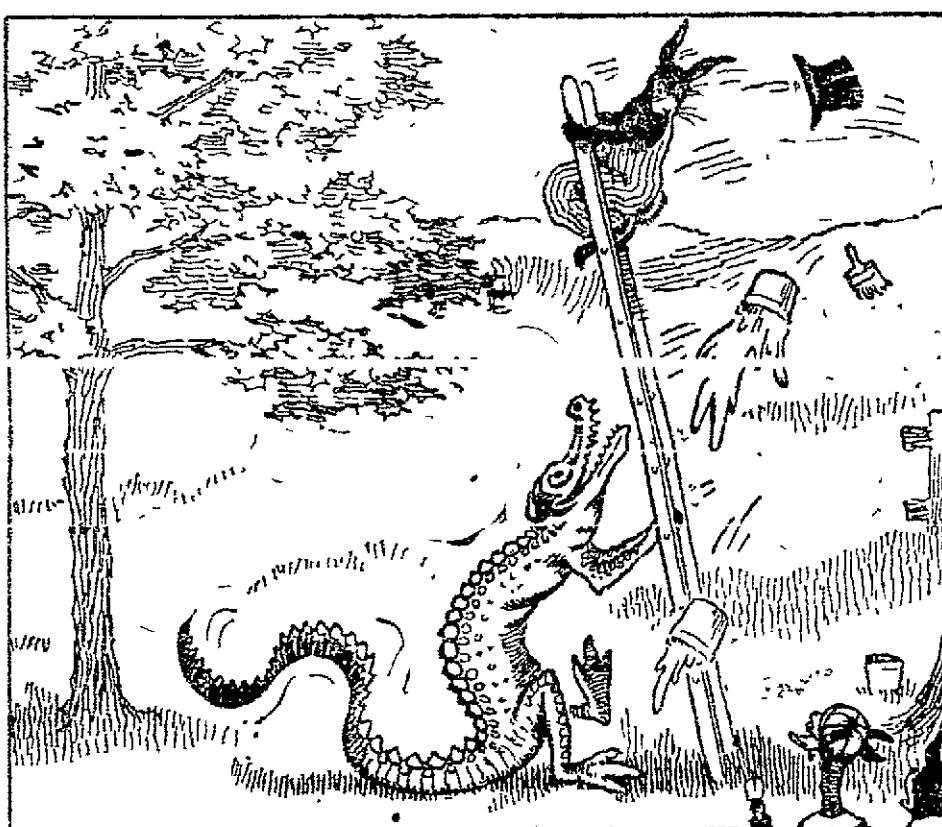

"Hello, boys!" called Uncle Wiggily, as Billie, Jackie and Peetie came near. "Will one of you please hand me up another pot of red paint? My can is almost empty." Billie the goat said he'd bring up some red paint, but, instead, just for a joke, he took up some green paint to Uncle Wiggily. "Won't he be surprised when he starts daubing green paint over where he put the red," said Jackie to Peetie. "It will be a good joke," agreed Peetie. "But I hope he doesn't get mad at us."

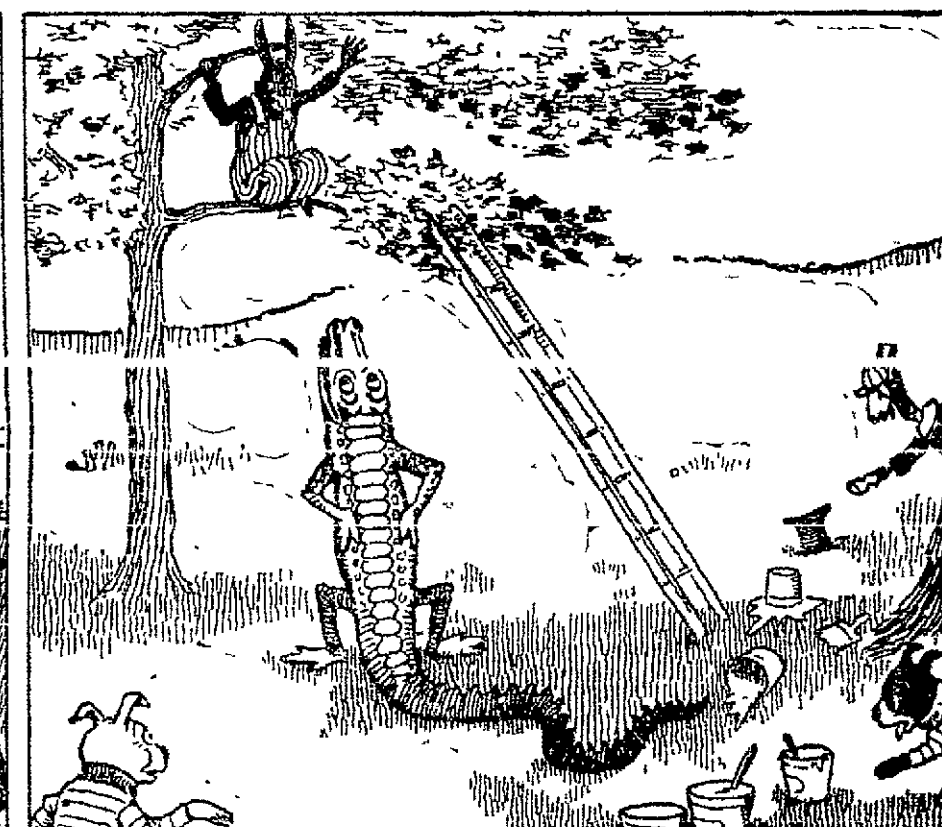

Uncle Wiggily was so busy talking to Billie, Jackie and Peetie that the bunny rabbit never noticed the color of the paint the goat boy handed up to him. And, before he knew it, Mr. Longears had daubed some green color on where it ought to have been red. "Oh my! Nurse Jane will not like this a bit!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "I did it for a joke!" laughed Billie. "Wait a minute and I'll hand you up the right color." Nearer and nearer came the skillery-scallery alligator.

All of a sudden, as Billie was getting ready to take up the right pot of red paint, up rushed the funny old skillery scallery alligator, with the double jointed tail. "Ah ha, Mr. Longears! At last I have you!" cried the 'gator. "Come down, off that ladder until I nibble a bit of your souse!" Uncle Wiggily was so surprised that he spilled some paint on Jackie, Peetie and Billie. But still the bunny rabbit gentleman would not come down to have his souse nibbled.

"Well, if you won't come down nice, and pretty when I tell you to, so I may have some of your souse, I'll make you tumble!" said the bad 'gator to Uncle Wiggily. Then the unpleasant chap yanked the ladder out from the side of the hollow stump bungalow and the bunny rabbit gentleman began to fall. "Oh, I am almost sure I am going to have an adventure this time!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Something is going to happen!" And, Billie, Jackie and Peetie thought the same thing.

The skillery scallery alligator pulled the ladder so hard, hoping to make Uncle Wiggily fall, that the ladder toppled into a tree near by. Uncle Wiggily gave a jump and landed on one of the branches. "Are you coming down out of that and let me nibble your souse?" asked the snippy-snappy 'gator. Uncle Wiggily said he was not. "Then with my rough nutmeg grater tail I'll saw down the tree and get you anyhow," snarled the bad chap. "I'll saw the tree down and get your souse!"

"Indeed I am not coming down and let you have any of my souse!" said Uncle Wiggily to the bad 'gator at the foot of the tree. "Very well then, now I'll begin to saw!" gargled the bad chap. So with his tail, which was just like a saw, he began to cut down the tree. "Oh, we must save Uncle Wiggily!" whispered Billie the goat. "Yes, but how can we?" asked Jackie. "I know," barked Peetie. "We'll paint the alligator's tail red, and he'll think he has the nose-bleed!"

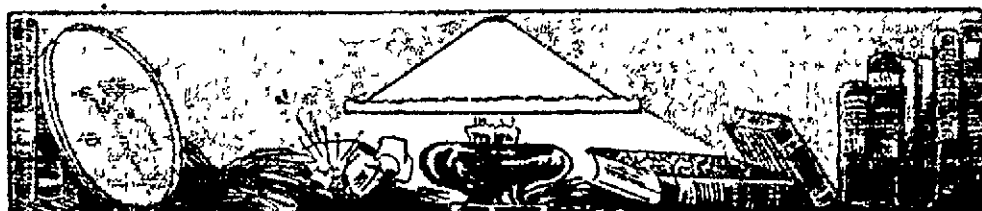

All of a sudden, when the alligator had the tree almost sawed through, and it was beginning to fall with Uncle Wiggily in it, the three animal boys rushed up with their pots of paint. "Splatter him good!" barked Jackie, and he and Peetie and Billie splashed different kinds of paint on the bad 'gator. "Oh my goodness me!" grunted the skillery scallery chap. "This will spoil my complexion! This is no place for me! I'll get Uncle Wiggily's souse some other time, I guess."

Jackie, Peetie and Billie splashed so much paint on the 'gator, even putting some in his eyes, that the bad chap was glad enough to run away. He looked like a broken piece of the rainbow. Uncle Wiggily easily got down out of the fallen tree, and he felt so happy, at saving his souse, that he danced a jig around the paint pots with the doggies and the goat. "Well, I never!" exclaimed Nurse Jane. "This is a funny way to paint a red bungalow green, Uncle Wiggily!" But the bunny gentlemen only laughed.

And if the slice of bread doesn't try to jump out from under the butter, and let the jam fall on the tablecloth, the next pictures and story will be about:

ZONE SYSTEM BEING USED IN CAR RATES

The Eastbay District, Which Enjoys a Wonderful Long Haul Privilege on Street Cars, Interested in L.A. Case

The Pacific Electric Company of Southland Seeks to Apply Zone System to the Fixing of Its Local Street Car Rates

An application has been filed with the State Railroad Commission for a complete revision of the passenger fares of the Pacific Electric Railway operating in and around Los Angeles. This application is likely to have a considerable bearing upon Oakland conditions when the San Francisco-Oakland Terminal Railway, which application will be made as soon as the refinancing plan of the company is settled upon, even if the rate revision is not asked before.

The principle sought to be laid down in fixing fares is that of the zone, now being used in San Diego to a limited extent. It is with this proposition that Oakland is most interested because of the possible application of the principle to this side of the bay, and for that reason a little analysis of the Los Angeles application and a comparison with conditions in this district will be valuable.

TWO ZONES
The Los Angeles company seeks to have the present five-cent fare zone divided into two. The fare within the first or inner zone is to be five cents, while the fare within the outer zone is to be seven cents with a rate between the two zones of ten cents or a ticket system of five tickets for 40 cents, which would make an inter-zone fare of eight cents. The company also made a request for increases in every suburban rate and an increase of 23.91 per cent in its freight rates. While these requests undoubtedly represent the maximum desired by the company and while the probably effects to have to content itself with less than it asks for, a comparison with Eastbay conditions will be interesting.

The company seems to go upon the theory that travel upon the outgoing lines and branches is more sparse than within the city and that it costs more to haul the fewer passengers, and that they should pay more for the travel within the outside zone than within the inner zone. Thus, while the fare in the inner zone will be one cent less than in Oakland, the fare in the outer zone will be one cent more than the Oakland rate, and the through haul, based upon the ticket rate of eight cents, will be two cents higher than the Oakland through rate. This would probably average higher than the Oakland rate as a whole.

LONG AND SHORT HAULS
But when the mileage of the zones is taken into consideration it becomes evident that the proposed Los Angeles rates are really higher than the Oakland rates, and those who are at present enjoying low long haul rates in the Eastbay district become intensely interested in what the Railroad Commission will do in this case.

The Los Angeles Company proposes to split its present five-cent fare zone into two parts, the inner or five-cent zone with an average of 2.50 miles, and the outer zone with an average of 5.50 miles, which probably accounts for the higher fare asked, in addition to the sparser travel. To be absolutely accurate the longest haul on the inner or five-cent fare zone will be 2.31 miles and the shortest .31 miles from the main stations of the company in Los Angeles; while the longest total haul through both zones, which will be represented by an eight-cent ticket fare, is 8.76 miles.

EASTBAY HAULS
These mileage figures are what will interest the Eastbay district when a revision of street car fares is asked for. For instance, the mileage from Oakland to the county line beyond Albany and through Berkeley to the San Pablo Avenue line is 7 miles, while the haul from the center of Oakland to San Leandro, the limit of one fare, is 9.52 miles, while both of these trips can be made for one fare by taking a transfer, and making a total haul of 16.52 miles. This is practically twice as long a haul for a six-cent fare as the Los Angeles company is asking an eight-cent fare for.

Of course this trip is almost never taken by travelers because the necessity for such a trip almost never occurs, and no one would want to take it merely as a tourist, but it is always cited as what is possible by the present transfer system. But the haul to Albany and Berkeley of seven miles and the haul to San Leandro of 9.52 miles are fair comparisons. Both of these hauls are comparable with the seven-zone in the Los Angeles case, which would be put on a ten-cent straight fare or an eight-cent ticket fare basis.

The great point of contest, should the proposed Los Angeles system be accepted, is the point of division between the two zones. Would Piedmont, and Emeryville and Alameda come within the one-fare, first zone, and where the second zone line be located in East Oakland?

So the progress of the Los Angeles case will be watched with interest in the Eastbay district in anticipation of what may come here.

Hill Court, a new one hundred thousand dollar apartment house, the construction of which was begun during the week past upon the shores of Lake Merritt.

The Lure of Oakland Proves Strong Enough to Cause an American Capitalist from the Orient to Invest

Construction of a $100,000 apartment house on the shore of Lake Merritt at Bellevue avenue by H. G. Hill, a capitalist, who recently came to Oakland from Shanghai, China, was begun this week.

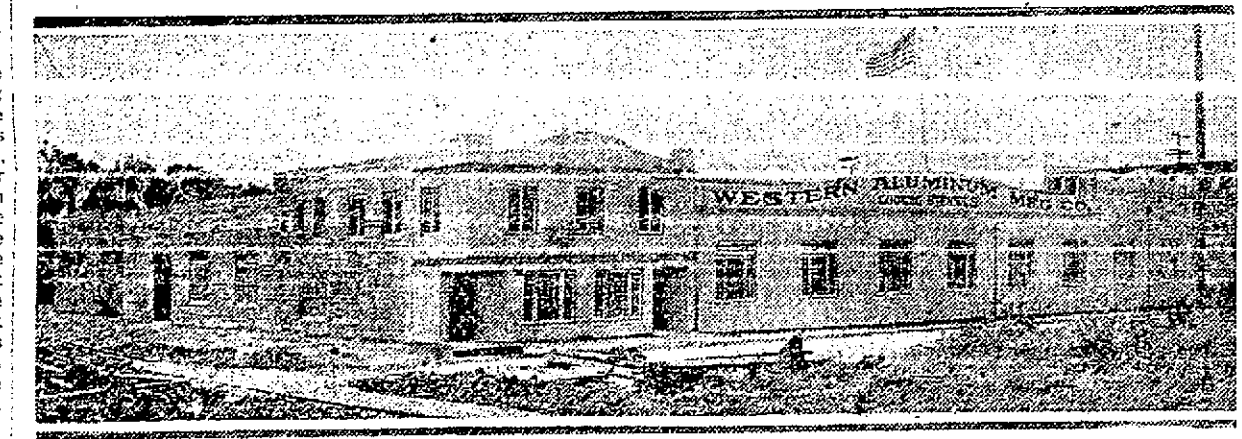

The apartment house is a three-story cement building and will contain fifteen suites of three and four rooms each. It will be known as "Hill Court." The plans are drawn by William J. Wythe and Charles W. McCall, who are supervising the construction.

The floor plan is so designed that practically every room of nearly every apartment has an unobstructed view of the lake, park and hills.

Hill, who is the founder and owner of a chain of dry goods stores known as "Hill's Bazaar of China," with headquarters at Shanghai and branches at Peking, Tientsin, Hankow and Chefoo, said he was so impressed by the beauty of the lake region that he decided to build the apartment house.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill shortly after their arrival here bought the Crellin home on Jackson near Lake street.

NEW PLANT ADDED TO THE GROWING INDUSTRIAL SECTION OF THE EASTBAY

Factory of the Western Aluminum Manufacturing Company at Emeryville, the latest addition to the industrial section of the eastbay district.

Factory of the Western Aluminum Manufacturing Company at Emeryville Completed and Practical Operation Begun

The new plant of the Western Aluminum Manufacturing Company at Emeryville is practically completed. The building is up, the foundry and machine shop are fully equipped and operating, and the company is only awaiting the arrival of some of the important machines from the coast to start operating to full capacity.

The Western Aluminum Manufacturing Company has suffered, in common with many other concerns from the curtailment and the inability to move freight promptly, and machinery that they expected to have already in place and operating is still on the road en route to the plant. The company expects that everything will be in place and operating to capacity by September 1.

This plant is the latest addition to the growing belt of Eastbay manufacturing institutions, and is intended to be a complete aluminum factory handling everything in the line of aluminum utensils, stamped, spun and cast. A location in the Eastbay industrial district was chosen because of shipping facilities, for the new company intended to operate throughout the western part of America and overseas to the Orient. The management considers Oakland as the central point from which distribution can be made to all points in their trade territory.

The main building is of reinforced concrete, 100x170 feet in size, and a story and a half in height. In the construction of this first unit proper provision was made for additional expansion and alongside of the main building. The company has an acre of ground in the heart of the Emeryville industrial section, with ample practice facilities right at the building, and they are prepared for growth and expansion.

Machinery and special automotive machines, new to this part of the country, have been purchased. The entire equipment being the most modern of its kind. A battery of heavy "litters" presses, stamping machines and spinning lathes, together with the latest ball bearing, buffing and polishing machines; a complete equipment of machine tools, together with tool making and die tool making, this shop modern in every detail.

A full line of aluminum kitchen utensils, stamped from heavy pure aluminum sheets, will be made, also an extensive line of cast aluminum cooking ware. The trademark will be known as "Service" brand, and every utensil will be strictly guaranteed to give just what the name implies. Direct "Factory to the Trade" policy of distribution will be carried out. Export connections have

CITIES MUST CULTIVATE THE COUNTRY

By G. H. Hecke, Director of Agriculture, State of California.

For the next three or four years the increased production of agricultural staples will determine largely the restoration of world affairs to former peaceful conditions. This is a matter of cold fact. Europe, at best, must have four years to recoup her depleted agriculture. Argentina may produce some surplus beef and hides; Australia her usual quota of fruit and mutton; Canada, grain and dairy products; but it is the old guard, the American farmer, whose timely and well-ordered activities until the year 1925 will determine the real world struggle of providing the actual agricultural products required to sustain the needy millions of all nations and races—no longer hounded by formal lines, but including the Orient and Occident alike!

As in every such crisis in the past we must be prepared for untoward physical conditions which may only serve to aggravate and intensify a distressed situation. Unheralded climatic conditions, early or late frosts, excessive drought and unforeseen crop failures, not alone in this state and country, but indeed in the farming centers of foreign countries, are not improbable.

CALIFORNIA AGRICULTURE
Speaking for California agriculture, we may say generally that in the past we have been blessed with years of plenty, when compared with uncertain disastrous agricultural ventures in other parts of the world, and now, without a vestige of pessimistic forecast but with forethought and prudence, farmer and business man alike should prepare for "the seven lean years." That the lean years may fall to materialize for us will be a matter of good fortune and would serve to release for inland use and for export such the foodstuffs in excess of our own needs as could be spared—beans, rice, cereals, dried fruits, animal and dairy products, cotton, etc.

A WAITING MARKET
A market is waiting for every pound and ton of such staples that California can produce and at values which will equal those of former years, provided the labor war concentrated in better paying city work will permit intensive production.

In order the secure the maximum results from our agricultural activities it is necessary and indeed vital that a better and closer understanding be promoted and fostered between the farmer interests and our city business, since it is only through the well-being of each that the other may hope to realize the benefits that properly should accrue.

We must come to realize that this matter has now assumed the aspect of a National issue and no expense of county, city, state or even the nation, will be too great, if it will insure an ample supply of staples to meet the world's demand for the coming four years.

White Stage Lines Want Rate Increase

An application filed with the Railroad Commission by The White Lines asks authority to increase the company's freight rates on local, intermediate and long hauls. The increase asked for averages not more than 25 per cent. In its application the company says:

"Applicant is aware of the fact that its present rates (which are only flat 5 cents per 100 pounds higher than the railroad) in effect mean that a better and closer understanding be promoted and fostered between the farmer interests and our city business, since it is only through the well-being of each that the other may hope to realize the benefits that properly should accrue."

"We must come to realize that this matter has now assumed the aspect of a National issue and no expense of county, city, state or even the nation, will be too great, if it will insure an ample supply of staples to meet the world's demand for the coming four years."

Oakland Is Sold Out of Homes Demand Far Exceeds the Supply Construction Is Now Decreasing

The housing shortage in the Eastbay community continues one of the most troublesome problems confronting local realtors, as well as the public in general, and at the present time is probably as serious as it has ever been, even during the summer of 1919, and there seems at the present no prospect of immediate relief, according to a report made to the Oakland Real Estate Board this week by a special committee investigating the situation.

A shortage of housing accommodations of between 6000 and 7000 was the estimate made by a similar committee studying the situation a year ago. The present committee reports that if there be at the present time any difference in these figures they must be increased. The building program is running behind the demand for housing, while the number of older residences offered for sale is gradually decreasing. From rental agencies and other sources of information the board's committee finds that the number of inquiries for housing accommodation is as great as ever before while a less number of "home-seekers" are accommodated.

PERMITS DECREASING
In March of this year permits were issued in Oakland for the construction of 79 one-story dwellings, 5 two-story dwellings and four apartment houses. During the same month last year permits were issued for 71 one-story dwellings, 7 two-story dwellings and 2 apartment houses.

During April of this year permits were issued for 71 one-story dwellings and 5 apartment houses. While for the same period last year permits were issued for 68 one-story dwellings, 13 two-story dwellings and 2 apartment houses.

For May of this year permits were issued for 55 one-story dwellings, 5 two-story dwellings and 5 apartment houses. While for the same month of last year permits were issued for 81 one-story dwellings, 18 two-story dwellings and three apartment houses.

During June of this year permits were issued for 55 one-story dwellings and 2 apartment houses. While June of last year permits were issued for 84 one-story dwellings, 26 two-story dwellings and two apartment houses.

MANE APPEALANTS
From rental agencies reporting to the Oakland Real Estate board it is estimated that between one hundred and fifty and two hundred inquiries are made daily for rental accommodations.

BEET LAND BOUGHT IN THE DELTA

Big Investment Is Made in the Delta Region by Alameda Sugar Company, Which Has Been Looking for Beet Land

This Insures a Market Right On the Ground for All of This Crop That Land Owners Care to Cultivate, Raise

The Alameda Sugar company purchased during the last week, 1195 acres in the Holland Land company's super-rich river sediment tract at Clarksburg.

With this and other sales the Holland company has now disposed of more than 15,000 acres of its land during the few months it has been selling at a total price of nearly $2,500,000. More farm investors are negotiating for pieces of the land. New buyers are constantly locating in the tract.

The sale to the sugar beet corporation is one of the largest made in this section for some time. There is at present on the Holland tract a fifty-acre field of sugar beets which is deemed by some experts to be a record-breaker. Indications are that the field will yield from twenty-five to thirty tons an acre. Under the sugar company's sliding scale it is possible that the new buyers of this piece may receive $13 a ton.

The location in the tract of the sugar beet company will mean expert sugar growers on the ground, a ready market for sugar beets and the availability of this crop for rotation.

Others with soil knowledge who have invested in the tract are G. H. Wilson, instructor in animal husbandry at the University farm at Davis; H. A. Wadsworth, an instructor in irrigation at that institution, and W. M. Brown, who is connected with the Vegetable Union.

EXTENDS STAGE LINE

R. Miller, who is now operating an auto line in the town of Manteca, Contra Costa county, has obtained from the Railroad Commission a permit to extend his route along the county road to Potter Inn, on Pacheco boulevard.

DELTA AUTO SERVICE

Sidwell Garage Company, Rio Vista, Solano county, has applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to establish an auto passenger service between Rio Vista and Isleton.
